Acknowledgments

First and foremost we want to thank Janet and Dil for their wonderful illustrations. From the very first day they both entered into the spirit of the enterprise with immense energy and enthusiasm, and our Friday mornings will never be so much fun again! The initial idea was to have a few pictograms for the basic building block characters — we never dreamed we would find someone who would take the task by the scruff of the neck and attempt all 219! Although we all helped at times by brainstorming possible interpretations, Janet's ability to think "outside the box" resulted in some truly inspired character pictures and many of her interpretations will never be bettered. Similarly, when Dil brought her gifts as an illustrator to bear on the story pictures, she quickly grasped that these pictures had a very specific job to do and set about developing exactly the right style for them. We will always remember her exclamations of, "Oh, I shall enjoy drawing that," on being presented with yet another bizarre story to illustrate. Her enthusiasm and sense of fun have produced some truly memorable pictures.

Before we sat down to write all the stories we wanted to make sure that using visualization to remember the characters would work for different ages, backgrounds and mindsets. Our search for willing volunteers resulted in a group that covered a range of ages and interests in different parts of the world. Amongst this group was a hard core who were especially helpful, and a big thank you goes out to Larry Fogg, Pat Halliwell, Marion Brumby and Nigel Maggs.

To try and ensure that the introductory text was easy to understand we prevailed upon some very good friends (most of whom have never studied any Chinese) to read it. All of them spent time going over the text and made pertinent and helpful comments and suggestions. Our thanks to Martin Adfield, John & Barbara Eastwood, Geoff & Jill Cory, and Nigel & Toby Brown. (We should add, though, that we take full responsibility for the finished result).

There are people in life who can be guaranteed to listen to your ideas no matter how off-beat they are, and encourage you to “go for it” if they think an idea will work. Debbie and Dave Russell have given unstintingly of their time in this regard. As well as talking over detailed points they have given us their unflagging support throughout. Thank you!

Inevitably there are also times in the writing of any book when you wonder why you ever got started. At times like these everyone should have a friend like Judy Landis. Quite apart from reading parts of the book, Judy has kept us straight on all things American and is our one-woman cheer-leader. Her observations are always eloquent, sound and invariably shot through with common sense and humor. Our love and thanks go to her.

For her professionalism and understanding we’d like to thank Doreen Ng at Tuttle Publishing.

Finally, it can be hard to live with two people who wander around saying things like “that’s the sort of job a ghostly dwarf would do” or “what we need here is two giants from Shanghai.” So our thanks go to Helen for her forbearance in not actually throwing anything at us (at least, not for these particular transgressions).

Introduction

In a dark old castle in medieval times, someone has a bright idea: “If we could find a way of putting some fire on a nail in the wall we could have a lamp in the room.” They get the local giant to dunk twigs in candle-wax to make the first simple lamp.

If you pictured this story as you read it, you have just learned the meaning and pronunciation of a Chinese character! This book uses stories like this as well as pictures to help you to learn and remember 800 Chinese characters. This is enough to recognize about three-quarters of the characters you would come across in an average piece of Chinese text.

The key features of this book are:

- it covers all 800 characters in “HSK Level A” (the first section of the original vocabulary list for the HSK, the Chinese Government’s Language Proficiency Test);
- it uses modern standard Chinese (putonghua or “Mandarin”);
- simplified characters are used with pronunciations given in Hanyu pinyin;
- the characters are introduced in a logical way, gradually building on what you have learned;
- we arrange the characters so that the most common ones are covered early on;
- key information is given for each character, including guidance on how to write it;
- we include example compounds for the characters—in particular we include all the compounds stipulated for the original HSK Level A.

Basic building block characters are introduced at the start of each chapter. We use pictures to help you learn and remember them. “Fire” (火) and “nail”

(丁) are examples of basic building blocks.

Composite characters come next. These are made up of the basic building blocks. For example, the characters for fire (火) and nail (丁) when squashed together make a single new composite character (灯) that means “lamp”. We can picture this as follows:

The basic building blocks “rest directly on the floor” in this picture. A composite character which is made up of two parts sits on the two blocks which support it.

Stories are provided to help you to remember these relationships: for example that the characters for “fire” and “nail” make up the character for “lamp”. The story at the top of this page gives you this information in the first sentence. (The pronunciation is coded into the second sentence: more about pronunciations later).

The stories do more than encode information —they also help you remember it. They are based on tried and tested memory techniques which are widely recognized as being effective and long-lasting.

Everybody likes stories, and they are memorable because, without even trying, we tend to picture the scene in our mind’s eye. The most memorable stories are vivid, enjoyable and/or quirky. So using stories as a memory technique not only makes learning and remembering easier, quicker and more effective than rote learning —it’s also far more fun than just staring at a character and saying to yourself “this character means lamp” over and over again.

Some of our stories are illustrated with pictures, especially in the early part of the book, but as you work through the book you will find that you can visualize the stories without having any pictures —and we will give you simple tips on how to do this most effectively. But in the meantime why not test yourself: do you remember fire + nail = ?

Is this book for you?

You can learn the characters before, during, or after learning other elements of Chinese (such as grammar). It's a bit like learning to ride a bike and learning to fix the bike. You can learn to mend punctures at any point in your training (or not at all!). The point is that an expert cyclist will need to learn the same things as will a complete beginner. In the same way, the usefulness of this book to you does not depend on your knowledge of other elements of Chinese. If you want to learn Chinese characters then this book is the right book for you, whatever stage you are at in learning the Chinese language.

You can use this book if you are a complete beginner and know nothing of Chinese. If you are totally new to characters, we recommend reading Section 3: "Chinese Characters for Beginners" before you start, and as you go along you might choose to ignore some of the comments about how characters are used in practice. But the chances are, if you're reading this, that you've already learned some spoken Chinese and have at least a beginner's knowledge of the language.

Either way, whatever your level of experience, you're likely to find the idea of having to learn hundreds of characters pretty daunting—it's like a dragon lurking in the background which you know you will have to tackle sometime. You may even have tried tackling it already and have given up. But actually, this dragon is nothing to be scared of. It's just a question of taming it with the right tools, rather than trying to defeat it with brute force. Bear with us and we'll show you how. Learning Chinese characters is one of the most interesting and fun parts of learning Chinese, so don't let anyone frighten you off them!

What's different about this book?

Learning Chinese characters by breaking them down into parts is nothing new: since time immemorial students have been doing this in an effort to take some of the slog out of learning. Typically this has involved using verbal rhymes or phrases, but using imagery or visualization (seeing a picture in the mind's eye) is much stronger. Memory techniques using imagery were well known to the Romans; and a Jesuit missionary working in China called Matteo Ricci used such methods to devise a system for Chinese characters four hundred years ago. In modern times, the systematic use of imagery for learning the meanings of characters was pioneered by James Heisig (for Japanese characters, which are inherited from Chinese). So this book forms part of a long tradition in terms of the techniques it uses. But it is the first modern book to set out a consistent set of images for the meanings of Chinese characters. It also goes one step further by extending this technique to cover pronunciations too.

Learning Strategies

Which characters should you learn first?

We said that learning Chinese characters can be treated as a self-contained module that can be studied separately from other aspects of Chinese such as grammar, conversation practice, etc. Because of this you are free to learn the characters in the most sensible and logical order. The order in which we introduce the characters in this book takes into account a number of things. The main three are these:

- we build up systematically, introducing each character before it is needed as a part of other characters;
- we ease you into our system gradually, so there is not too much to learn all at once;
- we introduce the most common characters early on and the rarer ones later.

For all these reasons, it is best to work through the book “in the right order”, at least for the early part of the book (Chapters 1 to 6). That way you’ll be learning the most common characters first, and whenever you meet a composite character you will have already learned its component parts.

From Chapter 7 onwards, there is quite a lot of freedom to pick and choose if you want to. If there is a particular character that you would like to learn right away, then simply find it in the book (using one of the indexes), and learn it there and then. The cross references will tell you where to find any parts of the character that you haven’t come across before, including any basic building blocks that it uses. You can then learn just those parts that you need to make up the character you are interested in.

How much do you need to learn about each character?

You can choose how much information you learn about a character, and when. It is perfectly OK to learn just the meanings of characters, leaving pronunciations until later. Meanings alone may satisfy your interest to begin with, and will enable you to try your hand at translating things like signs and menu items. But to learn Chinese properly you will have to learn the pronunciations too, and this is built into the stories (as you will see shortly). Your eventual aim should be to have an “integrated” view of each character:

- its meaning
- its pronunciation
- its role in words (compounds)

—only then will you fully understand all the nuances of what a character “really” means. But there’s no rule to say that you have to master everything for each character before you move on to the next one.

Working with a textbook

If you are using this book in conjunction with a class textbook, you can take the characters you need for a chapter of that textbook, find them in this book (tracing their component parts using the cross references) and then use our pictures and stories to learn them.

It’s not even necessary for the rest of the class to be using the same method. Learning is an individual and very private process. Nobody else even needs to know how you are learning the characters —everyone is free to use whichever method they choose.

Learning on your own

If you’re working on your own, try working through a few characters a day (maybe 10–15, but it’s up to you). Go at a pace that suits you; it’s much better to do small but regular amounts than to do large chunks at irregular intervals.

It’s a good idea to keep a note of which characters you’ve learned each day, and then to “test yourself ” on the characters you learned the previous day, then on those from three days ago, a week ago, and a month ago. Each time you test yourself you will fix them in your memory for longer. This expanding timescale idea is built in to some of the “test yourself ” panels in the book.

The learning environment

Find a quiet place where you can do your studying without being interrupted all the time. Bus and train journeys to and from work or college are often good times, but different things work for different people. You may find learning easier in the mornings than the evenings, or maybe it's the other way round. Whatever works best for you, try to schedule learning times for yourself accordingly. A routine where you stick to the same time of day is best of all, as your brain will get into the “habit” of being ready to learn at that time.

Take time to visualize each story in your mind's eye (there is more on this later). Write the character on a pad or in a notebook to get the “feel” of its strokes and think about its meaning and pronunciation as you write it.

Don't be too hard on yourself

Don't worry if you forget some of the characters you thought you had learned—this happens to everyone! (We give some “troubleshooting” tips later on). One encouraging fact from the research that has been done on memory is that if you learn something and then forget it, re-learning it is quicker than first time round, and makes it stick for longer.

At times it will seem as if there's a long way to go, and it's important then to remind yourself of how far you've come. At the end of many of the chapters there is a progress chart showing what percentage of written Chinese you have covered so far. Because of the way we have ordered the characters you will find that you make huge strides very quickly. For example, by the end of Chapter 4 you will already have learned 20% of the characters that you would meet in an average piece of Chinese text!

Chinese Characters for Beginners

Read this section if you are new to Chinese characters (but don't bother learning any of the characters you meet —there'll be plenty of time for that later!)

The origins of characters

Chinese characters really aren't as strange and complicated as some people try to make out —in fact they're no more mysterious than musical notation. The first characters started out as pictures:

口 mouth

木 tree

As time went on, they were gradually simplified and abbreviated until many of them now look nothing like the original objects:

车 car

马 horse

Then, when people wanted to describe things which weren't easy to depict, characters were “glued together” to make more complicated composite characters. We have already met the character for “lamp” which is made up of “fire” and “nail”. Another example is the character 好 which means “good” or “to be fond of ” and which combines 女 “woman” with 子 “child”. Nowadays most characters are composites, that is, made up of two or more parts, either side by side or one on top of the other. When characters are joined together like this, they get squashed, so that the overall character is still the same size. For example, the character 日 is narrower when it is part of 时 and shorter and fatter when it is part of 星 (never mind for now what these characters mean!).

So we can divide characters into two types: basic building blocks, the simple characters originally based on drawings, and composite characters that are made up of two or more basic building blocks. We illustrated this idea by regarding a composite character as a building block which sits on the two blocks which support it, whereas basic building blocks sit “directly on the floor.”

But it doesn't stop there. Composite characters can themselves be used as parts of yet other characters. This corresponds to building higher with our building blocks, as in the following picture:

Pronunciation

The main thing you should know is that each character is pronounced in Chinese using one syllable (and it works the other way round too —each syllable of Chinese corresponds to a character).

Each syllable is fairly simple: the basic pattern consists of a consonant plus a vowel (or vowels), with the possible addition of an “n” or “ng” at the end. Some typical syllables are:

wu ta ji bei dao zen ben tang jing

In addition, each syllable is spoken using one of four tones. Tones indicate how the pitch of the voice varies when the syllable is spoken. There are four tones in all, and they are indicated by an accent over one of the vowels in the syllable:

1st tone	(high)	bā
2nd tone	(rising)	bá
3rd tone	(falling then rising)	bǎ
4th tone	(falling)	bà

The system we use for indicating the sounds of Chinese characters using the letters of the alphabet is called Hanyu pinyin (or pinyin for short), and is the system used in China for the benefit of foreigners (e.g. on signs in railway stations). Note that in this system many of the letters are pronounced differently from their sounds in English. There is a short description of pinyin in the Appendix, but to learn how to pronounce Chinese properly, you really need a Chinese speaking teacher (or possibly tapes). This book is about learning the pronunciations for each character (this one is “wei”, that one is “tang”, etc.), rather than teaching you how to say them aloud.

How characters are used in written Chinese

Chinese was traditionally written in columns, top to bottom, starting with the right hand column and working leftwards. But it can be written left to right, like English, and these days you will see both. Technical books in particular are likely to be printed left to right, like English.

Although each character has a meaning, it's not really true that characters are equivalent to “words”. As you have just seen, each character corresponds to a syllable, and in Chinese (as in English) some words are just one syllable while other words consist of two or more syllables joined together. Some syllables (like “if ” and “you” in English) are one-syllable words on their own; other syllables like (“sen” and “tence” in English) link together to form multi-syllable words. Many syllables do both: they're like the English word “light” which is happy on its own, but which also links up to form words like “headlight” or “lighthouse”.

In Chinese writing, the characters are written in a long line, with no extra spaces between words. It is as if English were written like this:

If you can understand this sentence you can read Chinese too.

Compounds

A compound in Chinese is a word made up from two or more characters. That is, a compound is a multi-syllable word. If two characters are paired together to form a compound, they simply appear one after the other in a sentence, but are treated as a single word like “Chi” and “nese” above. Most compounds have only two characters. The flavor of a character often comes out in how it combines with other characters to make compounds, and so for many characters we give examples of compounds that they appear in.

Compounds and Composites

So what's the difference between pairing two characters to get a compound, and combining two characters to get a composite character?

A compound:

大	人		大人
dà	rén	gives	dàrén
big	person		adult

A composite character:

女	也		她
nǚ	yě	gives	tā
woman	also		she

Two characters in a compound are simply written one after the other, full sized, and the resulting word has a pronunciation which has two syllables — in fact it is simply the pronunciations of the two characters one after the other. Often (but not always!) you’ll be able to guess the meaning of the word from the meanings of its individual characters.

On the other hand, when two characters are combined to get a new composite character (the process we saw with “fire” + “nail” = “lamp”), they are squashed or distorted so that the new character fits into a square the same size as each of the original two. The meaning of the new character may be related to the meaning of its two parts, but it frequently appears to have no connection with them at all! Finally, the new character will also have a single syllable as its pronunciation (so that if it is a word, it is a one-syllable word) and this pronunciation may, or may not, come from one of its parts.

Writing characters

Being able to read Chinese characters is satisfying, but it’s also rewarding to be able to write them (and this is a great way to impress people who aren’t learning the language!) We’ll show you how to write each character, starting with basic instructions in Chapter 1. Don’t worry if you’re not “good at drawing” —you don’t need to be. Characters these days are much more likely to be written using a ball-point pen than a calligraphy brush.

As well as being fun, writing the characters yourself is a very good way of getting to know them, and we recommend that you practice writing the characters as you learn them. You’ll be learning the oldest writing system in the world which is still in use today.

You’ve seen that characters are often made up of two or more parts (for example 她 is made up of 女 and 也). On a more fundamental level though, each character is made up of strokes, where each stroke is made with a single, continuous motion of the pen: a straight line, a curve, a bent line, a line with a hook, or a dot. Each character consists of a set number of strokes, and there is a traditional, fixed order in which these strokes should be drawn. The stroke-order diagrams given with each character entry (in the line of small boxes) show you how to draw the strokes in the right order. There are also some general rules for drawing characters, which we will mention as we go along.

You might think that it doesn't really matter how the strokes are written as long as the end result looks the same. To some extent this is true, but there are some good reasons for knowing the "proper" way to write the characters. Firstly, it helps you to count strokes properly for a character which you haven't seen before (and you'll need to be able to do this to look it up in a dictionary). Secondly, it will make your characters "look right", and also help you to read other people's hand-written characters later on. In the long run it's better to learn the correct method from the start because, like with so many other things, once you get into "bad" habits it can be very hard to break them!

Simplified and traditional characters

In the middle of the 20th century, many characters were given simplified forms. This was to help increase literacy in China, and the simplified characters are definitely much easier to learn and use. This book uses these modern simplified characters. However, many Chinese communities around the world still use traditional characters rather than simplified ones, and of course many old documents and inscriptions were written using the traditional forms too. For this reason, if there is a traditional form of a character we give it as part of the entry for that character so that you can see what it looks like.

Types of Chinese

This book uses modern standard ("Mandarin") Chinese. The characters mean the same in other varieties of Chinese, for example Cantonese, but they will be pronounced completely differently (and Cantonese speakers typically use traditional characters). This means that even if two Chinese people can't understand one another when they are talking, they can usually write to each other quite happily!

Radicals

Finally, you may have heard of “radicals” (which some books call “keys” or “significs”), so we’ll quickly explain what they are. Look at the following characters:

Character:	她	好	妈	姓	姐
Meaning:	she	good	mum	surname	older sister

They all have the same part on the left-hand side, 女, which means “woman”. This part gives a clue to the meaning of the character, and is called the “radical”. As you can see, most of these five characters have something to do with the idea of “woman”. But it’s not a totally reliable system and also, to make life complicated, the radical in a character is not always the left-hand part. Radicals have been used for centuries to group characters together in dictionaries, and they can still be helpful if you want to find a character in a dictionary when you don’t know its pronunciation.

There is more on radicals in Chapter 24, and we will introduce some other concepts (such as a “phonetic series”) as we go along. But that’s all you need for now to get started.

User Guide

Essential reading before starting Chapter 1!

Here we introduce the methods we will be using in this book, and in particular how the stories and pictures work. We do this using some of the characters from Chapter 1 (which you may already know). Firstly we'll look at how to learn and remember the meanings of characters, and then we'll look at learning the pronunciations.

Learning the meanings of basic building blocks

Some characters are so simple that you hardly need any help to remember them; for example:

— one 二 two 三 three

Apart from some symbolic characters like these, most simple characters started off as pictures. For example:

口 mouth

There are no circles in Chinese characters, so the picture of a round mouth becomes a small square. We will supply a character picture like the one shown on the right for each of the simple characters which act as basic building blocks.

So far, so good. But not all characters are recognizable today as the original object they represented, or indeed still refer to the same thing as the original picture. Look at this one:

几 several

The character 几 was originally a picture of a small stool, but the character picture we have supplied is different. A drawing of a stool would remind you that 几 meant “stool” in ancient times, but not that it now means “several”. It is better to see (and hence later recall) a picture of several 几-like objects. Seeing this picture is much more powerful, in terms of laying down a long term memory, than reading a written description.

How to use character pictures

The way to use these character pictures is as follows:

- firstly look at the picture for a short while, and see how the character’s shape is used in the picture;
- then look at the character on its own, and while you are doing this, see if you can mentally superimpose the picture over the character, remembering which parts of the character correspond to which parts of the picture.

This is a good way of making sure that, when you see the character again later on, the picture (and hence the meaning) will pop into your head.

Here are two more examples:

For 不 we have used the traditional picture of a bird flying up to the ceiling and not being able to escape. With 木 we are back to a straightforward drawing of an object. In modern Chinese 木 is not a hugely common character on its own, but you do need to know its meaning as it appears as a part of many composite characters (for example, the next two we’ll meet).

But before we get on to those, how are you doing so far? Can you remember what each of these characters means?

口 木 不 几

If you have a problem with any of them, go back to the character picture and study it again, and then superimpose it over the character in your mind's eye as explained above.

The meanings of composite characters

Our first composite character is made up of two basic building blocks:

机 machine

As you can see this character is made up of the two characters “tree” and “several” squashed together. To learn the meaning of this composite character, we relate it to the meanings of its two parts, by creating an equation:

tree 木 + several 几 = machine 机

Since most Chinese characters are composite, we will have many equations like this. Other examples are:

thread 纟 + work 工 = red 红

now 今 + heart 心 = to study 念

You can see that these equations don't really make any logical sense! However, if you can learn these equations then you can remember composite characters. For example, if you see a character which has two parts, and you recognize these simpler parts to be “thread” and “work”, then you will know from the equation that the overall character means “red”.

Stories and story pictures

So how do you learn these equations? This is where the stories come in. The stories are extremely short, often just a sentence, and the important thing is not just to read them but to really visualize them. To help with many of the early stories, we have illustrated them with story pictures.

Here is our first story, which will help you learn the equation

“tree 木 + several 几 = machine 机”:

It took several trees to provide enough wood to make the parts for the huge machine.

How to use stories and story pictures

Have a good look at the story picture above: see how the “several trees” have indeed been felled to make the large “machine” that is taking shape. What type of trees are being used? What is the machine for? By asking yourself questions about the setting you’re paying attention to the story picture and you will then remember it, so that when you see the character in future, the parts “tree” plus “several” will trigger the story in your mind, which will in turn trigger the word “machine”.

After a while we give you stories without story pictures, but the same process applies. Read the story and visualize at least as much detail as there would be in a story picture. By doing so you will be paying attention to these details, which is what will fix the story in your memory.

You will notice that in the story for “machine” the three words from the equation are printed in bold. This is to remind you to pay particular attention to these words when creating the picture in your mind’s eye.

Notice that in this example the equation is “tree 木 + several 几 = machine 机” and yet the story uses the words “tree” and “several” in the other order. We write the equation as “tree + several” because the character 机 has “tree” on the left and “several” on the right; but for the story the two parts are all we need — the order doesn’t matter. So the stories combine the two words in the order that is most natural. In this case “several trees” is more natural than “a tree and several (of something else)”. We are able to do this because it is very rare for A + B to form one character and B + A to form another one (we will point this out on the few occasions when it does occur).

Story pictures and character pictures

Notice that the story picture for “machine” is a completely different type of picture from the character pictures we have for basic building blocks. The story picture which accompanies the “tree 木 + several 几 = machine 机” story links the three ideas “tree”, “several” and “machine”, without any reference to the shape or appearance of the characters for “tree” and “several”.

Character pictures, on the other hand, are based around a drawing of the character itself, and help you to remember the meaning of each basic building block directly from its shape.

More about stories

Another example will illustrate some further points about the stories:

杯 cup

tree 木 + not 不 = cup 杯

“I said not the tree with the cup tied to it!” cried the horrified lumberjack to his apprentice.

Again, look at the scene. A lumberjack and his apprentice are in the forest and the apprentice is about to attack a particular tree when he is stopped in the nick of time by the lumberjack. (Why is the lumberjack horrified? What is the cup for? — Well, we shall see shortly).

Again, it is only the meaning you need to remember. Don't try to remember the whole story verbatim. Use the story as a bridge to get you to the meaning.

We should also stress that this story is simply an aid to remembering that the character 杯 means “cup”; the story does not represent the historical reason why 杯 has come to mean “cup”. The stories are simply our way of helping you to familiarize yourself with the characters and to remember them in a simple and effective way. Often the stories will be humorous, a bit strange or bizarre, or may even seem silly, but that is just what’s needed to make them stick in your memory.

If you really picture the scenes in your mind’s eye, that is all the work you need to do, and the story will stick. Brute force repetition is not needed. Test it out, can you remember:

tree + several =?

tree + not =?

At this stage it may seem quicker to simply learn the equations off by rote, but it will be a different matter when you have covered dozens of equations and are trying to remember them without mixing them up. Using pictures (and later on, making your own vivid pictures in your mind’s eye) makes it much easier to remember them all, even though on the face of it you are trying to remember “extra” information. Think about how easily you remember the basic story of a movie despite the background “richness” of hundreds of details, and compare this with how hard it is to remember isolated “bald” facts such as addresses or lists.

Two strategies for learning meanings

So we have two strategies for learning the meanings of characters:

- If the character is a basic building block, learn it from the character picture.
- If the character is composite (i.e. made up of simpler parts), remember it from the story (and story picture if there is one).

Learning the pronunciations of characters

To help you remember the pronunciations of characters, we extend the stories. The composite characters already have a story, so we’ll start with them.

Pronunciations of composite characters

We simply extend the story with another sentence, whose purpose is to help you remember the pronunciation of the character. The pronunciation parts of stories are always in italics and are separated from the meaning parts of stories with a dividing line “/”. (If you are interested only in the meanings of characters at this stage, then you can just ignore the parts of stories after the dividing line — although reading them will often help the stories to stick in your mind). Here are two examples:

机 machine jī

It took several trees to provide enough wood to make the parts for the huge machine. / When it was finished they had to get the giant to bring his jeep to deliver it.

杯 cup bēi

Notice that we have extended the story pictures as well as extending the stories.

Soundwords

We call “jeep” and “bacon” soundwords. They indicate the (approximate) pronunciations of the characters: the character 机 is pronounced somewhat like the “jee” in “jeep” and the character 杯 is pronounced like the “ba” in “bacon”. Now there are several points to note immediately about soundwords:

- It is the first syllable only of the soundword which corresponds to the Chinese syllable; in fact we only go as far as the first vowel sound, unless it is followed by an “n” or “ng” sound.
- It is the sound of the English soundword which is important, not its English spelling.
- The sound is only approximate. The soundword “jeep” reminds us of the Chinese syllable ji (and not for example tang or bei); it does not mean that the Chinese syllable ji is pronounced exactly like the “jee” in “jeep”.

Here are some examples of soundwords and their corresponding Chinese syllables:

Soundword

bored

mouse

Tiger

bacon

powder

Soundword

mandolin

bandit

Chinese Syllable

Archetypes to represent tones

You may have wondered why a giant has wandered into each of the two stories above. He is there to indicate the tone! Four archetypes appear in the pronunciation parts of the stories, and represent the four tones of Chinese as follows:

Giant	1st tone	(high)	bā
Fairy	2nd tone	(rising)	bá
Teddy	3rd tone	(falling then rising)	bǎ
Dwarf	4th tone	(falling)	bà

So the two stories above tell you that the characters for “machine” and “cup” have 1st tone (because a giant features in each story). We have chosen these four archetypes because they are universal, familiar, timeless and distinct. If you have really pictured a story in your mind’s eye, you will find that you remember which archetype featured in it.

We’ve said that the stories which work best for learning characters are off-beat and humorous ones, and the four archetypes we have chosen lend themselves to this. There is nothing childish about using such powerful images; they are just what you need to bypass the verbal, logical parts of your brain and plant long-lasting links in your non-verbal memory.

Now, do you remember the pronunciations of 机 and 杯?

Pronunciations of basic building blocks

Finally, what about the pronunciations of characters which are basic building blocks? For these, there is no story to extend, as there was for composite characters. Also, a story involving “mouth” by itself will tend to get mixed up with all the other stories involving “mouth”.

Our solution to this is to invent a dummy object, the same one for all basic building blocks, and we have chosen the most basic piece of technology there is: a wheel. Thus the story to think of when you want to remember the pronunciation of “mouth” itself is the story involving “mouth + wheel”.

The following examples show how this works.

口 mouth kǒu

/ A large wheel stands across the mouth of the cold, dark cave, but Teddy simply puts on his duffel coat and hops between the spokes to get inside.

几 several jǐ

/ There are several wheels to deliver so Teddy offers to load them onto his jeep. (See him careering off down the road scattering wheels in all directions every time he hits a bump!)

You will see that 几 is pronounced “jǐ”, just like 机. But this time it is Teddy in the jeep, not the giant, so that we know that “several” is pronounced jǐ with the third tone, not jī with the first tone.

Since wheel stories are about pronunciations, they are printed in italics.

Summary

To sum up, the strategy, when you see a character you have learned and want to remember its meaning and pronunciation, is as follows:

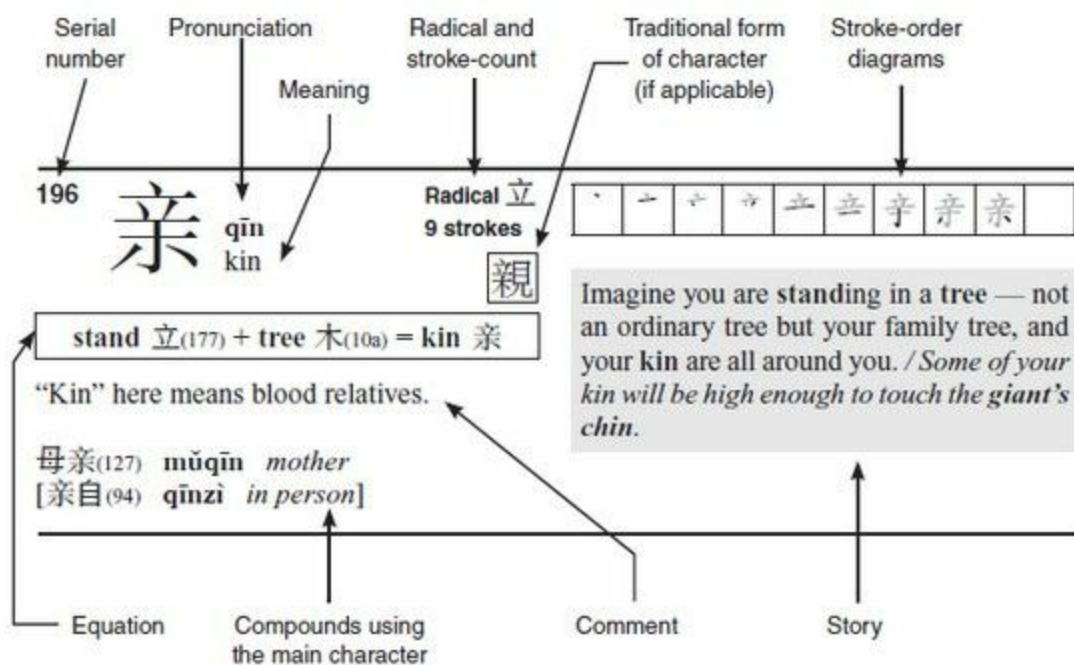

- If it is a basic building block, remember the meaning from its character picture, and then think of the “wheel” story to get the pronunciation.
- If it is a composite character (i.e. made up of simpler parts), identify the parts and then use these to remember the story: the first part of the story gives you the meaning, and the second part gives you the pronunciation.

But rest assured that the whole process is much quicker to carry out than it is to describe!

As with any new skill, such as learning to drive, things will become automatic after a while. If you study Chinese for any length of time, you will find that you become familiar with many characters and start to read them “at a glance”. When that happens, the corresponding stories presented in this book will become superfluous: like scaffolding for a building, they will have served their purpose once the building is complete. Until that time, however, the stories provide a systematic framework which can help you to hold the myriad of characters in place in your mind without mixing them up. And even much later on, when you find you have temporarily forgotten a character, you can use the parts of the character to recreate the story that ties them together, and hence “recover” the meaning and pronunciation of the character. The stories will act like a long-lasting index to the store of characters in your memory.

Key to Character Entries

See the User Guide for an explanation of the equations and stories.

Serial numbers printed in black (such as 278) refer to the original HSK Level A characters. Serial numbers printed in gray (such as 278a) refer to other characters and to non-character fragments — these are included if they are needed as parts of HSK Level A characters. Pronunciations are printed in black if they are in HSK Level A, and in gray otherwise. Compounds which are not in the HSK Level A list are given in brackets [].

Key to icons:

Pouring rain story (see Character 15)	Wild West story (see Character 54)	Spaceship story (see Character 54)	Film set story (see Character 75)

conventions:

Archetypes represent tones (see User Guide):

Giant = 1, Fairy = 2, Teddy = 3, Dwarf = 4, Robot = neutral

Double archetype: i on-glide (see Character 38).

Ghostly archetype: u on-glide (see Character 59).

Chapter 1

So let's get started. We'll be taking it very gently to begin with, so there'll be rather fewer characters per chapter in the first few chapters than in the book as a whole.

Before we start, you did read the User Guide, didn't you? If not, go and read it now! Otherwise quite a lot of what follows won't make sense.

You've already seen four character pictures in the User Guide. The remaining ones you'll need for this chapter are given below. The first thing is to study the character pictures on this page, to learn the meaning of these basic building blocks. When you have them fixed in your mind, turn the page and start working your way through the character entries that follow. Take your time and make sure you visualize each story (the story pictures will help with this). Finally, at the end of the chapter, you can test yourself on what you have learned.

 也 also	 十 ten
 人 person	 力 power
 女 woman	 日 sun

After introducing the basic building blocks and their meanings, we are now ready for the main entries for the characters in Chapter 1. For the basic building blocks we give a wheel story (for the pronunciation), and for composite characters we give the equation and two-part story.

For all characters we give the stroke order diagrams in the row of small boxes. To the left of these boxes, we give the radical for the character and its stroke-count (i.e. the total number of strokes needed to write the character).

Whenever we want to explain a general point, give you some encouragement, or tell you something interesting about the Chinese language, we will write in areas outside the character entries and across the full width of the page — exactly like we have here!

1 一 yī (yí; yì) one

1 stroke

This is the simplest character there is, and it's obviously a basic building block. as such it has a “wheel” story to help you remember the pronunciation. The soundword is “easy” so the pronunciation is “ee” (the pinyin spelling is “yī” but it is pronounced “ee”), and the giant in the story tells you it is pronounced using the first tone.

But, wouldn't you know it, for the very first character we have a complication with regard to the pronunciation! essentially, the pronunciation is yī (1st tone), but the complication is that in practice the tone for this character varies, depending on the tone of the syllable which follows it. When it is followed by a 4th tone, it is pronounced yí (2nd tone), and when followed by all other tones it is pronounced yì (4th tone). When it is on its own, or in a string of numbers, it reverts to yī (1st tone). This sort of change only happens for one other character in this book, which we shall meet shortly.

For this first character a stroke order diagram seems rather superfluous! Simply write the stroke in a left to right direction. The large character is printed in a typical printed typeface. Don't worry about the little lump at the right-hand end of the stroke: this is like a “serif ” (the small horizontal line you might find at the bottom of letters like “h” in some typefaces in english) and can be ignored. The stroke order diagrams in the boxes show you what a hand-drawn character will look like.

/ One of the huge wheels of the truck was stuck fast in the thick mud and the unicorn had blunted his horn trying to shift it. They called in the giant who took one look at it and said, “This will be easy.”

The word “one” isn’t a very vivid word to use in stories where we need this character (it will be hard to distinguish a picture of “one tree” from simply “a tree”), so when “one” appears in an equation we will always use a unicorn in the story.

We shall also do this for some other numbers: for example a biplane will substitute for “two”, a starfish for “five”, an octopus for “eight”. For other numbers (e.g. “four”, “six”) we won’t need to do this as they won’t appear as parts of composite characters.

2 — èr two

Radical 二
2 strokes

one — (1) + one — (1) = two 二

This is a composite character, made up of “one” and “one”. hence there is an equation, and the story illustrates it. The second half of the story, separated by a slash “/”, gives you the pronunciation. The soundword is “earth” and there is a dwarf in the story, so the pronunciation is èr.

As mentioned above, a biplane will substitute for “two” in future stories.

To write this character, write the top stroke before the bottom stroke, writing each stroke left to right. Note that the bottom stroke is slightly longer than the top one.

There is another character for “two” (Character 222), which we’ll meet later.

The zoo had one unicorn so bought another unicorn to get a breeding pair. however they failed to check the gender of the new one so ended up with two of the same sex! / The dwarf accountant is furious because the new unicorn had cost the earth.

3 三 sān three

Radical 一
3 strokes

one 一 (1) + two 二 (2) = three 三

A composite character, made up of “one” and “two”. One and two are represented by the unicorn and the biplane. Take a look at the picture to fix the story in your memory: the unicorn has indeed made a nice three-point landing, but he relaxed too soon!

The soundword is “sand”. remember that with soundwords you go as far as the first vowel sound, and then see if there is an “n” or “ng” sound following it. In this case there is, so the pronunciation is sān, not sā.

When writing this character note that the second stroke is slightly shorter than the first, and the third is slightly longer.

Clearly you don’t really need stories to remember the meanings of the characters 一, 二 and 三. The stories are given to help you remember the pronunciations and to get you used to how the pictures and stories work for both basic and composite characters.

The unicorn lands his biplane on the beach perfectly so that all three tires touch down simultaneously. / Unfortunately he fails to stop before he hits the giant's sandcastle!

4 十 shí ten

Radical 十
2 strokes

This character means “ten” (just as an X in roman numerals means “ten”), but also represents a cross shape, such as a crossroads. Just as a unicorn substitutes for “one” in the stories, we will use a cross or crossroads as a substitute for “ten”.

The soundword is the fairy’s “cheroot” so the pronunciation is shí. (Not ché— it is the sound of the soundword, not its english spelling, that is important). There is more about the soundword system in the appendix.

This character exemplifies another rule for writing characters: when two lines cross, a horizontal line is drawn before a vertical one.

/ At the fairground, in one game you have to roll a wheel and knock down ten skittles laid out in the shape of a cross. The fairy, confident of not having to pay out, sits smoking a cheroot.

5  kǒu mouth

Radical
3 strokes

This character means a person's mouth, but also more generally the mouth of a cave or river, an entrance or exit of a building, etc. We will often use the mouth of a cave to represent it in stories.

This character is written, not with four strokes, but with three! For the second stroke, draw the top of the square from left to right, and continue down the right-hand side of the square, without taking your pen off the paper.

simply puts on his duffel coat and hops between the spokes to get inside.

6 日 rì sun

Radical 日
4 strokes

This character means “sun”, but also “day”, and “Japan”.

/ The dwarf has built a sun -powered wheel, and invites all his relations to come and admire it.

We just said that 日 (Character 6) means “sun” (originally it was a picture of a round sun with a dot in the middle), but it also has several derived meanings. It can mean “day”, and it’s also used as an abbreviation for Japan, the “land of the rising sun”. But whenever a character has several meanings like this, we will stick to a single meaning for all stories where that character appears. This single meaning is the one given in the “headline” of the character entry. So we will always use the word “sun” in stories for characters containing 日.

7 几 jǐ (jī) several Radical 几

2 strokes

幾

As well as meaning “several”, this character also means “how many?” (when you are asking about small numbers, say up to ten).

几 can also be pronounced jǐ, and it then has a different meaning. This extra pronunciation and meaning is included in HSK Level B, but not in Level a. Whenever a character has another meaning and pronunciation like this, we will let you know the other pronunciation so that you can look it up in a dictionary if you are interested. These extra pronunciations will be printed in gray and will be in brackets.

You will also notice that this character has a traditional form (in a box below the stroke-count) — you can ignore these traditional forms for the time being if you like; we will talk about them in Chapter 27.

When drawing this character, notice that it only has two strokes.

8 也 yě also

Radical
3 strokes

This character is fun to draw once you get the hang of it, but watch the stroke order!

一	也

/ “This is also a wheel,” Teddy claims, holding up a triangular object. “I got it from a yeti yesterday!”

Are you remembering to visualize the stories when you read them? Sometimes it can help if you close your eyes when you picture the scene. Don’t forget that you can add in any small details that help make the scene more vivid as long as they don’t distract you from remembering the meaning.

9 不 bù (bú) not

Radical 一
4 strokes

This is the only other character (apart from 一, Character 1) which changes tone depending on the sound which follows it. It is generally pronounced bù (4th tone), but this changes to bú (2nd tone) when followed by another 4th tone character.

When you write 不 note that the third (vertical) stroke hangs from the second stroke, so 不 is not symmetrical: that is, it is not like the bottom half of 木 (which follows).

一	丿	㇏	不
---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--

10a 木 mù tree

This character is printed in gray because it is not in the HSK Level a set of characters. So you can skip its pronunciation if you want to, but you do need to know its meaning, as it appears as a part of many composite characters (for example, the next two). We’ve given the pronunciation in gray, so you can look the character up in a dictionary if you want to.

We’ve given 木 the serial number 10a, because we are reserving the numbers 1 to 800 for the 800 HSK Level a characters covered in this book. You can easily find such characters: for example 10a appears just before Character 10. We’ve called it 10a and not 9a, because it is introduced because of, and hence belongs with, Character 10.

The first two strokes are like “ten” (Character 4), so the horizontal stroke is written before the vertical one. The stroke order also illustrates another general principle: you often draw a central part before drawing in small symmetrical side-pieces.

10 机 jī machine

Radical 木
6 strokes

機

tree 木 (10a) + several 几 (7) = machine 机

This character is another composite character, made up of two basic building blocks, so it has an equation. The numbers in brackets refer to the building block entries.

To draw it, simply draw one part and then the other. remember to draw each part half as wide as normal, so that the complete character fits into the same size square.

一 十 才 木 机 机 机 机 机

It took several trees to provide enough wood to make the parts for the huge machine. / When it was finished they had to get the giant to bring his jeep to deliver it. [Remember this from the User Guide?]

11 杯 bēi cup

Radical 木
8 strokes

tree 木 (10a) + not 不 (9) = cup 杯

You'll notice that writing a composite character usually involves simply writing the building blocks, and the building blocks you need will always have been covered earlier in the book. In cases where this does not apply, we will draw attention to it — an example is coming up in the next chapter (24a).

一	十	才	木	本	材	杯
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--

12 人 rén person

Radical 人
2 strokes

“Person” is one of the few characters where we will not simply use the bare meaning, but a particular interpretation of it. In order to make our stories more vivid, it is best to think of a particular person, real or fictional, who you can easily imagine in various situations. We will call this person “harry” — you can think of harry Truman, harry houdini, harry potter, or any other person (called harry or not — it could be James Bond for example) who you can easily imagine in various situations. When we mention harry in a story, always picture this same person. at the moment all the stories have pictures with them, but later on we’ll be getting you to visualize the stories yourself, and if you make objects and people specific and particular it will help to make the images you create as memorable as possible.

/ Harry was chasing the tractor wheel, as fast as he could before it flattened the children. Luckily the fairy saw what was happening, and wrote a message “Run!” in the sky with her wand, so that the children scattered just in time.

The second stroke starts just below the top of the first stroke, although in some typefaces the character looks symmetrical. There is a very similar character, “enter” (see 219a), which we’ll meet much later in the book. When “person” is used as the left-hand side of a character it is compressed into the form 亻 (see 13a below).

13a 亻 person

ノ	亻
---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

When “person” (Character 12) is used as the left-hand side of a composite character it is compressed into this form.

13 他 tā he

Radical 亻
5 strokes

person 亻 (13a) + also 也 (8) = he 他

As explained, your chosen particular person is substituting for the abstract “person” here. We’re calling this person “harry” as we don’t know who you’ve chosen — luckily this doesn’t stop us drawing him as he’s in a gorilla costume!

人	个	他
---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--

At the fancy dress party, Harry also came as a gorilla, but (unlike the others) he had a proper costume. / The giant arrived dressed as Tarzan.

14 力 lì power

Radical 力
2 strokes

Make sure you practice writing this with the correct stroke order.

力
---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

/ There was a power surge to the tram’s wheel and it hurtled towards the dwarf who was crossing the road — he had to leap out of the way quickly before he was flattened (and he shouted angrily at the driver).

15 女 nǚ woman

Radical 女
3 strokes

You might like to think of a particular woman when you visualize the stories with “woman” throughout the book, just as we have a particular “person” (who we’re calling “harry”). however “woman” appears as a part of far fewer characters than does “person”.

The “ū” sound here is like the “ū” in German or the “u” in the French word “tu”. Say “oo” and then, keeping your lips in the same position, try and say “ee”. Since we don’t have this sound in english, we just use an “oo” sound but have pouring rain in the pronunciation part of the story to indicate that it is really “ū” (you can think of the two dots above the “u” being rain drops). The rain-cloud icon will remind you to visualize the rain in the story. We will have more to say about these “ū” pronunciations later.

When drawing 女 watch the stroke order: the horizontal stroke is drawn last.

☔ / It is pouring with rain outside, so instead of going jogging the woman works out by running in a large treadmill wheel. Teddy uses the power it generates to cook his noodles!

16 她 tā she

Radical 女
6 strokes

woman 女 (15) + also 也 (8) = she 她

The characters for “he” and “she” (Characters 13 and 16) are both pronounced tā, and so in spoken Chinese only the context makes clear which is meant. Obviously it is always clear in written Chinese.

一 二 三 四 五 六 七 八 九 十 十一 十二 十三 十四 十五 十六 十七 十八 十九 二十

At the fancy dress party, a woman also came as a gorilla! “What’s she doing, dressed as a gorilla? / If she’d come as Jane she could have danced with the giant dressed as Tarzan.”

So that was the first chapter! The 16 characters you have learned make up approximately 7% of written Chinese. as we go through the book, we will provide some charts like the one on the right to show the progress being made. By the end of the book you will have completed the whole of the HSK Level a set of characters, which as we have said covers 77% of written Chinese. (These numbers are averages taken from huge samples compiled on the internet — the actual numbers will vary from one piece of text to another of course).

To begin with there will be a fair number of basic building blocks, but as we go on, composite characters will predominate more and more. already, with the basic building blocks we have met, we could build the characters 什, 休, 早, 但, 查 and 唱, which are all in Level a (as well as plenty of other characters in later HSK levels). But let’s not be in too much of a rush to introduce every possible character we can form from the available building blocks just yet. as well as building characters up systematically, we also want to concentrate on introducing the most frequently used characters first.

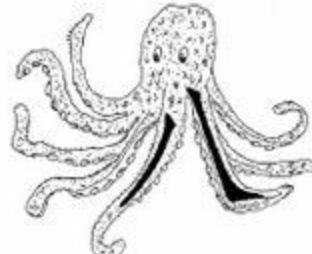

Time to see if you remembered the characters in Chapter 1! Test yourself by looking at the following block of characters — do you remember the meaning of each one? how about the pronunciations? The numbers next to the characters will let you look up any characters you’ve forgotten.

Test yourself: 十 (4) 口 (5) 不 (9) 机 (10) 人 (12) 他 (13) 女 (15)
力 (14) 几 (7) 她 (16) 日 (6) 三 (3) 也 (8) 杯 (11)

Don’t worry if you don’t remember all of them! If the problem is a character picture, make sure you mentally superimposed the picture over the character (as described in the User Guide). It’s all too easy just to glance at a picture and move on! If the problem is a story, make sure you visualize it by having a good look at the story picture — a good idea is to imagine yourself actually being there. Use your senses — can you hear any background noises? Can you smell anything?

Chapter 2

This chapter follows the same pattern as Chapter 1. On this first page there are some new basic building blocks. Learn their meanings using the character pictures given. The “wheel stories” (for remembering their pronunciations) are in the main part of the chapter, along with some composite characters which use these basic building blocks.

子 child 	丨 stick
人 tent 	八 eight
儿 boy 	丶 a drop
勹 wrap 	口 enclosed

17 子 zi child

Radical 子
3 strokes

Very occasionally characters have a “neutral” tone, and this is represented by a fifth archetype, a robot. There are only a few robot stories in this book.

The original meaning of this character was “child”, but it is nowadays more often seen as a noun suffix (that is, attached to a noun — and not implying that the noun is small).

了	子
---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

/ (This story is set in the future) Imagine a small child playing at home, rolling wheels about on the floor. The robot babysitter emits a “zzz” sound, as though asleep, and then pretends to wake up with a start each time a wheel crashes into him.

18 好 hǎo (hào) good

Radical 女
6 strokes

woman 女 (15) + child 子 (17) = good 好

In this story and the previous one, we have added phrases in brackets. These are non-essential parts of the story we sometimes add in, to explain and expand it. They are background detail to help you visualize the scene, and they’re only a means to an end. (The end is to remember the scene and hence remember the words in bold).

The gray pronunciation means that 好 can also be pronounced hào in HSK Level B, with a different meaning not covered in HSK Level a (see also Character 7).

丨	𠂇	女	如	好	好
---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--

(At an art gallery) “a woman with a child represents good,” the curator said (indicating a particularly dull picture). / But nobody was listening, because they were all watching the Teddy, who was building a house of cards.

19a 丨 stick

丨
---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

This is a fragment. Fragments are only ever parts of characters; they never appear on their own as characters, and so they do not have pronunciations. Fragments are always printed in gray. We only give them meanings so that we can use them in equations and stories.

A vertical stroke occurs in many characters of course, but we will not treat every vertical stroke as a “stick”. For example, it seems more natural to treat 十 “ten” as a basic building block, rather than trying to decompose it into “one” plus “stick”. Instead, we reserve “stick” for situations where it stands on its own (as in Character 19 below).

19b 人 “tent”

This fragment is found at the top of some characters. It has a symmetrical shape, unlike “person” (12) and “enter” (219a).

The meaning is given in quotes to indicate that the name “tent” is one we have invented for this fragment.

To draw it, draw each stroke downwards (rather than drawing a single stroke in an “up and over” movement).

19 个 gè number of items

Radical 人
3 strokes

個

tent 人 (19b) + stick 丨 (19a) = number of items 个

Notice that in this character the two building blocks are one above the other, rather than being side by side.

This is a measure word. In english we don’t say “two breads”; we say “two loaves of bread” or “two slices of bread”. Words such as “slice” are called measure words, and all nouns in Chinese have to use measure words for counting. There are dozens of measure words for different types of things (see Character 188 for an example), but 个 is an all-purpose measure word which can be used with most nouns.

He tried to keep the tent up with a stick but it fell down, so he tried a number of items he had lying around. / The dwarf got so fed up with the tent falling on him that he went and got an iron girder to make sure it didn't happen again!

20 八 bā eight

Radical 八
2 strokes

In contrast to “person” and “tent”, the two strokes here don't meet. The second stroke is slightly longer than the first. Both strokes are written downwards.

As with the unicorn standing in for “one”, the character for “eight” is represented by an octopus in stories involving “eight”.

/ The octopus strapped wheels to all his eight tentacles so he could roller-skate around delivering drinks for the giant barman.

21 儿 ér (r) boy

Radical 儿
2 strokes

兒

This character means “boy”, “son” or “child”. It is also used as a suffix, and it is then pronounced as an “r” sound; for example the word 好儿 is pronounced hǎor instead of hǎo’ér (see the notes on combining characters, at the end of this chapter).

Notice the hook on the second stroke, which helps to distinguish this character from the previous one.

丿	儿
---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

/ The boy ’s bicycle wheels were filthy. “How on earth did you get them so dirty?” said the fairy, “I only cleaned them this morning!” (You might think she’s a pretty hopeless fairy if she can’t keep them clean by magic!)

Test yourself: 子 (17) 日 (6) 一 (1) 十 (4) 八 (20) 机 (10) 二 (2)
好 (18) 也 (8) 杯 (11) 她 (16) 个 (19) 女 (15) 不 (9)

22a ㇏ a drop

A small drop that can be written in various directions in different characters (as you will see shortly). It is represented by a drop of liquid in the stories.

22 白 bái white

Radical 白
5 strokes

a drop 丶 (22a) + sun 日 (6) = white 白

In this character the drop is written downwards and to the left.

“Sun-drop will make your white clothes whiter.” / The fairy said, “Buy some today!”

As a reminder, we’d like to check that you are still visualizing these stories by taking a good look at each of the story pictures. The stories and story pictures are only a means to an end — the end is to remember the meaning and pronunciation of the character. Because of this, we find that some people shortcut the process and start to learn the equations and pronunciations off by rote. Of course, you are perfectly at liberty to do this if you choose, and you will still find the structure of the book useful, in that everything is introduced in a helpful order and so on. however, you will be missing a really helpful technique which will save you untold hours in the long run. Some of the people we tested the stories on started out saying, “I’m not a visual person,” but most of them found that when they gave it a try they did remember the stories after all. So give it a try — what do you have to lose?

23a ㇏ wrap

丿	㇏
---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

23b 勺 sháo ladle

wrap ㇏ (23a) + a drop 丶 (22a) = ladle 勺

So far, composite characters have been easy to split left-right or top-bottom into two parts, but in this character “wrap” encloses the drop (or, appropriately, “wraps” around it).

This composite character is not in HSK Level a (and is therefore printed in gray), so no pronunciation part of the story is needed.

We will meet “wrap” and “ladle” again later, but they have been introduced here in order to allow you to meet the next character, which is the most common character in Chinese.

丿	㇏	勺
---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

When he had wrapped it up he put a drop of perfume on the package even though there was only a ladle inside. / [No pronunciation needed]

23 的 de (dī) of Radical 白

8 strokes

white 白 (22) + ladle 勺 (23b) = of 的

This is a particle which attaches to a noun or phrase to show that it is an attribute. a 的 B means “the B of a”, “the B belonging to a”, “the B of type a”, “the B to which a refers”, etc. (particles are small words which can be hard to translate, but often give a flavor to whole phrases or sentences).

丶	勹	勹	勹	勹	勹	的	的
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--

The Chef reaches for his white ladle— the one marked “property of the Chef ”. / His robot assistant rushes over to dust the ladle before he uses it.

24a 口 enclosed

丨	凵	口
---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

This is like mouth, only bigger! You can always tell them apart as “mouth” never has anything inside it, whereas “enclosed” always does.

You always delay writing the final stroke of “enclosed” until after the contents have been drawn in. The next character demonstrates this rule in action.

24 四 sì four

Radical 囗
5 strokes

enclosed 囗 (24a) + boy 儿 (21) = four 四

We have now met several numbers — the other numbers up to ten follow shortly, in Chapter 4.

The kidnapped boy was enclosed by the force-field on all four sides. / The dwarf, leading the rescue team, saluted when they found him (perhaps because he was the colonel's son).

Here is another progress chart — you can see how much you have covered in this chapter to add to what was already achieved in Chapter 1.

Below is another “Test Yourself ” quiz block of characters. We’ve included these blocks of characters throughout the book. It only takes a moment to stop and work through each block, and it is time well spent (and it’s nice to be able to get most of them right!). There will be a mixture of recent characters and those you learned some time ago — and the same character may be tested more than once in the book.

Test yourself: 好 (18) 二 (2) 他 (13) 儿 (21) 也 (8) 一 (1) 几 (7)
 八 (20) 十 (4) 个 (19) 人 (12) 三 (3) 口 (5) 子 (17)

Of course you may well want to test yourself systematically as well, by running through all the characters you have learned. It’s a good idea at the end of a session to test yourself on the characters you’ve just learned, then do this again after an hour or two, then after 1 day, 3 days and a week. This repetition will really embed the characters in your long-term memory.

The characters will stay in your memory for longer after each testing. and this effect continues on after a week too. For example, if you checked a given chapter a week ago, it should last for a month, and then a monthly check will last for 3 months, etc.

We’ll end this chapter with a few words about compounds. as mentioned in the introduction, characters are used together to form “compounds” or multi-syllable words. Numbers are some of the easiest examples of compounds:

十二 shíèr twelve

二十 èrshí twenty

十四 shísì fourteen

四十 sìshí forty

三十一 sānshíyī thirty one

More generally, two-syllable words are formed by combining two characters:

女人 nǚrén woman

儿子 érzi son

杯子 bēizi cup, mug, glass

女儿 nǚ'èr daughter

The pronunciation of a compound is just given by the pronunciation of the characters spoken (or written) one after the other. Sometimes, in writing a compound in pinyin, an apostrophe is used to make it clear how to break the compound up into syllables. For example if we wrote the compound píngān without an apostrophe, we wouldn't know whether it was píng'ān or pín'gān.

As we've said, the meaning of many compounds can be guessed from the meanings of the characters which make it up:

人力 rénlì manpower

Some compounds, however, are not at all obvious:

人口 rénkǒu (human) population

日子 rìzi day, date; life

From now on, we will list compounds as part of the character entries. When we do so, any compounds which are not stipulated for HSK Level a will be printed in brackets []. however all compounds, whether in the HSK Level a list or not, use only HSK Level a characters. In fact, all compounds only use characters introduced up to that point in the book.

Of the compounds listed so far, the following are in the HSK Level a list — can you remember what they mean?

儿子 杯子 日子 女儿

Chapter 3

In this chapter not all of the stories have story pictures, as we want you to start to visualize the stories yourself. Doing this should make the stories lodge in your memory more effectively than using the story pictures, as your brain will be “processing” the story more actively. We also list example words (compounds) with the characters from now on.

 shears	 lid
 road	 gate
 stop	 hand
 dagger	 middle

You've met all our archetype characters in action now, and as you go through the book you'll get to know them. at the end of this chapter we'll tell you a bit more about how their personalities developed.

Note the stroke order. this illustrates another general rule: strokes drawn downwards and to the left come before strokes drawn downwards and to the right.

25b  lid

The “drop” is written downwards and to the right in this character. In some typefaces (fonts), however, the “drop” will look like a short vertical line.

Because it is used a lot we will treat this as a basic building block, although you could regard it as being made up of “drop” plus “one”.

25  wén culture

Radical
4 strokes

lid 𠂇 (25b) + shears 又 (25a) = culture 文

This character refers particularly to written language and literature.

日文 (6) Rìwén (written) Japanese

This is how we will list compounds from now on. the number 6 in brackets tells you that the other character in the compound (in this case, 日) is Character 6 in this book.

(Inside the ancient tomb) the archaeologist lifts the heavy lid and finds some beautiful ornamental shears— they will tell him a lot about the culture of the time. / “Wonderful”, says the fairy, “those are magic shears that cut the grass by themselves!”

26a 辶 road

This shape always encloses other characters or fragments, which nestle above the long “tail”.

Note that the zigzag shape above the long “tail” is all one stroke. “road” is always drawn last, after the character or fragment it encloses.

26 这 zhè this

Radical 辶
7 strokes

road 辶 (26a) + culture 文 (25) = this 这

If you look at 这, you will probably think of it as “road” plus “culture”, even though you write “culture” then “road”. For this reason we will give “road” first in equations.

这个 (19) zhègè this (one)

这儿 (21) zhèr here (spoken)

·	一	丁	文	文	这	这
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--

“Which road leads to the culture museum — this one, this one or this one?” / The dwarf looks up from his newspaper, and says grumpily, “Follow those Germans.”

27 门 mén gate

Radical 门
3 strokes

門

We regard this character as a basic building block even though it looks as if it is composed of three pieces. It was originally a picture of a door or gate. Often it acts as a three-sided enclosure (see, for example, Characters 289 and 290).

The stroke order is a relic from the traditional form of the character, and in this case overrides the left-to-right rule for drawing characters.

门 口 (5) ménkǒu doorway

· 人 们

/ (On the canal) The lock gate has a wheel that must be turned to open it, but first you must pay money to the fairy when she flies over, and she will release the wheel.

28 们 men people

Radical 亻
5 strokes

們

person 亻 (13a) + gate 門 (27) = people 们

Our first story without a picture — don't just read it, visualize it!

This character is a plural ending for many nouns and pronouns which refer to people.

他们 (13) tāmen they; them

她们 (16) tāmen they; them (female)

人们 (12) rénmen people (in general)

人 们

(The castle was being opened to the public for the first time) Harry opened the castle gate and found a long queue of people waiting outside. / He programmed the robot to help collect the money so he didn't have to do it all.

29a 止 zhǐ stop

Sometimes this character takes the distorted form seen in 30a.

29 正 zhèng upright

Radical 止
5 strokes

one 一 (1) + stop 止 (29a) = upright 正

The meaning “upright” also extends to include “proper”, “just so”, “correct”, etc.

The unicorn, dozing, heard someone shout “Stop!” and sat bolt upright. / The dwarf had set up jungle tours for unicorn-watching (even though he knew the unicorn had hidden in the jungle to get a bit of peace).

30a 𠂔 stop

This is an alternative form of 29a.

30b 𠂔 upright

Similarly, this is an alternative form of Character 29.

30 是 shì is

Radical 日
9 strokes

sun 日 (6) + upright 𠂔 (30b) = is 是
------------------------------------	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

This is the third most common character in Chinese (after 的 and 一). Its basic meaning is “is” (but as you will know if you’re learning Chinese, it’s not quite as simple as that ...).

(An argument is taking place in a back garden) they are staking a sun flower — is it upright? “It is,” says one of the gardeners; “It isn’t,” says the other. “Is, is, is!” says the first, and so on. / The dwarf who lives next door can’t stand it any longer and comes round, brandishing his shillelagh.

31 手 shǒu hand

Radical 手
4 strokes

When this character appears as the left-hand side of other characters it usually takes the form 扌 (152a).

This is the second story without a picture — this time it’s a “wheel” story. read the story and then shut your eyes and try to picture it. See the car teddy is driving — what type is it? By picturing this scene in your mind’s eye, you are using one of the most potent systems the brain uses for memory — the same process your brain carries out automatically when you are reading a novel or listening to a story on the radio. If you picture the scene vividly, then when you next think of “hand plus wheel” it will trigger the story, which will in turn trigger the soundword for the pronunciation.

[手机 (10) shǒujī mobile phone]

/ Teddy takes one hand off the steering wheel, showing off his driving skills (and probably ends up in a ditch!)

32a 戈 gē dagger

Watch the stroke order here. You finish up with the drop (after you finish writing the previous stroke downwards).

This is a picture of an ancient weapon, which was something like a cross between a dagger, an axe and a spear!

32 我 wǒ I

Radical 戈
7 strokes

hand 手 (31) + dagger 戈 (32a) = I 我

Here “hand” and “dagger” are fused together (notice that this is built into the story) and “share” a stroke (compare this with Character 152). this means the stroke order is something you have to be careful with and practice. But once you get it right you will find it is a great character to draw as your pen swoops up and down and around it.

我们 (28) wǒmen we; us

The dagger was stuck in the huge stone hand (a bit like excalibur) — he pulled it out and declared “I am the One!”. / This woke Teddy who had been asleep under the hand.

Test yourself: 八 (20) 力 (14) 杯 (11) 文 (25) 白 (22) 不 (9) 机 (10)
他 (13) 门 (27) 四 (24) 好 (18) 女 (15) 的 (23) 个 (19)

33 中 zhōng middle

Radical 丨
4 strokes

A stroke which pierces through the whole character, such as the vertical one here, is generally drawn last.

This character often means “China” or “Chinese”, from the Chinese way of referring to their country as the “middle kingdom”.

中文 (25) zhōngwén (written) Chinese

/ In the middle of each wheel of his car, the giant had etched a picture of a jonquil. (A jonquil is a type of small daffodil. You'll have to excuse us if we sometimes have to scratch around for soundwords — some sounds come at the start of very few English words!)

Are you getting to know the archetypes yet? In the course of writing this book, we found that they developed personalities of their own, related to the original reasons we chose them:

Giant	Slow, placid, often found working as a handyman. the high, flat 1st tone represents his size and slowness to change.
Fairy	Flits about, tends to conjure up helpful objects rather than simply granting wishes. the upward sloping accent for 2nd tone resembles her wand.
Teddy	Somewhat mischievous and irresponsible, unlikely to take things too seriously. the down-up 3rd tone represents the way he bounces around playfully.
Dwarf	Rather grumpy and officious, likely to have some responsibility, to be a janitor or foreman, and to be trying to organise things or boss people around. the downward sloping accent of the 4th tone represents his dismissive tone of voice (as well as the fact that you look down at him because of his diminutive size).

Robot Rather mechanical and soulless — as befits a neutral tone. Likes everything logical, “just so”, and is somewhat fastidious.

We have tried to keep the stories consistent with these personality traits, to help you remember which archetype features in each story.

Here is our third progress chart to show you how you’re doing. From now on the light gray area will show you where you’d got to when we last showed you, and the dark gray area shows you how much you’ve added since then. We’ll just present the progress charts from now on without further comment.

Chapter 4

As we continue, more of the stories will be given without story pictures, so that you will be visualizing the stories yourself. But this doesn't apply to character pictures — you can rest assured that there will be a character picture for every basic building block in the book.

 coco o n		 slide
五 five		七 seven
九 nine		 thumb tack
上 above		马 horse

34a  cocoon

---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

This character originally meant “cocoon”, and from this it came to mean “to shut away”, hence “self-centered” or “selfish”.

34b  “slide”

We will call this stroke “slide” (think of a children’s playground slide). It is much longer than a drop, and is always drawn in a downward direction.

34  me “appendage”

Radical 丿
3 strokes

slide 丿 (34b) + cocoon 厶 (34a) = appendage 么

We’ve called this character “appendage” because it is used as a suffix, in words like zhème (see below) and shénme (see Character 35).

You will see that we are continuing to add phrases in brackets to some of the stories. these phrases are to help you visualize (and hence remember) the scene. Of course the words in bold are all you need to remember in the end, but you’ll remember them more easily once you recall the scene.

这么 (26) zhème like this, in this manner

The cocoon had been fixed to the top of the children’s slide, as an appendage (perhaps so that the new butterfly, when she emerges, can use the slide like a ski-jump for her first flight!) / This throws the robot ’s circuits into a dreadful muddle (as he wasn't allowed to remove it when he cleaned the slide).

35 什 shén what?

Radical 亻
4 strokes

甚

person 亻 (13a) + ten 十 (4) = what? 什

Remember that “ten” (Character 4) is represented in stories by a cross, and “person” by “harry” (see Character 12).

什么 (34) shénme what?
[什么的 (34, 23) shénmede etc.]

ノ 亻 十 什

Harry stands alone at the crossroads but nobody else turns up. What is wrong? What has he done? / The fairy (hovering at a safe distance) tells him everyone will shun him until he has a wash and doesn't smell any more!

But why? this is a question people often ask — why is it that “person” plus “ten” equals “what?”, or “road” plus “culture” equals “this”? there probably is a reason, if you delved deeply enough into the history of how each character evolved, but it is rarely sensible to demand explanations like this when learning a language. the wisest course is to relax and just accept that this is how it is. It happens in english too. After all, what has a carpet got to do with a car, or a pet?

36 五 wǔ five

4 strokes

You will remember that the number “eight” is represented in stories by an octopus. We will have similar representatives for the numbers 5, 7 and 9 (otherwise it would be difficult to distinguish in your mind between a story with say “7 trees” and a story with “9 trees” or “5 trees”). the character for “five” will be represented in stories by a starfish.

[五十 (4) wǔshí fifty]

[十五 (4) shíwǔ fifteen]

[五十五 (4) wǔshíwǔ fifty five]

/ Teddy is splashing in a rock pool and sees a five-spoked wheel but when he goes to pick it up it turns out to be a starfish and it wounds his paw.

37 七 qī seven

Radical 一

2 strokes

The character for “seven” is represented in stories by a diary (a weekly planner where you look seven days ahead to see appointments, rather than a personal journal).

When writing this character, notice that the sloping stroke extends well to both sides of the hook stroke, in contrast to 匕 which we’ll meet later (206a).

[七十 (4) qīshí seventy]

[十七 (4) shíqī seventeen]

[七十五 (4, 36) qīshíwǔ seventy five]

/ You look in your diary, and notice that in seven days' time your car is due for new wheel s. The giant has offered to get them for you cheap.

38 九 jiǔ nine

Radical 乚
2 strokes

Why are there two teddies in this story? An explanation follows on the next page.

Compare this character with “power” (Character 14), and in particular compare the stroke orders. the character for “nine” will be represented in stories by a baseball.

[九十 (4) jiǔshí ninety]

[十九 (4) shíjiǔ nineteen]

[三十九 (3, 4) sānshíjiǔ thirty nine]

/ During throwing practice each of the nine members of the baseball team has to throw the baseball cleanly through the spokes of a wheel. Two teddies, who are holding the wheel, keep moving it for a joke.

In Chinese some vowels are preceded by an “i” or “u” (these are called “on-glides”). the “i” is pronounced like the english “y” so that for example “liang” is pronounced “Iyang”. the problem is that in general no words in english begin with these sounds. So instead what we will do is to indicate an “i”

by having two of the archetype in the story — two giants, two dwarves, etc. try to picture them both as you visualize the story. When you find two archetypes in a story, you know you have to add in the “y” sound, for example converting a “pow” sound to “pyow”.

This system also helps with another problem, which is that there are no soundwords in english to distinguish between consonants such as “zh” and “j”. But the i on-glide does this for us. So for example the soundwords “joke”, “choker”, “show” would normally indicate the syllables zhou, chou, shou respectively — but if there are two of the archetype in the story then they indicate jiu, qiu, xiu instead. (It is cheating a little to use the same soundwords for “zh” and “j”, “ch” and “q”, “sh” and “x”, since these are different initial consonants in Chinese. But remember that the purpose of soundwords is to jog your memory as to the pronunciation of each character, rather than to reproduce it exactly, which isn’t possible in english). this is why there are two teddies in the story for 九.

We will deal with u on-glides in the next chapter.

39 六 liù six

Radical 𠂇
4 strokes

lid 𠂇 (25b) + eight 八 (20) = six 六

The fact that there are two dwarves tells you that the “lo” sound (from the soundword) is pronounced “lyo”.

This completes the numbers from one to ten. We have story substitutes (the unicorn, octopus, etc.) for some of the numbers (1, 2, 5, 7, 8 and 9). Since the characters for 3, 4 and 6 don’t appear as a part of other characters, we don’t need story substitutes for them.

[六十 (4) liùshí sixty]

[十六 (4) shíliù sixteen]

The octopus is trying to lift the lid of a huge cooking pot — he has to use six of his legs (leaving only two to stand on!) / Two dwarves arrive carrying a huge locust to put in the pot.

Test yourself: 是 (30) 人 (12) 文 (25) 儿 (21) 正 (29) 她 (16) 这 (26)
中 (33) 们 (28) 我 (32) 四 (24) 门 (27) 力 (14) 手 (31)

40a  “thumb tack”

“Thumb tack” is our name for this shape which is found at the top of some characters, and which looks like a squashed nail which has got slightly bent.

40 百 bǎi hundred

Radical 白
6 strokes

thumb tack  (40a) + sun 日 (6) = hundred 百

You might feel that this character could be split into “one” plus “white”, and you’d be right. there will be quite a few cases where there might seem to be a choice as to how a character can be broken down into building blocks. there is no single correct way, and if you prefer an alternative then simply make up an alternative story to go with your choice.

[三百 (3) sānbǎi three hundred]

一	一	一	百	百	百
---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--

You see a thumb tack (on the road), glinting in the sun. When you look more closely, you can see there are a hundred of them. / Teddy has sprinkled them on the new bypass (as a protest against it being built near his home).

41 边 biān side

Radical 辶
5 strokes

邊

road 辶 (26a) + power 力 (14) = side 边

Note that in Chinese the i on-glide changes an “an” sound to “yen”, not “yan” (see the Appendix). this is why we use “bends” as a soundword rather than, say, “bands”.

一边...一边... (1, 1) yībiān A yībiān B doing A while also doing B
[这边 (26) zhèbiān this side; over here]

一	力	力	边	边
---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--

A power ful machine is clearing a path for a new road by pushing everything to the side. / But it can only do the straight bits so two giants have to be called on to create the bends.

42a 卜 bǔ; bo fortune teller

stick | (19a) + a drop 丶 (22a) = fortune teller 卜

When 卜 appears as a part of another character, “drop” sometimes turns into a short horizontal line (see Character 183 for an example).

You don’t need to learn the pronunciation (as this is not an HSK Level A character), so there is no second half to the story.

“Dip the stick in this ink and let a drop fall on here,” says the fortune teller (she can tell your fortune by the pattern the ink makes). / [No pronunciation needed]

42 上 shàng above

3 strokes

Although the basic meaning of this character is “above” or “on top of”, it can also be used as a verb meaning to enter (a vehicle), attend (school), go to (work), etc.

上边 (41) shàngbian above; high up

丨	卜	上
---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

43 下 xià below

Radical 卜
3 strokes

one 一 (1) + fortune teller 卜 (42a) = below 下

In a similar way to Character 42, this character, which means “down”, “below” or “under”, can also be used as a verb meaning to alight (from a vehicle), finish (class or work), etc.

下边 (41) xiàbian below, under

一下儿 (1, 21) yíxiàr briefly; casually

一	卜	下
---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

The unicorn goes to see the fortune teller, and she looks at what is below the card which he points to with his hoof. / “I see two dwarves sharpening your horn for you.”

44 马 mǎ horse

Radical 马
3 strokes

馬

马上 (42) mǎshàng at once

7 马 马

/ Teddy has shown a horse how to balance on a wheel so they can earn money at the market (performing as street entertainers).

45 吗 ma question mark

Radical 口
6 strokes

嗎

mouth 口 (5) + horse 马 (44) = question mark 吗

This is a particle which is added to the end of a sentence to turn it into a question.

Imagine looking inside the mouth of a horse you are thinking of buying, and finding a question mark stamped on the horse's tongue. / Your robot remarks, "It's not logical to buy horses at this market."

46 妈 mā mum

Radical 女
6 strokes

媽

woman 女 (15) + horse 马 (44) = mum 妈

妈妈 māma mum, mom, mummy

A teenage girl is out shopping and she turns to see a woman on a horse— naked like Lady Godiva. “Mum!” the teenager cries, mortified. / Fortunately at that moment the giant comes stumbling through the market (overturning stalls and distracting everyone’s attention, giving the girl a chance to lead the horse away out of sight).

Look at the last three characters (44–46). Do you notice anything? they all contain 𠂔 and they are all pronounced “ma” (with various tones). this isn’t a coincidence: 𠂔 is acting as a phonetic and giving a clue to how to pronounce the character. In effect 妈 is “the character which has a meaning related to 女 and sounds like 𠂔.” One reason (among many) why the equations often don’t seem to make any logical sense is that sometimes one part of the character is donating its sound rather than its meaning. A series of characters like this, with a phonetic component and with the same pronunciation, is called a phonetic series. We will always use the same soundword for all the pronunciations in a phonetic series — in the case of Characters 44–46 we used the soundword “market”. We have already seen two small examples of phonetic series (他, 她 and 们, 们), and there are many more to come. But (as you probably guessed) this is not at all a reliable system, as you will see as we go along. For example, we have already seen that 他 and 她 are pronounced tā, but 也 was yě!

Test yourself: 也 (8) 个 (19) 六 (39) 什 (35) 们 (28) 九 (38) 么 (34)
的 (23) 子 (17) 五 (36) 中 (33) 力 (14) 七 (37) 白 (22)
马 (44) 女 (15) 百 (40) 十 (4) 下 (43) 不 (9) 日 (6)
边 (41) 四 (24) 妈 (46) 八 (20) 上 (42) 正 (29) 这 (26)

Did you remember all these OK? If not, are you sure you visualized the story in each case rather than just reading it? It’s true that you only need to recall the meaning (and soundword/archetype), not the whole story verbatim, but picturing the story will help you to remember these vital nuggets inside the story.

As an experiment you might try really visualizing (say) three stories from the next chapter, and then for three other stories simply read them through, not visualizing them. then test yourself 24 hours later and see if there is any difference. then test yourself again 3 days and 7 days later.

Chapter 5

If there is a basic building block you are having a real problem remembering, you might try this: photocopy the character picture and color it in, making sure you trace over the character in heavy black lines. It doesn't matter whether you then tear it up or frame it on your wall; the process will have helped to embed it in your memory.

大 big 	夫 husband
小 small 	ㄣ to bow

47 大 dà (dài) big

Radical 大
3 strokes

The pronunciation of this character is basically dà, with the exception that it is pronounced dài in the word dàifū (see Character 49 below).

[大人 (12) dàrén adult]

一	ナ	大
---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

/ The Big Wheel at the fairground is in use all day so the dwarf has to do the maintenance work at night in the dark. (Imagine him grumbling, “How do they expect me to see what I’m doing?”).

48 太 tài too much

Radical 大
4 strokes

big 大 (47) + a drop 丶 (22a) = too much 太

Note that the “drop” is below “big” — we will meet another story later (238a) which is also made up of “drop” and “big”, but the “drop” is on top.

[太太 tàitai wife; Mrs.]

一	ナ	大	太
---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--

The fisherman throws his arms wide to show how big the fish was, but a drop of sweat falls from his brow and his friends know he is lying — they have seen too much of this in the past. / The dwarf says, disdainfully, “Are you sure it wasn’t a tiger?”

49 夫 fū husband

Radical 大
4 strokes

The second stroke of this character is longer than the first, just like in the character for “two” (Character 2).

大夫 (47) dàifū doctor (colloq.)

夫人 (12) fūrén wife (formal)

/ She makes her husband use the exercise wheel. “You are fat because you eat as much food as the giant,” she tells him.

50 小 xiǎo small

Radical 小
3 strokes

When “small” occurs at the top of other characters, it sometimes takes the form 丩 (see Character 267). For using 小 with names, see the note on 老 lǎo (Character 264).

The stroke order for this character follows the “center before symmetrical sides” rule, which overrides the “left to right” rule.

[大小 (47) dàxiǎo size]

小	小
---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

/ The small wheel has to be turned to operate the shower, but the two teddies have to stand one on top of the other to reach it.

51a  to bow

ノ	ㄣ
---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

We use this in the following character, but then we won't need it again until Chapter 18.

51b 尔 ěr thou

爾

bow ㄣ (51a) + small 小 (50) = thou 尔

This is an old or literary word for “you” which we need for the next character.

ノ	ㄣ	尔	尔	尔
---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--

Imagine two fastidious courtiers bowing to each other by a small gap in the fence. “after thou,” one says. “No, after thou!” and so on. / [No pronunciation needed]

51 你 nǐ you

Radical 亻
7 strokes

person 亻 (13a) + thou 尔 (51b) = you 你

This is the everyday, modern word for “you” (there are also various polite ways of saying “you” which we will meet later).

你们 (28) nǐmen you (plural)

丿	亻	亻	尔	你	你	你	你	你	你
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

“Harry, thou art clever,” says the wise man. “Why don’t you just say “you”?” harry replies. / Teddy gets all excited and starts singing, “No need to kneel, no need to kneel.”

52 又 yòu right hand

2 strokes

Although originally a picture of the right hand, this character now means “again” or “additionally” (there is also another word for “again”; see Character 217). We will use the old meaning “right hand” in stories, since it will be easier to create vivid stories using this than if we were to use the more abstract word “again”. Moreover, we will usually use the image of shaking hands to distinguish it from stories involving “hand” in general (since this is something you do with your right hand, even if you are left-handed).

[又...又... yòu A yòu B both A and B]

フ	又
---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

/ Two friends on unicycles meet in the street — each extends his right hand while balancing on a single wheel, and they shake hands again and again. The dwarf comes rushing past (nearly sending them flying) — he’s late for his yoga class and in no mood to be impressed.

一	𠂇

To make “left hand” stand out from “hand” in general, we will often use stories involving wedding rings.

53 友 yǒu friend

Radical 又
4 strokes

left hand 扌 (53a) + right hand 又 (52) = friend 友

友好 (18) yǒuhǎo friendly

一	ナ	方	友
---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--

They run along (right) hand in (left) hand, the best of friends. / But the mischievous Teddy is waiting, and as they pass he flicks his yoyo out and they fall down in a tangle of string.

54a 土 tǔ earth

一	十	土
---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

Once again (as in 夫, Character 49), the second stroke of this character is longer than the first. this time it really matters, for there is another character which looks just like 土, except that the first stroke is longer than the second (士, Character 487a).

When used as the left-hand side of other characters, 土 gets squashed so that the last stroke slopes upwards (see the next character for an example).

54 地 dì; de 1. ground 2. -ly

Radical 土
6 strokes

1. earth 土 (54a) + also 也 (8) = ground 地

2. earth 土 (54a) + also 也 (8) = -ly 地

Now, here we have a character with two meanings, and two pronunciations to go with them! Whenever this happens (there are ten such characters in this book), we will simply provide two stories. however, one will be set in the Wild West, and one will be set on a large spaceship. No other characters, apart from these ten, will use either of these settings. So whenever you see a character and remember the story to go with it, if the setting is the Wild West or a spaceship, this will remind you that there is also another story (in the other setting). Of course, which meaning (and pronunciation) is appropriate will be for you to decide, depending on the context. this is like seeing the word “bow” in english: until you know the context (tying shoelaces? aboard a ship? archery?) you won’t know which meaning, or which pronunciation, is appropriate.

The second meaning, “-ly”, is our name for how 地 helps to qualify verbs, like the “-ly” ending of adverbs in english.

You may wonder which of the two meanings to use in future equations. Fortunately this problem doesn’t arise as this character never appears as part of another character.

[地下 (43) dixià underground]

一	十	土	也	地	地
---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--

ψ (A posse is pursuing bandits, and the sheriff dismounts to look at the spent bullets) “the earth has also been disturbed,” he says, “they’re heading for higher ground.” / His dwarf deputy takes a few men on a detour (to head them off at the pass ...)

☞ (The landing party has returned to the spaceship from the planet) “We didn’t just get samples of earth, we also found some great alien artefacts, so treat them gentle.” “Gently,” corrects the Chief Scientist (who is a stickler for grammar). / “And can somebody go and sort out the robot—he’s miserable because he’s got so dusty” (collecting the earth samples).

55a 才 talent

You might like to think of this as “left hand” plus “stick”. But we think that our illustrator’s character picture is a better and more vivid way to remember this. (We will have something else to say about this character when we get to Character 518).

55 在 zài at

Radical 土

6 strokes

talent 才 (55a) + earth 土 (54a) = at 在

This can mean both “in/at/on” and “to be in/at/on”, or “to be in the middle of” (doing something).

正在 (29) zhèngzài (used before a verb to denote action in progress)

一	ナ	才	在	在	在
---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--

(An announcement at the flower show) “the expert gardeners, who have a special talent for growing things in the earth, will be at the main marquee to answer questions when the big “@” sign is displayed above it.” / The dwarf (who is organizing things) plays a couple of notes on his xylophone to end the announcement.

56a 𠂇 “swoop”

one 一 (1) + cocoon 𠂇 (34a) = swoop 𠂇

一	𠂇	𠂇
---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

The unicorn finds a cocoon on the path, and is just about to investigate when a bird swoops down to pluck it from under his nose. / [No pronunciation needed]

56 𠂇 yún cloud

Radical 二
4 strokes

雲

one 一 (1) + swoop 𠂇 (56a) = cloud 雲

Alternatively, this character could be broken down into “two” plus “cocoon”. If, looking at the character, this alternative seems more natural to you, then feel free to make up a story accordingly. For example, you could have a biplane pilot flying along, who sees a fluffy cocoon floating in the sky — until he realizes that it is a cloud.

一 二 云 云

A bird is teasing the unicorn, swooping under its tummy, but each time the unicorn looks round the bird hides in a cloud. / The fairy is so impressed she makes the bird an honorary member of her aviators' union.

57 运 yùn transport

Radical 辶
7 strokes

運

road 辶 (26a) + cloud 云 (56) = transport 运

一 二 云 云 云 云 运

The road is obscured by a cloud of dust as the big transport trucks roll past. / The dwarf (covered in dust) calls after them, “I’ll get the union on to you!”

58 动 dòng move

Radical 力
6 strokes

動

cloud 云 (56) + power 力 (14) = move 动

The previous two characters formed a mini-phonetic series, but this character breaks the pattern. this shows that phonetic series are not to be relied upon!

运动 (57) yùndòng (physical) exercise
[动手 (31) dòng shǒu to start work]

一	二	云	云	动	动
---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--

A tornado cloud has the power to move almost anything. / It can even knock the dwarf off his donkey.

59a 人 combine tent 入 (19b) + one 一 (1) = combine 人

ノ	人	人
---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

The unicorn hides in his tent, frightened by the combine harvester working nearby. / [No pronunciation needed]

59 会 huì meeting

Radical 二
6 strokes

combine 厶 (59a) + swoop 𠂇 (56a) = meeting 会

Alternatively, this character could be split into “tent” plus “cloud” (see the comment for Character 56). From now on, we won’t keep pointing these alternatives out. another meaning of this character is “to know how to”.

The pronunciation of this character is something like “hway” — the u on-glide is pronounced like the english “w”. See the remarks after this character entry.

机会 (10) jīhuì chance, opportunity
[大会 (47) dàhuì congress, assembly]
一会儿 (1, 21) yíhuìr (in) a moment

(The captain of the birds’ aerobatic display team is speaking) “If we are going to combine our swooping maneuvers we need to have a meeting to discuss how we will do it.” / The ghostly dwarf (safety officer) is organizing the hay (to act as a safety cushion).

To signal a u on-glide, as in Character 59, we have a ghostly archetype. We try to give ghostly figures a guarding or protecting role in the stories. When you find a ghostly archetype, add in the “w” sound, e.g. converting a “go” sound to “gwo”. (recall our discussion of i on-glides after Character 38).

Test yourself: 你 (51) 我 (32) 大 (47) 正 (29) 小 (50) 手 (31) 运 (57)
太 (48) 吗 (45) 夫 (49) 们 (28) 是 (30)

口 (5)

几 (7)

60a 王 wáng king

one 一 (1) + earth 土 (54a) = king 王

一	=	土	王
---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--

The unicorn (telling the story of excalibur) sticks his horn into the earth, then withdraws it with a flourish to demonstrate how the young arthur became king. / [No pronunciation needed]

60b 玉 yù jade

king 王 (60a) + a drop 丶 (22a) = jade 玉

This is similar to the situation for 太 (Character 48). In 玉 the drop is low down in the character, and the story reflects this. this is to keep it distinct in your mind from another character you'll meet later (主, Character 297), which has a drop on top of a king.

一	=	土	王	玉
---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--

The king is out jogging and as each drop of sweat touches the ground it turns to jade. / [No pronunciation needed]

60 国 guó country

Radical 囗
8 strokes

enclosed 囗 (24a) + jade 玉 (60b) = country 国

Here is another ghostly archetype, indicating the pronunciation is closer to “gwo” than “go” (see the text following Character 59).

[中国 (33) zhōngguó China]

The jade crown is enclosed in a theft-proof case at the exhibition as it is a very important part of the country's heritage. / The legendary ghostly fairy who came from the Gobi desert guards it.

Because we are covering the most common characters early on in the book, we've already covered almost a quarter of the characters you'll find in an average piece of Chinese text! Of course, you won't be able to understand the average piece of text yet — in english the most common words are “and”, “the” and so on, and knowing these wouldn't enable you to read english either. however, you are on your way now and most of the “mystery” and “fear of the unknown” should be gone. By now we hope you'll agree that there is actually nothing to stop you learning as many characters as you like!

Chapter 6

Some characters have minor variations between typefaces which are not significant. For example, in the character for “moon” below, the two small horizontal lines almost meet the far side of the character, but in the main character entry (next page) the lines do reach the whole way across. The characters on these “basics pages” are also slightly “italic” compared with the main character entries. This will help you to recognize characters in these different fonts.

月 moon 	未 not yet
𠂆 horns 	了 complete
讠 words written	夕 evening
刀 knife

61 月 yuè moon

Radical 月
4 strokes

We would normally class this as a DIY pronunciation (one you have to memorize on your own as there is no reasonable soundword available in english). For most of these, it will be simplest if you just learn the pronunciation, rather than us inventing a new trick each time. But we'll try to give you some help when we can.

We saw that the character for “sun” also means “day” (Character 6), and in a similar way the character for “moon” also means “month”.

Occasionally 月 is distorted into (but we won't see this happening until much later, in Chapter 16).

[二月 (2) èryuè February]

[三月 (3) sānyuè March]

[三个月 (3, 19) sān ge yuè three months]

月	月	月	月
---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--

/ You are out walking at night when the moon light falling on a wheel lights up the dwarf who is sitting on it. “That you, eh?” he whispers gruffly.

62 朋 péng companion

Radical 月
8 strokes

moon 月 (61) + moon 月 (61) = companion 朋

朋友 (53) péngyǒu friend

朋友们 (53, 28) péngyǒumen friends

月	月	月	月	月	朋	朋	朋
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--

“Why did you buy two moon-shaped balloons?” her mother asks. “Because the first moon needed another moon as a companion,” the little girl says. /

But just then one of the moons gets punctured, but (before the child can start to cry) the fairy quickly flies over, flicks her wand, and it's as good as new.

63 有 yǒu have

Radical 月
6 strokes

left hand 扌 (53a) + moon 月 (61) = have 有

This means both “have”, “possess” and the impersonal “there is” or “there exists”.

有的 (23) yǒude some
[有力 (14) yǒulì strong, forceful]

一 扌 才 有 有 有

“Why is there a moon on the left hand side of every picture?” the girl’s mother asks. “Because I only have a moon stencil,” the girl replies. / Teddy practices his favorite yoga posture (and says “Why not draw me instead?”)

64a 未 wèi not yet

一	二	丰	耒	耒
---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--

Yet again, as in 夫 (49) and 土 (54a), the second stroke of this character is longer than the first. This is another occasion where it does matter, because we shall be meeting the character 末 (793a) later.

It is unfortunately true that some small details like this do matter, whereas other small differences don't — as mentioned at the start of this chapter. We will do our best to draw attention to the differences that matter and you will soon get used to these; you will also soon be routinely recognizing minor variants of the same character.

64 妹 mèi younger sister

Radical 女
8 strokes

woman 女 (15) + not yet 未 (64a) = younger sister 妹

There is no character in Chinese for “sister”; instead we have this character for “younger sister” and another one (Character 444) for “older sister”. The same thing happens for brothers.

妹妹 mèimei younger sister

人	人	女	女	女	姪	妹	妹
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--

(Two lads in the pub) “What about that woman over there — she’s not yet married,” says one. “You can’t fancy her, she’s my younger sister!” his mate replies. / “Anyway the dwarf has his eye on her, and he’s a Major.”

65a 犄 horns

The “horns” usually come at the top of a character (but not always — see the following character).

65 来 lái come

Radical 一
7 strokes

來 horns 丷 (65a) + not yet 未 (64a) = come 来

上来 (42) shànglái come up
下来 (43) xiàlái come down

The stags are going off on their hunt, but the fawn is too young. “Your horns are not yet grown so you cannot come yet,” he is told. / The fairy (who comes to babysit him) fixes up lights to amuse him and guide the returning hunters.

Test yourself: 么 (34) 子 (17) 妈 (46) 又 (52) 在 (55) 他 (13) 个 (19)
友 (53) 云 (56) 十 (4) 会 (59) 地 (54) 日 (6) 动 (58)

66 了 le; liǎo 1. transition 2. complete

Radical 一
2 strokes

Notice how this differs from “child” (Character 17); here there is no third stroke through the middle.

This is our second pair of Wild West and spaceship stories (see Character 54); in this case it is a pair of “wheel” stories.

le is a particle which comes at the end of a sentence to mark a transition, such as the completion of an action, or the emergence of a new situation. liǎo means “to complete” or “finish with (something)”. For the character picture we’ve used “complete” as the meaning.

 / For the expedition to the new planet, the robot has brought plenty of spare wheels so that he can change them whenever there is a transition to a different sort of terrain — just his luck that this is a water world!

2.

 / (The stagecoach has broken down) When the repairs to the wheel are complete the two teddies rush around calling loudly to the passengers to get back on board.

67a 兄 xiōng older brother mouth 口 (5) + boy 儿 (21) = older brother 兄

There is also another character for “older brother” which we’ll meet presently.

At the mouth of the cave the boy is acting as a look-out for his older brother (who has sneaked inside to see what's in there). / [No pronunciation needed]

67b 兌 duì to convert horns 丿 (65a) + older brother 兄 (67a) = convert 兌

“I found these horns,” the little girl says, holding them up proudly. “My older brother is going to convert them into something for me to play with.” / [No pronunciation needed]

67c 讠 words

This common component, which appears on the left-hand side of characters, is a simplification of the character 言 which we'll meet later (Character 375). In our stories we usually refer to words which are written down rather than spoken.

67 说 shuō say

Radical 讠
9 strokes

說

words 讠 (67c) + convert 兑 (67b) = say 说

Another ghostly archetype (see the text after Character 59), which means “sho” from the soundword is changed into “shuo”. We won’t mention this every time it occurs from now on.

[小说 (50) xiǎoshuō a novel]

(A new aid for blind people has been invented) “all you have to do is run this gadget over the written words and it will convert them into signals which it can then say out loud.” / The ghostly giant (who is the guardian of this new device) shows the blind people how to use it.

68a 吾 wú yours truly five 五 (36) + mouth 口 (5) = yours truly 吾

A literary character for “I” or “we”.

In the evening (after a hard day's work) the fortune teller likes to sit outside (and enjoy the fresh air). / The dwarf from the next stall comes over to share her bottle of wine (he's too stingy to buy his own!)

72 刀 dāo knife

Radical 刀
2 strokes

When appearing on the right-hand side of composite characters, this takes the form 刂 (see 74a).

[刀子⁽¹⁷⁾ dāozi knife]

刀	子
---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

/ The giant fixed a knife to the wheel as instructed, but he had grave doubts about whether it would really cut the crops as it rolled along.

73 分 fēn (fèn) division

Radical 八
4 strokes

eight 八⁽²⁰⁾ + knife 刀⁽⁷²⁾ = division 分

This can be a verb, “to divide”, or a noun meaning a small division of something — it is used for a hundredth of a yuan or a minute (of time).

74b 至 zhì until swoop 𠂇 (56a) + earth 土 (54a) = until 至

The birds (following the farmer sowing his seeds) swoop down to the earth one after another until there are no seeds left. / [No pronunciation needed]

74 到 dào arrive

Radical 刂
8 strokes

until 至 (74b) + knife 刂 (74a) = arrive 到

Until the magic knife has finished trimming the decorations it is not safe for the guests to arrive. / The dwarf says, “I have grave doubts about the safety of using magic knives.”

75 倒 dǎo; dào topple; invert

Radical 亻
10 strokes

person 人 (13a) + arrive 到 (74) = topple; invert 倒

Here we have two meanings, and two pronunciations, but the pronunciations differ only in tone — so they share the same soundword but have different archetypes. as with Wild West/space ship characters, the choice of which meaning/pronunciation is appropriate will depend on the context.

For this type of character (there are nine in this book) we will use film set stories. each one takes place on the film set of a particular movie, and has two parts. The first part is a normal story, leading to a meaning, soundword and archetype as usual. In the second part the second archetype introduces the second meaning (remember, the soundword is the same). So if, when you see a character and the story you recall based on its parts takes place on a film set, then you know that the character has two possible meanings, with pronunciations that differ only in tone.

---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

 Harry arrives on the film set of a “harry potter” film, just as a burning candle topples over (and threatens to set light to everything). / Teddy tries to douse the flames by flicking water from a fire bucket. But the dwarf shows him how to douse it properly. \ “Invert the whole bucket over the fire, like this,” he says.

You may feel that with Wild West stories, ghostly dwarves and so on, and now film set stories, this is all getting too complicated. But film set stories are the last complication (honest!) and only apply to a few characters anyway. after this you can just sit back for the rest of the book.

You have already learned 75 characters, including all 20 of the “Top 20” most frequent characters in Chinese. The initial feeling of characters being “impenetrable squiggles” is behind you, and characters won’t be scary ever again. Now you are into your stride, all you need to do is to keep going, slowly and steadily. resist the temptation to race ahead; instead choose a modest schedule and stick to it, and remember to visualize the stories rather than just reading them and passing on.

At this stage, if you were learning characters by rote, you would be running into the “too many and yet too few” problem: you would know too few characters as yet to read Chinese, but at the same time too many to keep them clear in your head. Well, the first part of this is still true for you, but the second part shouldn’t be, if you have been visualizing the stories. Think about it — how many hundreds of movies have you seen and yet you can still remember which is which, and what happens in each?

Chapter 7

On this page (as on the “basics” pages at the start of previous chapters) we have a mixture of “obvious” character pictures (such as “nail” and “cover”) and others which are not (such as “car”). For the non-obvious ones, pay particular attention to what the various strokes correspond to in the character picture, so that when you see the character on its own you can imagine the character picture drawn around it.

76 天 tiān heaven

Radical 一
4 strokes

one 一 (1) + big 大 (47) = heaven 天

Other common meanings for this character are “sky”, “day” and “weather”.

[白天 (22) báitiān daytime]

[天天 tiāntiān every day]

一	二	天	天
---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--

It's the sun shining on the moon that makes it bright. / The fairy likes to wear her mink shawl in the bright moonlight.

78a 氵 water

This very common fragment is an abbreviation of the character 水 which we'll meet later (Character 523) — it takes this form when appearing as the left-hand part of composite characters. Note that the final stroke is written in an upwards direction.

78 𠂇 hàn Han Chinese

Radical 𠂇
5 strokes

漢

water 𠂇 (78a) + right hand 又 (52) = Han Chinese 汉

The Han Chinese are the majority ethnic group in China.

汉语 (68) Hànyǔ Chinese (language)

They sprinkle water on their right hands before shaking hands to demonstrate that they are Han Chinese. / The dwarf is reaching up his hand so that he can be included (because he doesn't like to miss out on things).

79a 另 líng other mouth 口 (5) + power 力 (14) = other 另

Sometimes (in older typefaces) you may see the “power” part of this character replaced by “knife” (Character 72).

丶	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

“Man has two types of power: physical strength is one, but “mouth power”, the power of persuasion, is the other.” / [No pronunciation needed]

79 别 bié don't

Radical 刂
7 strokes

别

other 另 (79a) + knife 刂 (74a) = don't 别

This character is another one meaning “other”, but it is also used colloquially as a negative imperative, in phrases such as “Don't touch!”.

别的 (23) biéde other

别人 (12) biérén other people

丶	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

“Use the other knife, don't use that one, we haven't sharpened it yet.” / Two fairies hold a belt between them to sharpen the knives on.

80 如 rú if

Radical 女
6 strokes

woman 女 (15) + mouth 口 (5) = if 如

不如 (9) bùrú not as (good) as

人 女 如 如 如 如 如 如 如 如

The woman stands at the mouth of the cave, hesitating, “it looks iffy to me” she says. / The fairy flutters over and gives her a magic ruby to keep her safe.

81a 𠂔 step forward

slide 𠂔 (34b) + person 亻 (13a) = step forward 𠂔

𠂔 𠂔 𠂔 𠂔 𠂔 𠂔 𠂔 𠂔 𠂔 𠂔

Harry is standing at the bottom of the slide ready to step forward and catch any children who are going too fast. / [No pronunciation needed]

81b 𠂔 dīng nail

You will also see this used to mean fourth in a sequence, much as (d) or (iv) are used in english.

81c 𠂔 footstep

one 一 (1) + nail 𠂔 (81b) = footstep 𠂔

This is a distorted form of 81a (step forward) and combines with it to form the next character.

The unicorn has a nail stuck in his hoof so you can hear his footsteps clattering when he's walking along the road. / [No pronunciation needed]

81 行 xíng; háng 1. OK 2. line

Radical 彳
6 strokes

1. step forward 彳 (81a) + footstep 𠂔 (81c) = OK 行

2. step forward 彳 (81a) + footstep 𠂔 (81c) = line 行

See Character 54 if you need reminding about the significance of Wild West and spaceship stories.

The two halves of this character can bracket other characters between them (see Character 710 for an example).

[不行 (9) bùxíng not allowed, not OK]

[行动 (58) xíngdòng to move; behavior]

ψ The sheriff looks up and down the street before he dares to step forward, but then he thinks he hears a footstep behind him. he whirls round ... but it's OK. / It's just the fairy fixing up a shingle at the doctor's house (and she'd dropped it).

2.

🚗 (Outside the sickbay, the morning after the planet-leaving party). You are about to step forward into the sickbay when you hear a footstep behind you. You look back and see a long line of people queueing up. / The fairy is well known for her hangover cures!

82a  cover

Notice the difference between this and “to bow” (51a): “cover” is much flatter.

82b  hands reaching down

82c  “unveil”

hands reaching down 𠂇 (82b) + cover 冂 (82a) = unveil 𠂇

Imagine a row of people lined up along the roof of a new building — the band strikes up below then their hands reach down to pull on a cover to unveil the company’s name on its new headquarters. / [No pronunciation needed]

82 学 xué study

85a 升 two hands

85 开 kāi open

Radical 升
4 strokes

開

one 一 (1) + two hands 升 (85a) = open 开

This also means to start, or operate (e.g. to drive a car).

开学 (82) kāixué begin (school term)
[开车 (83) kāi chē to drive a car]

The unicorn is looking for the secret passageway and comes across two hands painted on the rock face. “this must mean that it needs two hands to open it.” / He looks around and sees the giant’s kite flying nearby — he will be perfect for the job.

86 去 qù go

Radical 土

5 strokes

earth 土 (54a) + cocoon 𤝵 (34a) = go 去

See Character 15 for a reminder about what “pouring rain” stories signify.

上去 (42) shàngqù to go up

下去 (43) xiàqù to go down

一	+	土	去	去
---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--

☔ Earth covers her cocoon so the butterfly is getting worried. “I won’t be able to go when the time comes,” she thinks. / Then, miraculously it starts to pour with rain and the earth is washed away, but the dwarf park attendant now mistakes the cocoon for a piece of chewing gum and puts it in his rubbish sack!

87 法 fǎ law

Radical 氵

8 strokes

water 氵 (78a) + go 去 (86) = law 法

Because of its sound this character is also used to mean “France”.

法语 (68) Fǎyǔ French (language)

法文 (25) Fǎwén (written) French

语法 (68) yǔfǎ grammar

丶	丶	丶	氵	去	法	法

Water always goes anti-clockwise down the plughole — that's a law of physics. / “Far out,” says Teddy.

88a 耳 ěr ear

Note the stroke order here — it often seems to catch people out.

88 取 qǔ acquire

Radical 耳
8 strokes

ear 耳 (88a) + right hand 又 (52) = acquire 取

☔ (The secret agent has been waiting for ages for his contact to show up). When the contact finally arrives they shake hands and he whispers in the agent's ear, “You must acquire the secret plans to the military base,” and then he walks away. / It starts to pour with rain so Teddy is keen to go, because he's getting soaking wet and his chewing gum has run out.

89a  “beret”

This is our name for the gently slanting stroke found at the top of some characters, such as the next one. the stroke is drawn from right to left.

89  qiān thousand

Radical
3 strokes

beret — (89a) + ten  (4) = thousand

This is also used in a general sense to mean “numerous”.

This is another “Do It Yourself ” (DIY) pronunciation. there are something like fifty DIY pronunciations scattered through the book.

If you do want to construct a pronunciation part of this story for yourself then you will need a soundword for “chen”. If it helps, the nearest we can find is “Chennai” (the city in India which used to be called Madras). If you have two giants from Chennai, make sure to give them some distinctive clothes or some other memorable features!

[ (3) sānqiān three thousand]

We've had a few characters now where we've said that alternative stories are possible — in one case (Character 56) we've even given one. alternative stories are fine, and not only where there is an alternative way of breaking a character down into basic building blocks. they are also perfectly acceptable if you simply don't like one of the stories for any reason — and in particular if you have problems visualizing or remembering it. at the end of the book we will give some hints for making up your own stories (for characters beyond this book) — but the main tips are to make the stories as vivid and quirky as you can — bizarre or silly even — and to make sure the parts of the story interact together (rather than just sitting there side by side, as it were).

Chapter 8

Quite often there will be pairs of basic building blocks which are very similar to one another. An example is the pair “west” and “whisky bottle” below. So that you can compare them, we have tried to put such pairs together in the same chapter. Clearly it’s a good idea when you are learning these to pay particular attention to the parts of the characters where any differences lie, so that you will remember which is which.

 house	 eye

96a

---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

This is the only component whose meaning depends on where it appears in a character. When it's on the left it means “mound”, but when it's on the right it means “city”. examples of each follow in the next few characters. We realise that this is confusing but because everyone else observes this distinction, we will too. the situation arose because 阝 is an abbreviation of two completely different older characters, one which always appeared on the left and another which always appeared on the right. A similar situation applies to a few other characters, but modern Chinese doesn't distinguish between them so you don't have to worry about those!

Nowadays this fragment is regarded as being written with only two strokes, but traditionally it was classed as having three strokes.

96 阳 yáng in the open

Radical 阝
6 strokes

陽

mound 阝 (96a) + sun 日 (6) = in the open 阳

It's best to read this and the next story together. Yin and yang (this character and the following one) are the two opposing forces in taoist philosophy. Yang is the force associated with being overt, in the sun, positive and masculine; and yin with things hidden or occult, cloudy, negative or feminine (insert here a comment of your choice about male chauvinism!). In the stories the fairy and the giant are getting in touch with their masculine and feminine sides, respectively.

太阳 (48) tàiyáng the sun; sunshine

When the sun shines, the creatures that live in the mound come out in to the open. / The fairy visits the mound in the day-time to develop her yang side.

97 阴 yīn hidden

Radical 阝
6 strokes

陰

mound 阝 (96a) + moon 月 (61) = hidden 阴

[阴天 (76) yīntiān a cloudy day]

阝 冂 冂 阴 阴 阴

100 西 xī west

Radical 西
6 strokes

When this character appears at the top of other characters, the central two strokes are compressed into short vertical lines: this happens in the next character.

西边 (41) xībiān the west side
[西安 (91) Xī'ān Xian (the city)]

/ The enormous wheel that hangs on the west gate of the city is the perfect size for the giant to use as a shield (so he pinches it!)

101 要 yào; yāo want; ask for Radical 西

9 strokes

west 西 (100) + woman 女 (15) = want; ask for 要

This is the second example of a character with two pronunciations, which share the same spelling and differ only in tone. recall that this is signalled by a film set story: so the two meanings are associated with two different archetypes (see Character 75).

When it uses the fourth tone this character can sometimes be used with another verb, it then means “must” or “have to”.

不要 (9) búyào Don't ...
要是 (30) yàoshì if

一	一	一	一	西	西	西	要	要	要
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--

🎬 As a Western woman alone in an eastern culture, think of the King of Siam's tutor in "the King and I" — so this is a film set story. As the director calls "Cut!" for the umpteenth time, the actress playing the leading role shouts, "What do you want from me?" / She storms off stepping on the dwarf's foot, causing him to shout "Yeow!" For good measure she also kicks the giant 's foot and he says "Yeow!" too — (but more in surprise than pain). \ "All I did was ask for her autograph!" he complains.

102a 酉 yǒu whisky bottle

一	一	一	一	西	西	酉

102 酒 jiǔ liquor

Radical 氵

They had put water in the whisky bottle, pretending it was liquor. / The two teddies passed the bottle between them (pretending to be drunk) and thought this was a great joke.

103 从 cóng from

Radical 人
4 strokes

從

person 人 (12) + person 人 (12) = from 从

Note the second stroke, which is truncated into a drop. this is a rare occasion when “person” on the left-hand side of a character does not take the form 亻.

For pronunciations beginning with “c” see the note for Character 104 below.

104a 寸 cùn inch

一	寸	寸
---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

Note that the vertical stroke is off center and has a hook at the end.

104 村 cūn village

Radical 木
7 strokes

tree 木 (10a) + inch 寸 (104a) = village 村

Pronunciations beginning with “c” (unless they begin “ch”) give us a problem: the letter “c” in the pinyin system stands for the sound “ts”, but hardly any english words begin with “ts”. Our solution to this problem is to use soundwords which begin “st” instead. So if a soundword begins “st” you must reverse the s and t to get the pronunciation. there are 14 such characters in the book; the next one isn’t until Chapter 15.

[村子 (17) cūnzi village]

一	十	才	木	村	村
---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--

They have to measure the girth of the tree in inches, to check that it will be the right size for the village square. / The giant has offered to erect it for them and it will look stunning once it is decorated.

105 时 shí time

Radical 日
7 strokes

時

sun 日 (6) + inch 寸 (104a) = time 时

小时 (50) xiǎoshí hour

[有时 (63) yǒushí sometimes]

一	丨	日	日	时	时	时
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--

The sun dial is marked out in inches to tell the time. / The fairy is sitting on

過 road 辶 (26a) + inch 寸 (104a) = cross 过

过来 (65) guòlái come across

过去 (86) guòqù in the past

一寸寸寸寸过

The snail on the road can only travel an inch every hour so it takes all day to cross the road. / The ghostly dwarf, who's been assigned to protect him, urges him on, "Go, go, go!" (he wants to get home for his tea).

107 身 shēn body

Radical 身
7 strokes

It is worth writing this character a few times to get the hang of the stroke order.

[动身 (58) dòng shēn set off (on journey)]

[身边 (41) shēnbiān on one's person]

/ (The railway has been attacked and there is a gap in the tracks over the bridge). The giant lets the wheels of the train run over his body and saves the day — but he's now too tired to go back to his usual job of shunting carriages.

108a 射 shè to shoot body 身 (107) + inch 寸 (104a) = shoot 射

Note that the final stroke of “body” gets truncated here.

The sniper moves his body forward an inch at a time until he has a clear view and can shoot at his target. / [No pronunciation needed]

108 谢 xiè thank

Radical 讠
12 strokes

words 讠 (67c) + shoot 射 (108a) = thank 谢

[谢谢你 (51) xièxie nǐ thank you]

讠	讠	讠	讠	讠	讠	讠	讠	讠	讠

The bank robbers had used their guns to shoot holes in the bank's door spelling out the words "thank you" before they left. / The two dwarves agree to let them stash the money in their shed until the heat is off. (Try to visualize both of the dwarves — maybe one is holding open the shed door, while the other one keeps a look out for the cops!)

The character picture for “of ” on this page is a great example of how character pictures can work their magic.

If you just look at the shape of the character 之 on its own, does it suggest “of ”? No, it doesn’t. But if you look at the character picture for a moment, and then look back to the character itself, don’t you now immediately see the prow of a ship and the swell of a wave on the ocean? This image is now probably with you for life, reminding you of the ship’s name “Pride of the Seas”. If this works for you, then the character picture has done its job! The fact that the character doesn’t actually have anything to do with ships doesn’t matter at all.

We treat this as a basic building block as it is traditionally a picture.

[小羊 (50) xiǎoyáng lamb]
[山羊 (110) shānyáng goat]

/ The stupid sheep has got his head stuck in the spokes of the wagon wheel.

The tree is a good place for the escaped sheep to hide while he changes his appearance. / But the dwarf (shepherd) finds him and yanks him off back to the flock.

113 班 bān team

Radical 王
10 strokes

king 王 (60a) + knife 刂 (74a) + king 王 (60a) = team 班

You will see that we have broken this character down into three parts, and so the equation and story have three components to them. We will only do this for a few characters where it seems “natural” to do so. When a character is made up of three parts aBC, it usually splits most naturally into a and BC, because the combination BC already means something. examples are 倒, 哪, 谢 (Characters 75, 99 and 108).

Note that the final stroke of the first “king” slopes upwards (compare 54a).

[上班 (42) shàng bān to go to work]
[下班 (43) xià bān leave/finish work]

At the inter-kingdom quiz, the two kings sit on either side of the beautiful jewelled knife that will be presented to the winning team. / For the final deciding question the teams have to identify a picture of the giant in a bandanna.

114 出 chū exit

Radical 山
5 strokes

mountain 山 (110) + mountain 山 (110) = exit 出

The stroke order shows that, despite appearances, this character is not really two mountains!

出来 (65) chūlái come out

出去 (86) chūqù go out

[出口 (5) chūkǒu exit; to export]

(Arriving in the train station in Switzerland) You can see mountain upon mountain out of each exit. / The giant is sitting on one of them chewing gum.

thumb tack 一 (40a) + mouth 口 (5) = stone 石

Notice how the thumb tack has slid off to the side — it is not fixed to the top of the character (as in, for example, 百, Character 40).

You're trying to fix up a notice saying "Slippery Stones" with a thumb tack at the mouth of the cave, but (ironically) it keeps slipping on the stone. / [No pronunciation needed] angry too, as he hands the boy back to his mother. “It’s not safe to be on the mountain alone at your age,” he tells him.

117a dàn dawn

sun 日 (6) + one 一 (1) = dawn 旦

117 但 dàn but

Radical 亻

person 亻 (13a) + dawn 旦 (117a) = but 但

但是 (30) dànshì but
不但 (9) búdàn not only ...

Harry says, “It’s dawn, wake up!” his friend, still half asleep, mumbles, “But, but, but ... it’s still dark!” / “We’ve got to go — the dwarf said the dandelions have to be picked at dawn.” (And we all know how cross he’ll be if they don’t do it right...)

118a 得 get dawn 旦 (117a) + inch 寸 (104a) = get 得

She wakes up at dawn and sees beautiful icicles an inch long at the window. “Get a camera, we must get a picture of these before the sun melts them,” she says. / [No pronunciation needed]

118 得 dé; de; děi 1. obtain 2. way 3. must

Radical 彳
11 strokes

1. step forward 彳 (81a) + get 得 (118a) = obtain 得

2. step forward 彳 (81a) + get 得 (118a) = way 得

3. step forward 彳 (81a) + get 得 (118a) = must 得

This is the one and only character in HSK Level a which has three pronunciations — and three meanings to go with them. When 得 is pronounced dé it means “to obtain”; pronounced de it means “in such a way that”, and pronounced děi it means “have to”.

To keep these straight we have a special story with three parts: the setting is the medal presentation ceremony at the Olympic games (you can decide for yourself which event they have all taken part in or just make one up — the sillier it is, the better!) Now, whenever you see this character and break it down into “step forward” plus “get”, picture the medal ceremony, and then you can run through the story for each of the medals, Gold, Silver and Bronze and recall each of the three meanings which go with them. You have to look at the context to see which of these is appropriate in each case — as you have to with characters which have two pronunciations (and which have Wild West/ spaceship or film set stories). Of course you'll get used to seeing this character and knowing the pronunciation automatically before long.

得到 (74) dédào get, obtain

取得 (88) qǔdé achieve, obtain

1.

He steps forward to get the gold medal — he had won by obtaining the best overall score. / But there was a dearth of gold so the fairy had conjured up a temporary medal until a proper one could be made.

2.

He steps forward to get the silver medal — the way he had performed had been the best (but he had lost technical marks). / The robot polishes the medal as it's dusty and he likes all silver things (like himself) to be shiny.

3.

He steps forward to get the bronze medal — he had done all the bits he must do (the compulsory bits) but nothing more. / Teddy puts the bronze medal on a daisy chain to try and cheer up the third place competitor.

120 以 yǐ using

Radical 人

4 strokes

barb 丿 (120a) + a drop 丶 (22a) + person 人 (12) = using 以

The meaning of this character is hard to pin down in English: depending on how it is used, it could be translated by words such as “using”, “by means of”, “according to”, “in order to”, etc. It is also used in “positional” compounds such as the two given here.

Radical 丶

為

power 力 (14) + a drop 丶 (22a) + a drop 丶 (22a) = act as; for 为

By now you'll be familiar with the idea of using film set stories for characters with two meanings and two pronunciations (which differ only in tone). In future we'll rely on the film icon to signal them for you.

Note that the stroke order for the “power” part of this character is non-standard. This is because it is inherited from the traditional form (shown in the box). Compare this with the stroke order for Character 123 which follows.

为了 (66) wèile for, because of 以为 (120) yǐwéi think (wrongly) 为什么 (35, 34) wèishénme why, what for 丶 丿 力 为

🏺 The potion which confers great power from only a couple of drops is the Gauls' magic potion in the film of “asterix”. On the film set the main actor has to act as if he is strong. / The fairy conjures up fake weights for him to lift. The dwarf grumbles as he carries the weights. 丶 “Why does somebody have to carry these things around for him?”

123 办 bàn manage

Radical 力

4 strokes

辦

power 力 (14) + eight 八 (20) = manage 办

Both this and the previous character consist of “power” plus a couple of drops. To distinguish between them, we have cheated slightly here, and think of this one as being “power” plus “eight”.

办法 (87) bànfǎ method

[办公 (119) bàngōng (office) work]

124a / “label”

丿

The “label” is always attached to a horizontal stroke, as in the following character. Compare this with “beret” (89a) which is a longer, more gently sloping stroke (usually attached to a vertical stroke), and “a drop” (22a) which is not attached to anything (unless sitting on top of something).

124b 厶 “clouds” label 丩 (124a) + one 一 (1) = clouds 厶

There's a label on the side of the unicorn in the safari park (saying “unicorn”), because he usually has his head in the clouds. (People kept mistaking him for a horse because they couldn't see his horn when it was in the clouds). / [No pronunciation needed]

124 干 dry; work gān; gàn

Radical 一
3 strokes

乾 幹

one 一 (1) + ten 十 (4) = dry; work 干

干 gàn also means the trunk or main part of something. Gān and gàn were once two separate characters (which is why there are two traditional forms).

When 干 appears as part of another character, we will use the meaning “dry” in the equation and the story.

[干杯 (11) gān bēi Bottoms up! (on drinking a toast)]

[干吗 (45) gàn ma what (are you) doing?]

 Picture the unicorn standing on a white cross on the floor, which is his mark on the film set of “The Wizard of Oz” — they are filming in the emerald City. everything is ready but they must wait for dry weather. / Then the giant can erect the lighting gantry. The dwarf kicks the gantry poles angrily. \ “When are we going to get any work done?”

125 午 wǔ noon

Radical 丩
4 strokes

clouds 厶 (124b) + ten 十 (4) = noon 午

Another way of looking at this character is to see it as “label” plus “dry”. Our rule, for deciding when to use clouds and when to use label, will be: if we can see clouds on the top of a character we will use clouds, otherwise we use label.

上午 (42) shàngwǔ morning
中午 (33) zhōngwǔ noon
下午 (43) xiàwǔ afternoon

The morning clouds go in one direction, the afternoon clouds go in another direction, so when the clouds cross it must be noon. / Teddy whoops with delight, as this means it's lunchtime.

126a 禾 hé grain

beret 冫 (89a) + tree 木 (10a) = grain 禾

Notice how “beret” differs from “label”.

The meaning of “grain” embraces all cereal plants, including rice.

一	二	千	牙	禾
---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--

The beret (that they’d been using as a frisbee) is now stuck in a tree and they won’t be able to retrieve it without trampling the grain growing around the tree. (Who’s going to be the one to ask the farmer if they can get it?) / [No pronunciation needed]

126 和 hé; huó 1. with 2. mix

Radical 禾
8 strokes

1. grain 禾 (126a) + mouth 口 (5) = with 和

2. grain 禾 (126a) + mouth 口 (5) = mix 和

和 hé means “with” in the sense of “along with” and is often translated simply as “and”.

[和好 (18) héhǎo become reconciled]

一	二	千	牙	禾	禾	和	和
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--

1.

♣ The cowboy rolls the grain around in his mouth and says, “This needs something to go with it.” / The fairy says, “Try it with some of my herbs.”

2.

🚀 (A baby alien has sneaked aboard the spaceship) They find it sitting on the storeroom floor, stuffing grain in its mouth and getting all the carefully-labeled grain samples mixed up. / The ghostly fairy who protects the planet comes to fetch the alien and take it home.

You'll want to consolidate this progress so that you don't "lose" the characters you've learned. One way is to keep up with the "Test Yourself" blocks such as the one below, whenever you meet one in the book. You can also test yourself on the characters more systematically by writing out the characters from each chapter on a piece of paper or card (good writing practice too!).

When you forget a character (it happens), go back and visualize the story again. You will almost certainly find you had read through it previously without letting it sink in. Visualize it again and try and add one or two details to the scene to make it "your own".

133a 主 plant

一	二	丰	主
---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--

133 生 shēng life

Radical 丩
5 strokes

label 丩 (124a) + plant 主 (133a) = life 生

Recall the discussion (Character 125) about labels and clouds. Although you could see “clouds” in this character, they are not at the top of the character (which is where clouds rightfully belong), so we use label instead.

This character has various meanings connected with life, in particular birth and growth; it can also mean unripe, uncooked.

生日 (6) shēngrì birthday

[出生 (114) chūshēng to be born]

学生 (82) xuéshēng student, pupil

[女生 (15) nǚshēng female student]

Every house in the village has plants with labels displayed in the windows. It's the custom that when a new child is born, a plant is chosen to symbolize their life (and labeled with the child's name). / [DIY pronunciation]

丿 女 女 女 女 女 姓 姓

(A group of women are talking together) “even though it’s the woman who gives birth to life, the baby still gets the man’s surname.” / They have been watching the dwarf across the road putting up his name on a shingle.

136 星 xīng star

Radical 日

9 strokes

sun 日 (6) + life 生 (133) = star 星

So here we have two mini phonetic series: Characters 133, 134 (“sheng”), and 135, 136 (“xing”). You can see from the similarity of these two sounds that they had a common origin.

[星星 xīngxīng star]

[明星 (77) míngxīng (movie) star]

“Our sun is vital to all life on our planet, yet it is just a star.” / The giant, lying on his back on the shingle on the beach, looks up at the night sky and ponders.

137a 𠂔 “calf ”

label 丩 (124a) + earth 土 (54a) = calf 𠂔

If you take the tail off the character for cow (Character 384) this is what you get!

You see a label lying on the earth— the calf has been newly tagged on its ear (but has managed to dislodge his label by rubbing his ear on the ground). / [No pronunciation needed]

137 先 xiān ahead

Radical 儿

(The cattle are all falling sick — only a calf is left standing) the calf goes to the mouth of the cave to inform the vet. / The dwarf assistant listens to the symptoms and says dismissively, “All this fuss, it’s probably only gout.”

139 洗 xǐ wash

Radical 氵

9 strokes

water 氵 (78a) + ahead 先 (137) = wash 洗

[干洗 (124) gānxǐ dry cleaning]

There's only limited hot water in the rooming house so she races to get to the bathroom ahead of everyone else and have a good wash. / But Teddy has beaten her to it, and is washing his sheets in the sink.

A word about how you can make use of the compounds we give with the characters. the compounds show you how the character in question combines to make words, when used together with other characters you've already learned. So you can use compounds as a revision aid for characters you've already learned: look at the compound and see if you can remember what the component characters mean. Sometimes it's interesting and instructive to see how the meaning of the compound as a whole relates to the meanings of the characters which make it up. A good example is that the literal meaning of 先生 is "ahead [in] life" (i.e. "senior").

You can also turn this around and use compounds as another way of remembering how to pronounce characters. You will probably recognize many words (such as xiānshēng) which you've come across in your Chinese language lessons. If you now realize that 先 is the first character in xiānshēng then you know it is pronounced xiān. Of course the soundwords are there to help you with pronunciations, but there's no such thing as too much help!

140 可 kě may

Radical 口
5 strokes

mouth 口 (5) + nail 丁 (81b) = may 可

The meaning is "may" in the sense of "being permitted to", but since this is a bit abstract we will cheat here and use a play on words: we will associate this character with Mayday celebrations in an English village, where children dance round a Maypole.

Note that the shaft of the nail is displaced to the right to make room for the mouth.

Some books advocate a different stroke order, where the whole of “nail” is drawn first, and then “mouth”. Occasionally we point out alternative stroke orders (we already mentioned alternatives for Character 127). Sometimes the different versions exist because one is more firmly grounded in the “traditional” way of doing things and one is more “modern”, but in other cases there simply seem to be two accepted ways of writing the character. Where we point out alternatives, either will produce a perfectly well-drawn character and so you can choose which to adopt. All this doesn’t alter the fact that for the overwhelming majority of characters there is a single stroke order which is accepted as being “correct”.

可以 (120) kěyǐ may, be allowed

可是 (30) kěshì but (colloq)

The carpenter holds nails in his mouth while fixing up the May pole for the May celebrations. / Teddy cuts up strips of curtains for the streamers.

141 河 hé river

Radical 氵
8 strokes

water 氵 (78a) + may 可 (140) = river 河

There is also another character for “river” (Character 148) at the end of this chapter.

[运河 (57) yùnhé canal]

[星河 (136) xīnghé the Milky Way]

Water for the dunking stool at the May celebrations has to be brought from the river. / The fairy puts herbs into it to hide the smell!

142 何 hé what

Radical 亻
7 strokes

person 亻 (13a) + may 可 (140) = what 何

Harry arrives at the May celebrations, and a drink is pressed into his hand. he drinks, but splutters, “What is this stuff?” / It’s the fairy’s new herbal drink (and the fairy looks piqued).

143a 阿 ā ah mound 阝 (96a) + may 可 (140) = ah 阿

Up on the mound sits the May queen on her throne. everyone goes “Ah” when they see her, she looks so splendid. / [No pronunciation needed]

143 啊 ā (a) eh!

Radical 口
10 strokes

mouth 口 (5) + ah 阿 (143a) = eh! 啊

This character is used as an exclamation, added to a sentence to express surprise, admiration, regret, etc. depending on the context. When at the end of a sentence, it has a neutral tone; if the preceding word ends in -n or -ng it changes into 哪 (Character 99) and is pronounced na.

The doctor says, “Open your mouth and say “ah” — yes, these tonsils will have to come out.” “that bad, eh?” the patient says in surprise. / The giant says “Ah” in sympathy (he had to have his tonsils out as a child and he’d cried!)

144 首 shǒu head

Radical 人
9 strokes

feet 足 (90a) + self 自 (94) = head 首

You emerge from the forest to find a road at last, but scratch your head: which way should you walk? / The dwarf grumbles, "Whichever way we go, I doubt it will be the right one."

146 发 fā (fà) send out

Radical 又
5 strokes

發

a drop 丶 (22a) + friend 友 (53) = send out 发

一	丿	㇏	发	发
---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--

She is writing her Christmas cards and puts a drop of perfume on the cards to her special friends before sending them out. / The giant gets a large drop on his as he lives far, far away (and the perfume has to last until the card gets there).

This looks like a “drop” added to a modification of “friend” (Character 53) so we have used the idea of a “special friend” in the story to acknowledge this. Notice the unusual first stroke.

Pronounced fā this character means “to emit, send out, develop”. With the other pronunciation fà (and another traditional form) it also means “hair”.

出发 (114) chūfā set out (on journey)
[发出 (114) fāchū send out, emit]
[发明 (77) fāmíng invent, invention]
发生 (133) fāshēng happen, take place

147 工 gōng to work

Radical 工

一	丨	工
---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

/ You trudge off every day to work at the wheel factory, and the only thing you look forward to is the giant sounding his gong for tea breaks and for the end of the shift.

148 江 jiāng river

Radical 氵
6 strokes

water 氵 (78a) + work 工 (147) = river 江

We have already seen the other character for river (Character 142).

149 厂 chǎng cliff

Radical 厂
2 strokes

廠

This character, whose basic meaning is “cliff ”, appears in quite a few composite characters. On its own, however, the character nowadays means “factory”.

工厂 (147) gōngchǎng factory

一	厂
---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

/ [DIY Pronunciation]. This is one of the very few basic building blocks that has a DIY pronunciation, so you can choose simply to learn the pronunciation, or make up a wheel story. Perhaps Teddy is rolling a large wheel off a cliff, almost hitting Mr Chang (Chang later tells this tale to his grandson, who we will meet in the next chapter working on the spaceship).

150a  drag

“Drag” is different from “cliff ” — the first stroke is a sloping line, and the angle between the lines is more than 90 degrees.

一	厂
---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

150b  “piled up”

trash heap. / [No pronunciation needed]

150 后 hòu rear

Radical 丿
6 strokes

後

drag 扌 (150a) + piled up 𠂔 (150b) = rear 后

Breaking up this character into “drag” and “piled up” is cheating a bit, as the horizontal stroke joined on to drag is actually something else.

This character originally meant “empress” but has also taken on the role of the simplified form of 後 and is now mostly used in this sense.

后边 (41) hòubiān rear, at the back

以后 (120) yǐhòu after, later

[后天 (76) hòutiān the day after tomorrow]

一 扌 尸 𠂔 后 后

151a 𠂔 “comb”

一 𠂔 𠂔 𠂔

151 而 ér and yet

Radical 一
6 strokes

thumb tack 一 (40a) + comb 而 (151a) = and yet 而

This character occasionally means simply “and”, but usually indicates a contrast and so might be translated as “but”, “yet”, or “on the other hand”.

[从而 (103) cóng’ér thus, thereby]
[而后 (150) érhòu after that; and then]

(Using a comb as a musical instrument) he had marked his notes on the comb with thumb tacks, and yet it still sounded awful. / The fairy fled, saying “I’ve remembered an urgent appointment elsewhere!”

152a 扌 hand

This is the form which 手 “hand” (Character 31) usually takes when it forms the left-hand side of a character. Note the stroke order (compared with that for 手), and also note that the final stroke is drawn upwards.

152 找 zhǎo look for

Radical 扌
7 strokes

hand 扌 (152a) + dagger 戈 (32a) = look for 找

Compare 找 with the far more common character 我 meaning “I” (Character 32). here the hand and dagger are separate, whereas in Character 32 they were fused together; a difference reflected in the stories for these two characters.

[找到 (74) zhǎodào to find]

一	扌	扌	扌	扌	找	找	找
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--

At the crime scene the detective pulls the policeman’s hand away from the dagger saying, “We must look for fingerprints first.” / Teddy’s alibi is that he was watching the jousting on TV.*

153 打 dǎ hit

Radical 扌
5 strokes

hand 扌 (152a) + nail 丁 (81b) = hit 打

[打动 (58) dǎdòng to touch; move]

[打倒 (75) dǎdǎo overthrow; Down with...!]

一	扌	扌	扌	扌	打
---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--

154 对 duì correct

Radical 又
5 strokes

對

right hand 又 (52) + inch 寸 (104a) = correct 对

The basic meaning of this character is “facing towards” and it has also come to mean “line up”, “match up”, “to be correct” and “to treat” (a person in a certain way). It is also used as a measure word for pairs of objects.

[对手 (31) duìshǒu opponent]

[对了 (66) duì le correct (at last); aha!]

ㄅ	ㄨ	ㄣ	对	对
---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--

If, when you shake hands, you have your right hands lined up to the nearest inch, you will be doing it in the correct way. / The ghostly etiquette-guarding dwarf makes the class practice daily.

155 树 shù tree

Radical 木
9 strokes

樹

tree 木 (10a) + correct 对 (154) = tree 树

This is the modern character for “a tree”, rather than using 10a on its own.

[树干 (124) shùgàn a tree trunk]

一	十	才	木	朩	朩	朩	朩	树	树

156a 田 tián field

156 男 nán male

Radical 田
7 strokes

field 田 (156a) + power 力 (14) = male 男

This and 女 (Character 15) are useful characters to know when identifying toilets!

[男人⁽¹²⁾ nánrén man (i.e. not woman)]

Out in the field the farmer needs more power to work the churn. “I’ll need another male,” he says. / The fairy flicks her wand and a nanny goat appears! (“Oops—wrong sort!” she says).

157 里 lǐ (li) in Radical 里

7 strokes

裏 裡

field 田 (156a) + earth 土 (54a) = in 里

Although this looks like “field” plus “earth”, the stroke order shows that it isn’t, really. (The same situation occurred for “exit”, Character 114). In writing the character some books suggest writing the fifth and sixth strokes in the other order.

This character means “in”, and is usually a suffix (i.e. it comes after a noun), where it often loses its tone. There are two variants of the traditional form. a 里 is also an old measure of distance (roughly half a mile).

里边 (41) lǐbiān inside, in 这里 (26) zhèlǐ here

160a 匚 outer limits

一	匚
---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

This usually forms a 3-sided enclosure, with another character inside it. Note the hook at the bottom of the second stroke. For the stories, think of the “outer limits of the kingdom” — a desolate, dangerous area of rocky hills, probably inhabited by bandits.

160 同 tóng same

Radical 冂
6 strokes

outer limits 冂 (160a) + piled up 冂 (150b) = same 同

This also means “together with”, “along with”.

同时 (105) tóngshí simultaneously

同学 (82) tóngxué classmate

不同 (9) bùtóng different

[同样 (112) tóngyàng same]

At the outer limits of the kingdom were piled up heaps of discarded boxes, all the same. / The fairy used her magic tongs to arrange them in neat piles.

161 心 xīn heart

Radical 心

4 strokes

This appears at the bottom of a large number of characters, when it takes a slightly squashed form. It can also take the form 忄 when appearing on the left-hand side of characters (see 339a).

Just like the english word “heart”, it means not just the heart in your body, but also “core”, “center”, and “feelings”.

[安心 (91) ānxīn to be content]

[中心 (33) zhōngxīn center (often used in phrases like “shopping center”)]

[用心 (130) yòngxīn to apply oneself to]

[小心 (50) xiǎoxīn cautious]

/ The heart of the wheel (its hub) is as big as the giant's shin bone.

162 必

bì inevitably

Radical 必
5 strokes

heart 心 (161) + slide ㄣ (34b) = inevitably 必

It is natural to think of this as “heart” together with an extra stroke, but watch the stroke order.

[必要 (101) bìyào necessary]

[不必 (9) búbì don't need to]

In the theme park there is a huge slide through the heart of the forest — inevitably it gets clogged up (with twigs and leaves). / Each day the dwarf has to send his beaver down the slide to clean it out.

163 相 xiāng; xiàng mutual; appearance

Radical 木
9 strokes

tree 木 (10a) + eye 目 (93) = mutual; appearance 相

When this character appears as part of another character (for example in Character 164 which follows this one), we will use “mutual” (and not “appearance”) in the equation and story.

[相同 (160) xiāngtóng identical, same]

一	十	才	木	相	相	相	相	相	相
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

 Eyes peering out from behind all the trees suggest Sherwood Forest, and the film set of “robin hood” — but this is a Chinese remake! at the auditions the actors are milling about, profuse with their mutual praise. / Particularly two giants from Shanghai, auditioning for the part of Little John. Two dwarves from Shanghai are also competing for the role (sadly not having understood that the role of Little John calls for a giant rather than a dwarf). \ They won’t be told and are spending ages perfecting their appearance.

164 想 xiǎng Think about

What can you do when you find that you've forgotten a composite character (apart from resolving to go back at the first opportunity and visualize the story again)?

In the equation $a+B=C$ you will know a and B , but can't remember C . The first step is to try to get the scene, that is, the setting for the story. What do a and B together evoke? Logic may help here: try combining a and B in different ways. Try a in B , a hits B , a uses B for something, etc. (and also the other way round: B in a as well as a in B — usually one will make sense much more than the other). We've tried to make the stories recoverable like this, as far as possible. Once you have the scene, C will follow. It is this second stage (getting from the scene to C) that is often bizarre, silly or illogical.

Chapter 12

Notice how similar the character for “shelter” is to the character for “cliff ” (in Chapter 11), and see how the character pictures help you remember which is which. The drop in the character for “shelter” is a drop of rain, which is much more relevant to “shelter” than it would be to “cliff ”.

168a 𠂇 surpass

一 𠂇 二 𠂇

We use this fragment in the following character and will see it again much later, in Character 787.

168 年 nián year

Radical 丩
6 strokes

clouds 𩇑 (124b) + surpass 𠂔 (168a) = year 年

今年 (166) jīnnián this year

去年 (86) qùnián last year

明年 (77) míngnián next year

“These clouds surpass anything we’ve seen all year.” (picture a group of glider pilots looking at the sky and judging which clouds will give the best thermal up-currents). / [DIY pronunciation]

169a 𠂔 to strike

several 凡 (7) + right hand 又 (52) = strike 𠂔

Think of striking something forcefully with a long pole (see 190a below).

(An attempt at a world record) The challenger shakes hands with several of the dignitaries who wish him luck, and then sees how many garden gnomes he can knock over with a single strike with his long pole. / [No

[pronunciation needed]

169 没 méi not

Radical 氵
7 strokes

water 氵 (78a) + strike 攴 (169a) = not 没

Although the literal meaning is “to sink” or “submerge”, this is more commonly seen as a negator for yǒu (Character 63). “Not” for most other verbs is conveyed by Character 9.

没有 (63) méiyǒu have not, does not
[没用 (130) méiyòng useless]

(At the funfair) at one sideshow he had to strike, with a pole, anything that appeared out of the water, but everything stayed submerged and he complained, “There is not a thing to hit!” / The fairy suggested to him that he should try his luck at the maze instead.

170 广 guǎng shelter

Radical 广
3 strokes

廣

This character, whose basic meaning was a shelter (it is a picture of a lean-to structure), appears in quite a few characters, usually as an enclosure. On its own, however, the character nowadays means “broad”. (Notice how “broad” also appears in the story).

[广大 (47) guǎngdà vast; extreme]

[广告 (138) guǎnggào advertisement]

/ (At the Formula 1 team’s secret test track) They have to build a shelter for the spare wheels and other equipment, broad enough to accommodate the ghostly teddy and his gang (who guard it all).

171 床 chuáng bed

Radical 广
7 strokes

牀

shelter 广 (170) + tree 木 (10a) = bed 床

[河床 (141) héchuáng riverbed]

[机床 (10) jīchuáng machine tool]

[床上 (42) chuángshang in bed]

He took a tree into the shelter to make a bed. / [DIY pronunciation]

172 长 cháng; zhǎng 1. long 2. chief

Radical 丿
4 strokes

長

Normally “chang” would be a DIY pronunciation, but we need a spaceship story here!

When 长 appears as part of another character we will use “long” in the equation and story.

[长江 (148) chángjiāng the Yangtse River]

[长大 (47) zhǎngdà to grow up]

[生长 (133) shēngzhǎng to grow, grow up]

[班长 (113) bānzhǎng leader (of team)]

🚗 / On the bridge of the spaceship the captain looked at the long row of wheels on the engineer's desk. He had no idea which one to turn, so sent the fairy flitting off to find Mr Chang, the engineer.

2.

♣ / “Big Chief Wheel” was so called because he collected wagon wheels from raids on the passing wagon trains. Teddy made jangling wind chimes out of the wheel bolts (so that the wind proclaimed how many wagons the Chief had raided).

173a 弓 gōng a bow

This is a (stringed) bow, for a violin or for archery.

173 张 zhāng sheet (of paper)

Radical 弓
7 strokes

張

a bow 弓 (173a) + long 长 (172) = sheet 张

This is another character which can act as a measure word, as shown by the following compound.

[一张床 (1, 171) yì zhāng chuáng a bed]

(In archery practice) The chief tries to show off by taking his long bow and aiming at sheets of paper pinned to trees in the forest. / The giant tries to put him off by jangling his keys loudly.

174 本 běn source

Radical 木
5 strokes

Originally this meant “root” of a tree, then “source” or “basis”, hence “book”. It can be used to mean “this”, and is the measure word for books. This is a good illustration of the way in which characters can come to mean various things down the years.

本子 (17) běnzi notebook
[本来 (65) běnlái originally, at first]
[本地 (54) běndì local]
[日本 (6) Rìběn Japan]

一	十	才	木	本
---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--

/ The source of the wheel (i.e. where it was made) was written round its edge, so Teddy looked to see where his bun was made!

175 体 tǐ body

Radical 亻
7 strokes

體

person 亻 (13a) + source 本 (174) = body 体

身体 (107) shēntǐ human body; health
[个体 (19) gètǐ (a person's) build]

ノ イ 仁 什 体 体 体

Harry was reading the source book on anatomy and when he opened it a hologram of a body floated out from the pages. / Then Teddy hopped out dressed up as a teacher and started pointing out all the different body parts.

176 书 shū book

Radical 丨
4 strokes

書

[书法 (87) shūfǎ calligraphy]
[一本书 (1, 174) yì běn shū a book]

乚 弓 书 书

/ The giant balanced his book on the wheel but the wheel turned and the book fell on his shoe-polish.

177 立 lì To stand

Radical 立
5 strokes

lid 亠 (25b) + feet 𠂔 (90a) = stand 立

This can also mean “at once”.

[自立 (94) zìlì stand on one's own feet; support oneself]
[树立 (155) shùlì to erect, set up]

丶 一 丶 丶 立

He was trying to close the lid of his bulging suitcase, but in the end he had to use his feet and stand on it. / When he got home, the dwarf realized he'd crushed his sun-cream, which had leaked out (and ruined his hat).

178 位 wèi place

Radical 亻
7 strokes

person 亻 (13a) + stand 立 (177) = place 位

Literally a place or seat, this character is more commonly used as a polite measure word for people.

[地位 (54) dìwèi status, position]

ノ 亻 亻 亻 位 位 位 位

(At a group photo) Harry asks where to stand and they find him a place. / “Wait!” cries the dwarf photographer, “I’ll find him a place when I’m ready.”

179 拉 lā (lǎ) pull

Radical 扌
8 strokes

hand 扌 (152a) + stand 立 (177) = pull 拉

一	丨	才	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--

(On the slopes of a volcano) a huge hand appears and helps the boy to stand, giving him a strong pull. / The giant points to the approaching lava (which the boy hadn't seen).

180 啦 la exclamation

Radical 口
11 strokes

mouth 口 (5) + pull 拉 (179) = exclamation 啦

This is an abbreviation for 了啊 (“le” plus “a”, Characters 66 and 143).

丨	口	口	一	叶	叶	叶	叶	叶	叶
啦

(Think of this as a continuation of the previous story) The boy points at the mouth of the cave, pulling at his rescuer's sleeve. “Over there ! Look !” he exclaims. / The robot, covered in bits of lava, has reached the safety of the cave and is trying to clean himself up.

181 火 huǒ fire

Radical 火
4 strokes

Supposedly a picture of a flame with two sparks, but you may prefer to think of it as a person running, hands in the air, shouting “fire!” It takes a severely squashed form when appearing at the bottom of characters (see 185a). Some books give a different stroke order.

火车 (83) huǒchē a train

丶	丿	㇏	火
---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--

/ The wheel is on fire but the ghostly teddy (who was supposed to be guarding it) can't put out the flames because when he tries to pick up the hose his paw passes straight through it!

182 灯 dēng lamp

Radical 火
6 strokes

燈

fire 火 (181) + nail 丁 (81b) = lamp 灯

电灯 (159) diàndēng electric light

丶	丿	㇏	火	丁	灯
---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--

(In an old castle) “If we could find a way of putting some fire on a nail in the wall we could have a lamp in the room.” / The giant dunks twigs in candle-wax to make the first rudimentary lamp. (Does this story sound familiar?)

183 占 zhàn occupy

Radical 卜
5 strokes

fortune teller 卜 (42a) + mouth 口 (5) = occupy 占

The fortune teller's “drop” is a short horizontal line here (see the note for 42a).

The fortune teller's magic mouth was so popular that her tent was always occupied, and so a big crowd formed outside. / The dwarf janitor had to be called to clear them away.

184 站 zhàn station

Radical 立
10 strokes

stand 立 (177) + occupy 占 (183) = station 站

This also means a (bus) “stop”, or “to stand”.

Notice the final stroke of “stand” has a definite slope (compare the note for 54a).

车站 (83) chēzhàn (bus) stop, station

You're standing impatiently outside the occupied toilets at the train station (and your train is due any minute). / The dwarf is sitting in the janitor's office (and is in no mood to be helpful).

185a 火 fire

This is the form taken by “fire” when appearing as the bottom part of other characters.

185 点 diǎn speck

Radical 灠
9 strokes

occupy 占 (183) + fire 灠 (185a) = speck 点

This is used for any dot, point or speck, including the marks on a clock face, hence it also means “o’clock”.

点心 (161) diǎnxīn dim sum, snack

[地点 (54) dìdiǎn venue]

一点儿 (1, 21) yìdiǎnr a bit, a tiny amount

[有点儿 (63, 21) yǒudiǎnr slightly; somewhat]

All the places round the camp fire were occupied, except two seats with white specks on them. / It was toothpaste left by the two teddies who’d gone off to the dentist.

186 店 diàn store

Radical 广

8 strokes

shelter 广 (170) + occupy 占 (183) = store 店

This “store” is a shop where you buy things, not a place where you stash things away.

[书店 (176) shūdiàn bookstore]

[酒店 (102) jiǔdiàn liquor store; pub]

丶	㇏	广	庂	広	庄	店	店
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--

If you occupy the shelter for a certain length of time, you are allowed to turn it into a store. / The two dwarves set up a shop selling dentist 's supplies (picture them surrounded by false teeth, drills, etc.)

Chapter 13

There are no new building blocks needed for the characters in this chapter — you have already met and learned all the building blocks you will need.

187 果 guǒ fruit

Radical 木
8 strokes

field 田 (156a) + tree 木 (10a) = fruit 果

Note that you don't simply write “field” then “tree” (this also happened for Character 157).

[如果 (80) rúguǒ if]
[后果 (150) hòuguǒ consequence]

The developers want to dig up the field with the tree in it, but can't because the tree produces a rare fruit. / The ghostly teddy who looks after the tree says, “Go away, Go away!”

188 棵 kē number of trees

Radical 木
12 strokes

(In school) Next to their pictures, the words for the fruits are written up during the lesson. / In the next lesson the dwarf teaches them how to make lemon curd (and is irritated at having to sit in for the cookery teacher).

190a 攴 to tap

clouds 厶 (124b) + shears 乂 (25a) = tap 攴

This component always appears as the right-hand side of a character.

Compare it with “pursue” (506a) which looks similar but has one less stroke.

The meaning is “to tap” with a stick — think of it as tapping lightly, in the way that a magician might tap with a wand; as opposed to the heavy swiping motion of “to strike” (169a).

The topiarist was dreaming of trimming clouds with his shears (creating wonderful shapes) — until he felt a tap on his shoulder (waking him up as his lunch break was over). / [No pronunciation needed]

190 政 zhèng government

Radical 攴
9 strokes

upright 正 (29) + tap 攴 (190a) = government 政

A ranger stands by the upright stone and taps it, saying, “You can’t come in here — this is an area protected by the government.” / The dwarf has to take his jungle tours elsewhere.

191a 古 gǔ old ten 十 (4) + mouth 口 (5) = old 古

一	十	十	古	古
---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--

A big cross has been painted above the mouth of one of the caves, to remind the forgetful old woman who lives there which cave is hers! / [No pronunciation needed]

191 故 gù former

Radical 攴
9 strokes

old 古 (191a) + tap 攴 (190a) = former 故

一	十	十	古	古	古	故	故	故
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--

(The finale of the conjuror’s act) “This time I’m going to use this very old wand to tap the hat, because it belonged to my former magic teacher.” / The dwarf assistant wondered what the conjuror would say when he pulled a goose from the hat (as the dwarf hadn’t been able to find a rabbit).

192 姑 gū aunt

Radical 女
8 strokes

woman 女 (15) + old 古 (191a) = aunt 姑

[姑姑 gūgu aunt (father's sister)]

一	丨	女	一	丨	古	古	姑	姑
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--

“Why does that woman look so old?” asks the little girl. “Shh! She’s your Aunt!” her mother replies in a whisper. / “If you’re rude about her the giant will come and fill your mouth with sticky goo.”

193a 胡 hú beard

鬍

old 古 (191a) + moon 月 (61) = beard 胡

This can also mean “reckless” or “crazy” (in which case it acts as its own traditional form).

一	丨	丨	古	古	月	胡	胡	胡
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--

The old moon has become reckless and has let his beard grow. / [No pronunciation needed]

193 湖 hú lake

Radical 氵
12 strokes

water 氵 (78a) + beard 胡 (193a) = lake 湖

丶	勹	レ	冫	冫	冫	冫	冫	冫	冫
湖	湖

The water gets in the wizard's beard as he drinks from the lake. / The lake fairy appears and says, "Who's that? Who's there?"

194 克 kè gram

Radical 十
7 strokes

old 古 (191a) + boy 儿 (21) = gram 克

[马克 (44) mǎkè mark (in exam)]

一	十	十	古	古	声	克
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--

In school the old boys are being taught about grams (they'd learned to use ounces when they were younger). / The dwarf teacher curses the newfangled metric system.

195 辛 xīn spicy

Radical 辛
7 strokes

stand 立 (177) + ten 十 (4) = spicy 辛

This also means “bitter” or “acid” and hence also “hardship”.

(At the children’s party) The children have to stand on the cross painted on the ground until they get the signal to start, then they must follow the spicy smell trail. / The giant had laid the trail by strapping a bag of curry powder to his shin!

196 亲 qīn kin

Radical 立
9 strokes

親

stand 立 (177) + tree 木 (10a) = kin 亲

“Kin” here means blood relatives.

母亲 (127) mǔqīn mother
[亲自 (94) qīnzì in person]

Imagine you are standing in a tree— not an ordinary tree but your family tree, and your kin are all around you. / Some of your kin will be high enough to touch the giant's chin.

197 产 chǎn to produce

Radical 厂
6 strokes

產

stand 立 (177) + cliff 厂 (149) = produce 产

Notice that the bottom stroke of “to stand” has merged with the first stroke of “cliff”. We will see this happening again in a couple of instances (Characters 295 and 640), but it doesn’t always happen (see for example Character 257).

This is an example of the sort of decision we have had to make all the way through writing this book. Do we invent a new fragment made up of “lid” plus “horns”, or do we use “stand” but point out when something slightly non-standard happens? In the end we have done the latter, for three reasons — we want to keep the number of fragments to a minimum, everyone else calls this “stand”, and it is where the character 产 came from. But if you prefer (as always) you can make up stories to go with the other choice.

生 产 (133) shēngchǎn to manufacture
[产 生 (133) chǎnshēng to produce, give rise to]

Imagine standing on a cliff overlooking the sea — it’s the ideal spot for a factory to produce buckets and spades. / Teddy buys the first ones and* slides down the channel leading to the beach.

198 卡 kǎ card

Radical 卜
5 strokes

above 上 (42) + fortune teller 卜 (42a) = card 卡

This character is actually the characters “above” and “below” (Characters 42 and 43), sharing the central horizontal stroke.

The compound below was coined because the sound kǎ resembles the English word “car”.

卡车 (83) kǎchē truck, lorry

Above the fortune teller’s head floats her business card. / Teddy secretly borrows her magic carpet to fly up behind her and get a closer look.

199 还 hái; huán 1. still 2. give back

Radical 辶
7 strokes

還

1. road 辶 (26a) + not 不 (9) = still 还

2. road 辶 (26a) + not 不 (9) = give back 还

还是 (30) háishì still, yet; or

一	丿	才	不	不	还	还
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--

1.

🚀 The spaceship driving instructor says: “It’s not a road, you don’t have to observe the speed limits here.” The pupil replies, “I’m still a bit nervous.” / “Just wait till the fairy shows you how to use the hyper drive!”

2.

👥 (The bandits have robbed a bank and are fleeing the posse) “Let’s not use the road— we might meet the posse and we’d have to give back the gold.” / But the ghostly fairy who guards the bank catches up with them and calls out, “Hands up!”

200 看 kàn look at Radical 目

9 strokes

hand 手 (31) + eye 目 (93) = look at 看

Note the slightly deformed form of “hand”. Be careful not to confuse this character with Character 205 below.

好看 (18) hǎokàn good-looking; interesting

[看来 (65) kànlái it looks as if]

[看法 (87) kànfǎ (negative) opinion]

一	二	三	丿	手	看	看	看	看
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--

(On an old sailing ship) The Captain raises a hand to shade his eyes to look at the enemy ship. / He sees the dwarf loading a cannon.

201 讨 tāo ask for

Radical 讠
5 strokes

討

words 讠 (67c) + inch 寸 (104a) = ask for 讨

This also means “to explore”.

The young child is learning to read, and traces her finger along the words inch by inch— but has to ask for help when any big words crop up. / Teddy has to keep quiet, and is building a tower of blocks in the corner (but every now and again there is a loud crashing sound!)*

202 回 huí return

Radical 囗
6 strokes

enclosed 囗 (24a) + mouth 口 (5) = return 回

This means to return to a place; hence also “to come back” in the sense of to respond or reply; or the number of times an action is repeated.

回来 (65) huílái to return (here)

回去 (86) huíqù to return (there)

[来回 (65) lái huí return (journey), there and back]

丨	冂	冂	冂	冂	回
---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--

The tribe's oracle mouth is displayed in the museum in an enclosed area; people keep returning to see it (because it's so unusual). / The ghostly fairy conjures up a shimmering halo to protect it.

203a 妾 concubine stand 立 (177) + woman 女 (15) = concubine 妾

丶	一	一	一	立	妾	妾	妾
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--

(In the old days) You had to stand with a foot on a woman to claim her as your concubine. / [No pronunciation needed]

203 接 jiē receive

Radical 扌
11 strokes

hand 扌 (152a) + concubine 妾 (203a) = receive 接

一	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	接	接	接
接

He stretches out his hand to the new concubine to receive her into his household. / She has brought a huge plate of jelly as a gift which it took two giants to carry!

204a 𦍋 sheep

This modified form of “sheep” (Character 111) has the tail swept off to one side to make room for another character underneath. The vertical stroke remains one stroke when it is drawn at an angle, even though in some older fonts it looks as if it is broken into two.

204 差 chà fall short

Radical 𦍋
9 strokes

sheep 𦍋 (204a) + work 工 (147) = fall short 差

[差不多 (9, 69) chàbùduō more or less]

[差点儿 (185, 21) chàdiǎnr almost, nearly]

The sheep keep working at their long-jump practice by trying to jump across the river, but keep falling short. / Their dwarf coach keeps a chart of their progress and he's not impressed!

205 着 zháo; zhe (zhāo) 1. to catch 2. -ing

Radical 艹
11 strokes

1. sheep 羊 (204a) + eye 目 (93) = catch 着

2. sheep 羊 (204a) + eye 目 (93) = -ing 着

Don't confuse this character with “look at” (看, Character 200 above).

Pronounced as zháo, this character can have a variety of meanings. “To catch” means “touch”, “come into contact with”, as in “catch a cold”. Pronounced as zhe, it is used after a verb to indicate an action in progress, hence our choice “-ing” for the meaning.

接着 (203) jiēzhe and then; to catch

🤠 In the cowboy town they were keeping an eye on the sheep, hoping to catch the sheep rustlers. / The fairy is teaching the posse jousting skills (ready for the confrontation with the sheep rustlers).

2.

🚀 In the spaceship the sheep is patrolling the corridors, putting his eye to each door to see if he can catch anything funny go ing on. / Imagine his surprise when he sees the robot practicing his juggling !

Chapter 14

Abstract words such as “suddenly” and “again” are very hard to evoke directly with pictures. What we can do, though, is to use the shape of the character to remind you of something tangible and solid — and then link that with the abstract word. Look at the character picture for “suddenly” for example — hopefully in future when you see the fragment ㄝ you will “see” the start of the running track, and hence remember that sprint races start “suddenly”.

With “again”, the shape of the character reminded us of the plunger used to detonate explosives, and so we used this in the character picture. You just have to remember that the particular thing being blown up is an old factory chimney, and the youngster is keen to see this demolition happen again — and again!

If you find that a basic building block strongly suggests to you a different object, then by all means use that image instead of our character picture. All you need to do is conjure up a (vivid!) situation to link this object with the meaning of the basic building block.

乍 suddenly 	再 again

206a 匕 spoon

丿	匕
---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

Notice how this differs from “seven” (Character 37) where the sloping stroke extends to both sides of the hook stroke. Many books give the stroke order as the other way round.

206 能 néng able to

Radical 厶
10 strokes

cocoon 厶 (34a) + moon 月 (61) + two spoons 匕 (206a) = able to 能

The one and only example in this book where a character is broken down into four parts which are then combined in a story.

可能 (140) kěnéng may, possible
[能干 (124) nénggàn capable]
[能力 (14) nénglì ability]

You see someone picking up a cocoon in the moon light ... it's a waiter practicing picking things up using two spoons held in one hand — he has to be able to do this before he can pass his waitering exams. / [DIY pronunciation]

207a 乍 zhà suddenly

207 作 zuò do

Radical 亻
7 strokes

person 亻 (13a) + suddenly 乍 (207a) = do 作

A general-purpose character meaning to do or make (see also Character 210 below).

We've gathered together here the 6 characters with pronunciation “zuo”. two pairs of these characters form mini phonetic series. You might like to have a go at constructing the pronunciation parts of stories for these six. You will need a ghostly archetype each time. If it is any help, the name “Zodiac” has been given to a make of car, and an inflatable boat. If you find this hard work, relax — normal service is resumed after the next six characters (and spare a thought for us as we tried to come up with well over 800 of these stories so that each of them would be memorable!)

工作 (147) gōngzuò work, job
[作文 (25) zuòwén essay]

In a blinding flash, Harry suddenly knew what he had to do. / [DIY pronunciation]

208 昨 zuó yesterday

Radical 日
9 strokes

sun 日 (6) + suddenly 乍 (207a) = yesterday 昨

昨天 (76) zuótiān yesterday

1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

(At the all night birthday party) She sees the sun coming up and suddenly realizes it is a new day. It isn't her birthday any more — that was now yesterday. / [DIY pronunciation]

209 左 zuǒ left (hand)

Radical 工
5 strokes

left hand 𠂇 (53a) + work 工 (147) = left 左

This means the left-hand side, on the left, etc. (rather than the actual hand with fingers).

[左手 (31) zuǒshǒu the left hand]

一	ナ	左	右	左
---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--

(Showing a new employee how to work the big machine in the factory)
“Use your left hand, your wedding ring hand, to work the controls as they are all on the left side of the machine.” / [DIY pronunciation]

210 做 zuò do

Radical 亻
11 strokes

person 亻 (13a) + former 故 (191) = do 做

To do or make; the same meaning as Character 207 but more commonly used.

[做法 (87) zuòfǎ method]

ノ	亻	个	亻	骨	估	估	做	做	做
做

Harry's former wife runs into the church during the wedding ceremony just as he is saying, "I do." / [DIY pronunciation]

Test yourself:	同	店	床	差	位	站	张

	(196)	(188)	(177)	(201)	(181)	(197)	(172)

Character 210 is actually a fairly complicated character, but by now you are probably looking at characters like this and breaking them up automatically into parts without thinking. This just serves to show how far you've come. It may in fact be quite hard now to recall how you felt back at the beginning when characters were all "squiggles".

211 坐 zuò sit

Radical 土
7 strokes

from 从 (103) + earth 土 (54a) = sit 坐

This character doesn't split neatly left-right or top-bottom into its two parts; you could also see this as two people sitting on the earth.

[坐班 (113) zuò bān keep office hours]

ノ	人	人	人	人	坐	坐
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--

From the earth rises a beautiful throne to sit on. / [DIY pronunciation]

212 座 zuò seat

Radical 广
10 strokes

shelter 广 (170) + sit 坐 (211) = seat 座

This is also used as a measure word for buildings and other large objects.

[座位 (178) zuòwèi a seat]

You run into the shelter to sit out the storm — fortunately there's a seat to sit on. / [DIY pronunciation]

213 右 yòu right (hand)

Radical 口
5 strokes

left hand 𠂇 (53a) + mouth 口 (5) = right 右

This is the opposite of “left” (Character 209), not the right hand with fingers.

[右边 (41) yòubiān right-hand side]

[右手 (31) yòushǒu the right hand]

[左右 (209) zuǒyòu approximately]

一ナ才右右

“Put your left hand, the one with your wedding ring on it, over your mouth and stretch your other hand out to the floor so that you lean to the right.” / The dwarf demonstrates how this yoga posture looks (Imagine what he looks like!)

Sorry to keep on about this, but you are remembering to visualize the stories properly, aren't you?

For Character 211, for example, what is the situation? Who is present and what have they done to provoke the throne to rise out of the earth? Are they in a palace, in a clearing in a forest, or where? For Character 212, where are you? Can you “see” the shelter? What sort of shelter is it? Is the sky dark or light? Imagine you are telling a story to a small child who you are trying to keep amused — what details might you add to catch their interest?

214 见 jiàn see

Radical 见
4 strokes

見

outer limits 冂 (160a) + boy 儿 (21) = see 见

Note that the top part of this character is not really “outer limits” (it is narrower and has no hook) — so we are cheating a bit here.

看见 (200) kànjiàn see, catch sight of [会见 (59) huìjiàn to meet (formally)]
[接见 (203) jiējiàn grant an audience]

丨 冂 丩 见

(On a bus tour of the outer limits) In the outer limits the boy wants to go to the loo but won't go behind a bush. “Someone might see me!”. [Notice the boy's legs are held together in the character!] / The two dwarf passengers decide that gentlemen don't go in the bushes, so they will try to wait until the toilets at the next stop.

215 现 xiàn the present

Radical 王
8 strokes

現

king 王 (60a) + see 见 (214) = the present 现

This means “the present time”, “now”, “current”, or “ready to hand”.

出现 (114) chūxiàn to appear

现在 (55) xiànzài now

发现 (146) fāxiàn discover

一	二	王	王	王	王	王	王	王	王	王	王
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

216 观 guān observe

Radical 又
6 strokes

觀

right hand 又 (52) + see 见 (214) = observe 观

[观点 (185) guāndiǎn point of view]

ㄅ ㄆ ㄇ ㄏ ㄏ 观 观 观 观 观

(In the evening you meet an old friend in the street) You shake hands and see that he's wearing a special watch, and he tells you he's off to observe the stars. / In the observatory the ghostly giant will be up on the gantry readying the big telescopes and looking after them until your friend gets there.

217 再 zài again

Radical 一
6 strokes

This character means “again” when talking about something which might be repeated in the future. Character 52, on the other hand, means “again” when referring to something happening more than once in the past.

Some books differ in the order they suggest for drawing the last three strokes.

再见 (214) zàijiàn goodbye

[再说 (67) zàishuō and what's more]

一 厂 冂 冂 冂 再 再 再 再 再

218a 艹 grass

218 苦 kǔ bitter

Radical 艹
8 strokes

grass 艹 (218a) + old 古 (191a) = bitter 苦

辛苦 (195) xīnkǔ hard (life, toil)

The donkey finds that the old grass tastes bitter. / Teddy says, “Mix it with couscous and it will taste better!”

219a 入 rù enter

Compare this character with Characters 12, 19b and 20. Although it is not an HSK Level A character, it is useful to be able to recognize the sign 入口, “entrance”.

219 内 nèi inside

Radical 冂

4 strokes

outer limits 冂 (160a) + person 人 (12) = inside 内

In some typefaces the central part of this character looks like “enter” rather than “person”.

[以内 (120) yǐnèi during, within]

[在内 (55) zàinèi included]

Harry is on a bus tour and is about to enter the outer limits. the driver announces, “All passengers must stay inside the bus while we travel through this dangerous area.” / The dwarf tour guide checks off the names of the passengers on his list (to make sure they’re all accounted for).

220 呐 nà (na) [shout]

Radical 口

7 strokes

mouth 口 (5) + inside 内 (219) = shout 呐

Recall that we use square brackets [] for the meaning of characters which you are only ever likely to see in compounds (see Character 557 for the compound in question, but it’s not an important one).

呐 can also be used as a particle at the end of questions, in the same way as 呢 (see Character 268), and in this guise it is pronounced na with a neutral tone.

The main reason we’ve introduced this character here is to show you what it looks like when “person” is replaced by “enter” (see the comment for Character 219). this only happens for Characters 219 and 220: it does not happen for any of the following characters (221–225).

(A drugs bust) they are standing at the mouth of the cave when, from inside, comes a shout. / “The dwarf has found a stash of narcotics!”

221 肉 ròu meat

Radical 冂
6 strokes

outer limits 冂 (160a) + person 人 (12) + person 人 (12) = meat 肉

Several characters containing “moon” are actually derived from this character instead.

[羊肉 (111) yáng ròu mutton]

In the outer limits stands a totem pole made from one statue of Harry on top of another Harry: it’s advertising harry’s meat stall. / The dwarf ignores the rules and sneaks off the tour bus to buy meat for his Sunday roast.

222 两 liǎng a couple

Radical 一
7 strokes

兩

one 一 (1) + from 从 (103) + outer limits 阝 (160a) = couple 两

二 (Character 2) is used in writing numbers, in isolation or in a telephone number for example. But 两 is used with measure words, when talking about “two of ” something.

[两个人 (19, 12) liǎng ge rén two people]

[两棵树 (188, 155) liǎng kē shù two trees]

一 二 三 四 五 六 七 八 九 十

The zoo gets a unicorn from the outer limits, to obtain a couple of unicorns which they hope might breed (where have we heard this before?!)/
The two teddies are set the task of watching the unicorns' body language, to see if they are getting on!

223 辆 liàng number of cars

Radical 车
11 strokes

輛

car 车 (83) + couple 两 (222) = number of cars 辆

A measure word for vehicles.

[三辆车 (3, 83) sān liàng chē three vehicles]

一	上	去	丰	丰	有	辆	辆	辆	辆
辆

(In the car showroom) the elderly couple sit in the car that they like most, tired after having been shown a number of cars. / The two dwarf salesmen had talked and talked, but the technical language (about big ends etc.) had been incomprehensible to them.

224 俩 liǎ two people

Radical 亻
9 strokes

俩

person 亻 (13a) + couple 两 (222) = two people 俩

[他们俩 (13, 28) tāmen liǎ the two of them (people)]

丿	亻	仁	介	们	俩	俩	俩	俩
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--

Harry only invited couples to his party, so that every time the doorbell rang, there were two people standing there. / Two teddies tried to gatecrash the party as a lark.*

225a scales

grass 艹 (218a) + couple 两 (222) = scales 蒹

一	艹	艹	艹	艹	蒹	蒹	蒹	蒹	蒹
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

The recipe calls for a couple of handfuls of grass— it is difficult to weigh it on scales as it is so light. / [No pronunciation needed]

Radical 氵

225 满 mǎn full

13 strokes

滿

water 氵 (78a) + scales 满 (225a) = full 满

[满分 (73) mǎnfēn full marks]

丶	丶	丶	一	一	一	一	一	一	一
满	满	满

She has to measure the water on the scales, as her measuring jug is already full (of something else). / Teddy doesn't know how to use the scales and has to read the manual.*

226 互 hù reciprocal

Radical 一

4 strokes

互相 (163) hùxiāng mutually, each other
[相互 (163) xiānghù mutual, each other]

/ (In the past a friend gave you their spare wheel when you had a flat tire)
You now see this friend with a flat tire and stop to give them your spare wheel as a reciprocal favor. Behind you a dwarf hoots impatiently, wanting to get past.

227 它 tā it

Radical 宀
5 strokes

house 宀 (91a) + spoon 匕 (206a) = it 它

This is the neuter form of he/she (Characters 13 and 16) — all three are pronounced tā.

它们 (28) tāmen they, them (neuter)

He builds a small house to accommodate his silver spoon. “Why does it get all the attention?” asks his pet dog jealously. / “Because spoons tarnish and dogs don’t!” replies the giant.

228 比 bǐ compared with Radical 比

4 strokes

spoon 匕 (206a) + spoon 匕 (206a) = compared with 比

Notice that the left-hand spoon has been squashed so that its hook has turned into a “barb” (see 120a).

[比如 (80) bǐrú for example]

[对比 (154) duìbǐ compare & contrast]

He took one spoon, then another spoon, and compared one with the other.
/ Teddy didn't care which one he had, as long as he got to eat his beans.*

229 批 pī criticize

Radical 扌

7 strokes

hand 扌 (152a) + compared with 比 (228) = criticize 批

[大批 (47) dàpī lots of]

The teacher looked at the hands of the children and compared them with her own — she criticized any failings such as dirty nails. / The ones with clean hands were allowed to take the pizza to the Giant.

230 切 qiè (qiē) to cut

Radical 刀

4 strokes

seven 七 (37) + knife 刀 (72) = cut 切

We've included this character here so you can compare it with Character 228. the left-hand side of Character 230 is “seven”, not “spoon” (although it too has been squashed and has a “barb”). the telling detail is that the cross stroke in Character 230 extends to both sides of the vertical stroke.

一切 (1) yíqiè all, everything
[亲切 (196) qīnqiè cordial]

You look in your diary and see that seven days ago you met with the murder victim, so you use a knife to cut out the incriminating page. / The two dwarves are going round checking on everyone's alibis.

它 (227)	苦 (218)	动 (58)	白 (22)	见 (214)	作 (207)	明 (77)

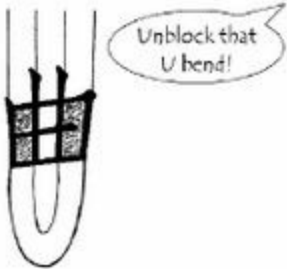

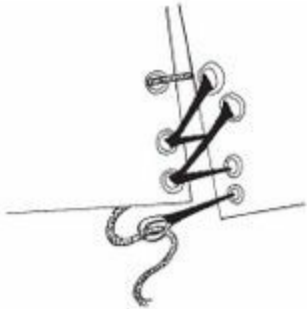

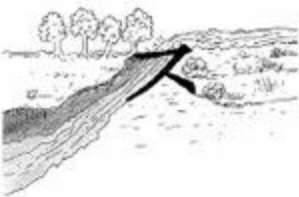

You will have realized by now that the concept of “basic building block” is a little fuzzy at the edges. this is not a major problem: the concepts of “animal” and “plant” in biology are also fuzzy at the edges (what are algae?) but in everyday life we all know what animals and plants are. Similarly, most of the time it is clear whether a character is composite or a basic building block: either it is “obviously” composed of two parts, or it is “obviously” a single entity. But there are gray areas at the boundaries.

A particular case in point is when to regard “one” (a single horizontal stroke) as a separate part. When the stroke is completely “free floating” (not joined on at all) we always regard the character as composite. thus 二, 𠄎 and 𠄐 are composite. When the horizontal line is joined on, we have a gray area. the general rule we have adopted is to regard such characters as basic building blocks, unless there is a horizontal line at the top of the character and when you remove this line you get something recognizable. thus 干, 王 and 下 are composite but 工 and 丌 are basic building blocks. We don't try to detach a horizontal line at the bottom of a character unless it is completely free-floating. So 𠄐 is composite but 土 and 上 are basic building blocks.

Sticking to a rule like this (even if the choice of rule is somewhat arbitrary) makes it easier to decide confidently whether a character is a basic building block or composite.

238a 犬 quǎn dog

big 大 (47) + a drop 丶 (22a) = dog 犬

Compare this character with “too much” (Character 48), which was also formed out of “drop” and “big”. It’s the same fisherman, but notice how in the stories the drop is on top of him, or falling from him, as appropriate. When appearing on the left as a radical, this character uses the distorted form 犭 (see 263a), in which the drop disappears.

Congratulations! Learning 250 characters is a real achievement. Did you really believe, right at the beginning, that you'd actually be able to get this far?

The flash cards mentioned in the story for Character 249 are actually a very good idea. they are small cards for testing yourself (say credit card sized) with the character on one side and its meaning and pronunciation on the other. Use them to test yourself at odd moments, in supermarket check-out lines for example. You can buy these cards in ready-made sets or make a set yourself. If you mix the cards together, adding the cards for each chapter as you go along, you will be creating the same effect as the test Yourself panels in this book. Speaking of which:

254 只 zhǐ; zhī only; one of a pair

Radical 口
5 strokes

祇 隻

mouth 口 (5) + eight 八 (20) = only; one of a pair 只

The two traditional forms 祇 and 隻 correspond to zhǐ and zhī respectively. zhī is a measure word, and is also used to refer to things which usually come in pairs.

When this character appears as part of another character we will use the meaning “only” in the equation and the story.

只好 (18) zhǐhǎo have to

[只要 (101) zhǐyào provided that]

[只是 (30) zhǐshì only, just, merely]

[只有 (63) zhǐyǒu only if; have to]

[一只手 (1, 31) yì zhī shǒu a hand]

 The octopus is at the mouth of the cave (it is an underwater cave and we are on the film set for “20,000 Leagues under the Sea”). The main scene will only work if they can film lots of swirling water. / Teddy suggests using a jacuzzi. They go to see if they can film in the giant’s jacuzzi. \ He gives them one of a pair of his old gloves to make a squid costume out of!

255 织 zhī weave

Radical 纟

260 城 chéng town

Radical 土
9 strokes

earth 土 (54a) + turn into 成 (259) = town 城

Originally this character meant “city wall”, hence its appearance in the name for the Great Wall of China.

[长城 (172) chángchéng the Great Wall]

[城里 (157) chénglǐ in town]

(A property developer shows investors a site) “This whole expanse of earth will turn into a town,” he says. / The chunky fairy lands heavily at his feet and says, “Over my dead body.”

261a 𡈼 old man

263 猪 zhū pig

Radical 𠂔
11 strokes

猪

dog 𠂔 (263a) + specialist 耂 (261) = pig 猪

Character 263 means “pig”, but you probably remember that we already had a character for “pig” (109a). We have seen this happen already a number of times — for example, there were two characters for “river”.

This isn’t a problem, as we are always working in the Chinese to english direction. If you see Character 263 and remember the story, then you will remember that the character means “pig” (however many other characters there are that also mean “pig”).

This is just as well, as a third pig will be coming along in Chapter 27!

264 老 lǎo old

Radical 耂
6 strokes

old man 耂 (261a) + spoon 匕 (206a) = old 老

“Old” here can mean either “elderly” or “long-standing”. It can be used with an older person’s surname (e.g. 老王, Lǎo Wáng) as a term of friendly respect. Conversely, xiǎo (Character 50) can be used as a casual, friendly way of talking about (or to) someone younger than you (e.g. 小李, Xiǎo Lǐ).

老二 (2) lǎo èr second child

265a 孝 xiào filial piety old man 𠂔 (261a) + child 子 (17) = filial piety 孝

This strange-sounding phrase means respect for parents and ancestors, which is a powerful tradition in China.

265 教 jiāo; jiào teach

Radical 攴
11 strokes

filial piety 孝 (265a) + tap 攴 (190a) = teach 教

This character has two pronunciations but it means “teach” regardless! So (just this once) we have two different archetypes sharing the same story — except that as we are talking about an i- onglide, there are two of each, and so we end up with four altogether!

---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--

During the fasting season even the dog has to wait until the moon is up, before he can have his dog food. / [No pronunciation needed]

266 然 rán however

Radical 灬
12 strokes

dog food 𤝵 (266b) + fire 灬 (185a) = however 然

This character also means “correct”; “but”; “so”; “this”; “-ly”, depending on the context.

然后 (150) ránhòu after, and then
[自然 (94) zìrán nature; natural] [必然 (162) bìrán inevitable, bound to]
[不然 (9) bùrán or, otherwise]

ノ	ㄣ	夕	夕	夕	夕	夕	夕	夕	然

	头 (246)	时 (105)	只 (254)	连 (84)	细 (234)	在 (55)	买 (247)

If you are practicing writing characters (as you should), your first attempts will have been awkward, but as with most things you'll be getting better with practice. Try drawing large (1 inch or 2 cm) squares on a piece of paper and practice drawing the characters to fill these squares. What commonly happens otherwise is that your characters get smaller and smaller as you write a line of them.

Don't be too hard on yourself (we all draw gawky-looking characters when we start). even now, you'll be able to look back at your early attempts and compare them with your most recent ones, and see just how much you've improved.

Finally, try writing out sentences, or just lines of characters, on ordinary paper. To begin with you can mark out squares to write in if you want to, but after that simply imagine the squares and try to keep your characters all equally sized and equally spaced.

Chapter 17

The three characters 己 巳 巽 are very similar but distinct. Look at their three character pictures — you might think of the first character as being a bit self conscious because he can feel himself turning into a snake— by the 巳 stage he's already halfway there!

---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

268b 尼 ní nun

corpse 尸 (268a) + spoon 匕 (206a) = nun 尼

㇏	㇏	尸	尸	尼
---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--

In the convent hospital each corpse is sprinkled with holy water from a spoon by the senior nun. / [No pronunciation needed]

268 呢 ne as for

Radical 口
8 strokes

mouth 口 (5) + nun 尼 (268b) = as for 呢

A particle, used at the end of questions. One use is to repeat the question, but now referring to a new subject. It can also be used in a rhetorical way, or to soften the tone of a question or sentence.

一	㇏	口	㇏	㇏	㇏	㇏	呢
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--

The nun's mouth dropped open in disbelief. As for the other nuns, what about them? had they noticed it? / No — which was just as well, as they'd go nuts if they realized there was a robot creeping up behind them!

269 户 hù door

Radical 户

4 strokes

a drop 丶 (22a) + corpse 尸 (268a) = door 户

They put a drop of oil on the corpse so that they could squeeze it through the door. / The dwarf, outraged, said, “Remember who that is!”

270 所 suǒ building

Radical 斤
8 strokes

door 户 (269) + axe 斤 (240) = building 所

所以 (120) suǒyǐ therefore, so
所有 (63) suǒyǒu all

The burglars broke down the door with an axe to gain access to the building. / The ghostly teddy who guarded the building threw bars of soap at the intruders.

271 己 jǐ self

Radical 己

3 strokes

This, and the characters 274 and 275a, are all very similar — use the character pictures for the basic building blocks at the beginning of the chapter to help you remember which is which.

自己 (94) zìjǐ self; one's own

/ Teddy is fitting new special self -cleaning wheels to his jeep (and ends up in need of some cleaning, himself!).

272 记 jì note down

Radical 讠

5 strokes

words 讠 (67c) + self 己 (271) = note down 记

[记者 (261) jìzhě reporter]

[日记 (6) rìjì diary]

(Stuck in a traffic jam) he has no paper, so has to write the words down on him self, as he wants to note down what has occurred. / In particular, he wants to report the dwarf who has blocked the road with his jeep.

273 纪 jì discipline

Radical 纟
6 strokes

纪

thread 纟 (233a) + self 己 (271) = discipline 纪

丶	㇀	㇁	㇂	㇃	㇄	㇅	㇆	㇇	㇈
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

(A driver is trying to develop good habits) He ties some color-coded threads round the controls to encourage him to be more self-disciplined with his driving. / The dwarf won't rent him a jeep until his driving improves.

This character also means an “age” or “era”.

年纪 (168) niánjì age
[纪念 (167) jìniàn commemorate]

274 已 yǐ already

Radical 巳
3 strokes

Here the last stroke half-closes the box at the top of the character; this is a halfway house between “self” and “snake” (271 and 275a).

已经 (244) yǐjīng already

㇀	㇁	㇂	㇃	㇄	㇅	㇆	㇇	㇈	㇉
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

/ When they got to the fair, there was already a long queue for the Big Wheel. Teddy sat in the queue eating Easter eggs (getting chocolate everywhere).

275a 巳 sì snake

Both this and Character 271 began as a picture of a snake. In fact “self ” and “snake” tend to be used somewhat interchangeably in some composite characters.

275 走 zǒu walk

Radical 走
7 strokes

earth 土 (54a) + stop 止 (30a) = walk 走

We could also break this up into “ten” plus “upright”; make up a story for this alternative if you prefer.

[走寧 (145) zǒudào footpath; sidewalk]

[走动 (58) zǒudòng stretch one’s legs]

(On a mountain path there is a landslide and soil is pouring down across the path) He had to wait for the earth to stop moving before he could walk any further. / Teddy was bouncing around, saying, “I should have come with someone who had the right zodiac sign!”

276 起 qǐ rise up

Radical 走
10 strokes

walk 走 (275) + snake 巳 (275a) = rise up 起

This is an example of a character where “snake” is often replaced by “self ” (see 275a). In fact, using “self ” is more usual nowadays (as shown in the main character entry here), but “snake” makes for a more memorable story!

起床 (171) qǐ chuáng to get up (from bed)

一起 (1) yìqǐ together

起来 (65) qǐlái stand up, rise up

从...起 (103) cóng A qǐ starting from A

对不起 (154, 9) duìbuqǐ excuse me, sorry

一 十 二 卅 肆 伍 走 起 起 起

You take your pet snake for a walk— you’ve trained it to rise up to greet your friends. / Teddy wants to take a photo of it. “Say Cheese!” he says.

277 导 dǎo guide

Radical 己

6 strokes

導

snake 巳 (275a) + inch 寸 (104a) = guide 导

[指导 (251) zhǐdǎo supervise, direct]

一 二 巳 寸 导 导

(A guided tour in the desert) Nobody saw the snake inching along the ground behind the tour guide. / That is, until Teddy ran up and doused it with a bucket of water (and chaos ensued).

278a 钅 gold

ノ ㄥ 上 金 钅

We will treat this as a basic building block. It is the form taken by the character 金 (which is in HSK Level B) when acting as the left-hand side of another character.

278 钟 zhōng clock

Radical 钅
9 strokes

鐘

gold 钅 (278a) + middle 中 (33) = clock 钟

点钟 (185) diǎnzhōng o' clock
钟头 (246) zhōngtóu hour (spoken Chinese)
分钟 (73) fēnzhōng a minute

In the middle of a gold block is set a clock. / The giant who made it had also etched his jonquil design into the gold. (Remember jonquils? See Character 33).

279 种 zhǒng (zhòng) species

Radical 禾
9 strokes

種

grain 禾 (126a) + middle 中 (33) = species 种

Also more generally “a kind, type, sort”; also “a seed” and “to plant or cultivate”.

[种子 (17) zhǒngzi seed]

The teacher says, “In the middle of the grain is the DNA which defines the species.” / Teddy jumps up waving a jonquil asking, “Does it work for this too?”

280 足 zú foot

Radical 足
7 strokes

mouth 口 (5) + stop 止 (30a) = foot 足

When foot appears as the left-hand side of another character, the bottom is distorted (and looks more like 29a than 30a — see Character 283 below for an example).

[满足 (225) mǎnzú satisfy]

At the mouth of the cave they all stopped — nobody dared put a foot inside. / Only when the fairy zoomed in to check it out did they relax.

Test yourself:	儿 (21)	阴 (97)	上 (42)	走 (275)	四 (24)	者 (261)	其 (235)
	什 (35)	到 (74)	当 (267)	杯 (11)	卖 (248)	山 (110)	洗 (139)

281a 艮 stubborn

Note the stroke order!

281 很 hěn very

Radical 彳
9 strokes

step forward 彳 (81a) + stubborn 艮 (281a) = very 很

得很 (118) A dehěn very A

(Volunteers are sought for a dangerous mission to capture the dragon) Sir Galahad stepped forward stubbornly; he was very sure he wanted to do it. / Teddy jumps around excitedly singing, “A dragon hunt, a dragon hunt!”

282 根 gēn root

Radical 木
10 strokes

tree 木 (10a) + stubborn 艮 (281a) = root 根

[根本 (174) gēnběn essence; basic]

The tree stubbornly refused to move a single root. / The giant went to get his gunpowder to shift it.

283 跟 gēn with

Radical 足
13 strokes

foot 足 (280) + stubborn 艮 (281a) = with 跟

This means “with” in the sense of “together with” (not as in “writing with a pen”).

[跟前 (90) gēnqián in front of; close to]

丶	㇀	㇁	㇂	㇃	㇄	㇅	㇆	㇇	㇈
跟	跟	跟

(Think of this as a continuation of the previous story) The landowner puts his foot stubbornly in the door (at the police station). “I’m going to stay here until you come with me. / There’s a giant on my land threatening to blow things up with gunpowder!”

284 眼 yǎn eye

Radical 目
11 strokes

eye 目 (93) + stubborn 艮 (281a) = eye 眼

This is the normal character for a person’s eye, rather than simply 目.

[眼前 (90) yǎnqián before one’s eyes; at this very moment]

丨	丨	月	月	目	目	目	目	目	目
眼

The little girl plucked at the stuffed donkey’s one remaining eye but it stubbornly refused to budge. “I can’t have a donkey with one eye!” / Teddy had always had a yen to be a surgeon and found a new pair of eyes for it.*

285 银 yín silver

Radical 钅
11 strokes

銀

gold 钅 (278a) + stubborn 艮 (281a) = silver 银

银行 (81) yínháng bank (for money)

ノ	尸	尸	尸	金	金	金	金	金	金
银

(At a retirement ceremony) “I want a gold watch,” he says stubbornly, “Silver is for wimps.” / The fairy whispers, “Don’t get stressed, it will upset your yin.”

286a 良 liáng good a drop 丶 (22a) + stubborn 艮 (281a) = good 良

丶	丶	丶	丶	良	良	良
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--

A drop of oil on the stubborn hinge did a good job of loosening it up. (“Good,” said the workman, relieved). / [No pronunciation needed]

286 娘 niáng young lady

Radical 女
10 strokes

woman 女 (15) + good 良 (286a) = young lady 娘

Also used to mean “aunt”.

𡥉 𡥊 𡥋 𡥌 𡥍 𡥎 𡥏 𡥐 𡥑 𡥒

(In a deportment class, balancing books on the head, etc) The woman in charge said, “Good, we’ll make a young lady of you yet.” / [DIY pronunciation].

姑娘 (192) gūniáng girl, young woman

287 食 shí food

Radical 食
9 strokes

tent 人 (19b) + good 良 (286a) = food 食

[食用 (130) shíyòng edible]

ノ 人 𠂇 𠂈 𠂉 𠂊 𠂋 𠂌 𠂍 𠂎

(At the scout camp) “The tent’s up, that’s good. Now I need food,” said the scout-master. / The fairy started peeling shallots for a meal.

288a 𠂇 food

ノ 人 𠂇 𠂈 𠂉 𠂊 𠂋 𠂌 𠂍 𠂎

This simplified form of Character 287 is used when it forms the left-hand part of a composite character.

288 饿 è hungry

Radical 飠
10 strokes

餓

food 飠 (288a) + I 我 (32) = hungry 饿

ノ	人	食	食	仁	付	付	餓	餓	餓
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

(In the factory canteen the food is late in arriving) “Food, I want food! I’m hungry!” shout the workers. / The dwarf is the ringleader and urges them on.

Chapter 18

Time to take stock. By now, not only do you understand how all the systems work, but you'll also have a good feel for your own habits and preferences, and what works best for you.

If you look back you'll see that some character pictures and some stories have worked particularly well for you, and you've got them for life. Others you will have tried to learn a few times and keep forgetting. Try looking to see if those that you remember easily have anything in common. It is valuable to know this, because you can tailor the character pictures and stories to suit your own style of learning. We do keep saying that you can replace any story or character picture with one of your own devising, and if you do then it is likely to be memorable, both because of the effort you have put into it, and because it will be personalized to you.

What next? You've learned enough characters now to be able to pick any character further on in the book and learn it straight away. The most you will need to do is learn a basic building block or two if the character uses parts you haven't learned yet. But if you can, then simply carry on, and you will be adding to your knowledge with each character. It will still seem a long way to go to get to 800, but all you need to do is persevere, keeping up a slow, steady routine.

289 问 wèn ask

Radical 阌 阌
6 strokes

問

gate 阌 (27) + mouth 口 (5) = ask 问

问好 (18) wènhǎo ask after; send regards to

At the castle gate you put your mouth close to the grill and ask (politely) to be allowed in. / “Just this once,” says the dwarf gatekeeper grudgingly.

290 闻 wén hear

Radical 阂 阂
9 strokes

gate 阂 (27) + ear 耳 (88a) = hear 闻

Characters 289 and 290 are actually a mini phonetic series, with 阂 acting as the phonetic (even though it is now masquerading as the radical...)

新闻 (243) xīnwén news (e.g. on TV)

You put your ear to the gate to try and hear what’s going on inside. / The fairy is telling a fairy tale, starting with, “Once upon a time...”

Test yourself:	门 (27)	取 (88)	然 (266)	识 (256)	运 (57)	人 (12)	跟 (283)
	其 (235)	音 (257)	已 (274)	尤 (238)	们 (28)	都 (262)	法 (87)

291 方 fāng direction

Radical 方
4 strokes

lid 冂 (25b) + bow 𠂇 (51a) = direction 方

We have called the bottom part of this character “bow”, but you might like to think of it as a form of “wrap” (23a) instead, in which case you can modify the story accordingly.

As well as “direction”, this character also means “square (shape)”. It gives rise to another good phonetic series, represented by Fang the dog.

Some books advocate writing the final two strokes in the reverse order.

方法 (87) fāngfǎ method
[四方 (24) sìfāng square]
[西方 (100) xīfāng the West]
[对方 (154) duìfāng the other side/party]
[地方 (54) dìfāng place; aspect]
[立方 (177) lìfāng cubic (e.g. meters)]
[比方 (228) bǐfāng analogy]

(The vet stops to ask the way from a strange old man who is sitting outside his house) The old man has a lid on his head (instead of a hat) and silently bows to show which direction the vet must go. / The vet is off to meet the giant to attend to his dog, Fang. [Fang will appear in the next few stories: picture him as a huge sappy dog].

292 访 fǎng visit

Radical 讠
6 strokes

訪

words 讠 (67c) + direction 方 (291) = visit 访

访问 (289) fǎngwèn visit, interview

讠 讠 讠 讠 访 访

The words on the card are directions, as this is your first visit to these friends. / Teddy and Fang (the dog) are mucking about in the back seat of the car.

293 房 fáng house

Radical 户
8 strokes

door 户 (269) + direction 方 (291) = house 房

This can also mean a room, as well as referring to a complete building.

[房子 (17) fángzi house]

讠 讠 讠 户 户 户 房 房

You knock on the door to ask directions to your friend's house. / The fairy opens the door and casts a spell on Fang the dog to enable him to show you the way.

294 放 fàng release

Radical 方
8 strokes

direction 方 (291) + tap 攵 (190a) = release 放

The convicts communicate directions to their accomplice by tap ping (on the pipes in Morse code), so that he can carry out the plan to release them. / The dwarf jailor sets Fang the dog to chase them as they try to escape.

295 旁 páng beside

Radical 方
10 strokes

stand 立 (177) + cover 冫 (82a) + direction 方 (291) = beside 旁

The last stroke of “to stand” has merged with “cover” (we saw something similar in 产, Character 197).

旁边 (41) pángbiān side
[两旁 (222) liǎngpáng both sides]

He had to stand up tall to put the cover over the direction sign, and set up a new sign beside it. / The fairy had asked him to divert passing traffic past her new pancake stall.

296 万 wàn ten thousand

Radical 一
3 strokes

萬

one 一 (1) + bow 𠂇 (51a) = ten thousand 万

As well as the exact amount of “ten thousand”, this is used to mean “very many” in a more general sense.

As with Character 291, you might like to think of the bottom of this character as “wrap” instead of “bow”. The same comment on stroke order applies: some books suggest writing the last two strokes in the other order.

[百万 (40) bǎiwàn million]

[万能 (206) wànnéng multi-purpose; all-powerful]

[万岁 (116) A wànsuì Long live A!]

一 𠂇 万

The village elder goes on a pilgrimage to see the fabled unicorn, bows to him and explains the plight of the village. “Ten thousand blessings will fall upon your village as a reward for your courage,” says the unicorn magnanimously. / [DIY pronunciation]

Test yourself:	马 (44)	而 (151)	岁 (116)	开 (85)	论 (252)	基 (237)	你 (51)
	有 (63)	谢 (108)	地 (54)	边 (41)	起 (276)	六 (39)	呢 (268)

297 主 zhǔ lord

Radical 王
5 strokes

a drop 丶 (22a) + king 王 (60a) = lord 主

Don't confuse this with “plant” (133a).

You will recall that “jade” (60b) was also formed out of “king” and “a drop”. Notice how in this story for “lord” the drop is on top of the king, whereas in the story for “jade” the drop was falling from the king. If you keep this in mind you won't get the stories mixed up.

主要 (101) zhǔyào main, major, chief

[主意 (258) zhǔyi idea, view]

[主观 (216) zhǔguān subjective]

[主动 (58) zhǔdòng of one's own accord, on one's own initiative]

[主人 (12) zhǔrén host; proprietor]

[买主 (247) mǎizhǔ customer, buyer]

丶	一	二	三	主
---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--

(At the ceremony) A drop of the special oil fell on the king when the man was presented, indicating that the man is to be made a lord. / Teddy is playing around twirling the jewel of office until it's needed for the ceremony.

298 住 zhù to live in Radical 亅

7 strokes

person 人 (13a) + lord 主 (297) = live in 住

This character means to reside or live in a place (not simply to be alive).

[住口 (5) zhùkǒu Shut up!]

ノ	イ	イ	仁	仁	住	住
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--

Harry is made a lord and given an official house to live in. / The dwarf supervises the placing of the lordly jewel above the front door.

299 注 zhù pour

Radical 𠂇
8 strokes

water 氵 (78a) + lord 主 (297) = pour 注

This also means “to pay heed”, “pay attention”, “take notes”.

注意 (258) zhùyì pay attention to 丶	丶	丿	丿	乚	乚	洋	注

---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--

Water is brought to the new lord who pours it into the ceremonial urn. /
The dwarf dips the lordly jewel into the urn to turn the water into wine.

300 往 wàng; wǎng Towards; go

Radical 彳
8 strokes

step forward 彳 (81a) + lord 主 (297) = towards; go 往

[往往 wǎngwǎng often]

[已往 (274) yǐwǎng in the past]

丶	勹	彳	彳	彳	彳	彳	彳	往
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--

 “Step forward, Lord Vader, and walk towards the ewok,” said the director (on the film set of “Star Wars”). But there is no ewok! / “Wang! Where’s Wang the dwarf?” calls the director. Teddy starts running around calling, “Wang! Wang! \ Somebody go, go and find him!”

301a 兀 “pedestal”

one 一 (1) + boy 儿 (21) = pedestal 兀

一	丿	兀
---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

The unicorn uses his horn to lift the small boy onto the pedestal (so that people can see the new “chosen one”). / [No pronunciation needed].

301 元 yuán yuan

Radical 二

4 strokes

one 一 (1) + pedestal 几 (301a) = yuan 元
--

This has several meanings: “first”; “chief”; “unit”; “yuan”. The last of these is the unit of currency in China, and we will use “yuan” as the soundword in the resulting phonetic series.

Clearly we could also regard this character as “two” plus “boy”. We will be meeting “pedestal” again in Chapter 39.

[公元 (119) gōngyuán A.D.]

[日元 (6) Rìyuán (Japanese) yen]

In the town square there is a statue of a unicorn on a pedestal; people throw yuan coins onto the pedestal for good luck. / At night the fairy comes to collect the yuan coins for charity.

302 元 yuán garden

Radical 𠄎
7 strokes

園

enclosed 口 (24a) + yuan 元 (301) = garden 园

公园 (119) gōngyuán park, public garden

The historic yuan coin is enclosed in a display case in the memorial Chinese garden. / The fairy sets up a souvenir stall to sell replica yuan coins.

303 远 yuǎn distant

Radical 辶
7 strokes

遠

road 辶 (26a) + yuan 元 (301) = distant 远

[远亲 (196) yuǎnqīn distant relatives]

[远近 (241) yuǎnjìn distance]

一	二	元	元	远	远
---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--

You can see the yuan coins lying on the road sparkling into the distance like cat's eyes. / Teddy tries to pick up all the yuan coins but can't hold them all.

304 玩 wán play

Radical 王
8 strokes

king 王 (60a) + yuan 元 (301) = play 玩

玩儿 (21) wánr play, have fun

[好玩儿 (18, 21) hǎowánr great fun]

一 二 王 王 王 玩 玩

The king likes to sneak out with his pockets full of yuan coins and play the slot machines! / [DIY pronunciation]

305 完 wán finish

Radical 宀
7 strokes

house 宀 (91a) + yuan 元 (301) = finish 完

完成 (259) wánchéng fulfil, accomplish
[用完 (130) yòngwán use up]

宀 宀 宀 宀 宀 宀 完 完 完 完

The high-class building firm has a custom, when building a new house, to cement a yuan coin to the roof when the work is finished (to show that they don't penny-pinch). / [DIY pronunciation]

306 院 yuàn institute

Radical 阝
9 strokes

mound 阝 (96a) + finish 完 (305) = institute 院

学院 (82) xuéyuàn college
[住院 (298) zhùyuàn to stay in hospital]
[院子 (17) yuànzi courtyard, compound]

土	土	土	土	土	土	土	土	土	土
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

They built a temporary mound in front when they had finished building the Institute. / The dwarf stood on it to place the commemorative yuan coin above the door, to declare the Institute for Dwarf Studies open.

307a 𦍋 offend horns 丩 (65a) + dry 干 (124) = offend 𦍋

丩	干	𦍋	𦍋	𦍋	𦍋	𦍋	𦍋	𦍋	𦍋
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

The ram left his horns to dry so that there would be no smell to offend anyone. / [No pronunciation needed]

307 南 nán south

Radical 十
9 strokes

ten 十 (4) + outer limits 阩 (160a) + offend 𦍋 (307a) = south 南

南边 (41) nánbiān the south side
[南海 (129) Nán Hǎi the South China Sea]

一	十	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

If you offend against the rules in the outer limits, by going in areas marked with a cross, you'll be sent to the South pole (to help count the penguins). / The fairy will conjure up a flying nanny goat to take you there!

308 幸 xìng good fortune

Radical 土
8 strokes

earth 土 (54a) + offend 𠂔 (307a) = good fortune 幸

You take a pot of earth to the housewarming party, which seems to offend the new householder — this mystifies you as in your own culture it brings good fortune. / The dwarf behind you has brought a pot of shingle (and wonders how this will be received ...)

309 平 píng level

Radical 一
5 strokes

dry 干 (124) + horns 丷 (65a) = level 平

Note the “horns” are inside “dry” rather than on top (as in “offend”, 307a) and notice once again that this difference is built into the story.

As well as “level”, this character also means “flat” or “calm”.

[平安 (91) píng'ān safe, safe and sound]

312a 𢇛 dexterity

312 事 shì affair

Radical 一
8 strokes

This is a rather complex “basic” character! You can think of a story involving “piled up” (Character 150b) and “dexterity” for it if you prefer.

故事 (191) gùshì story, tale

[做事 (210) zuòshì to work]

[办事 (123) bàn shì to handle matters]

[事实 (250) shìshí a fact]

[没事儿 (169, 21) méishìr it doesn't matter, it's nothing; to have nothing to do]

/ “The Affair of the Wheel” is the title of a slushy romance between two cyclists. After a few pages the dwarf throws the book down in disgust, saying, “What a charade!”

313 面 miàn face

Radical 一
9 strokes

麵

thumb tack ➔ (40a) + enclosed 口 (24a) + eye 目 (93) = face 面

This character has two completely separate meanings: “face” or “surface”; and “flour” or “noodles”. the traditional form only applies to the second meaning.

To write the character, notice that the “eye” touches the box of “enclosed” and so the stroke-order changes accordingly.

见面 (214) jiànmiàn to meet 方面 (291) fāngmiàn side, aspect

[外面 (71) wàimiàn the outside]

[前面 (90) qiánmiàn the front]

[对面 (154) duìmiàn the opposite side]

[地面 (54) dìmiàn the earth's surface]

(The children had been throwing flour at each other and some went in the girl's eye) they used a thumb tack to secure the bandages enclosing the eye, which made her face look very odd! / The two dwarves grumbled to each other, “These children are a right menace,” as they cleaned up the mess.

314a 此 cǐ this stop 止 (29a) + spoon 匕 (206a) = this 此

[南部 (307) nánbù southern part]

部 部 部 部 部 部 部 部 部 部

Spitting was not allowed in many parts of the city but the bylaw varied from section to section. / The dwarf could boot out anyone found breaking the law.

317a 𣎵 “firewood”

317 北 běi north

Radical 丨
5 strokes

firewood 𣎵 (317a) + spoon 匕 (206a) = north 北

It is cheating to use firewood here — the left-hand side of this character is really derived from something else (and it has a different stroke order from “firewood”).

北边 (41) běibiān the north side
[北面 (313) běimiàn the north side]
[西北 (100) xīběi northwest]

He packed his firewood and his trusty spoon in his pack, and set off for the far north. / Teddy ran after him crying, “You’ve forgotten your bacon.”

318a 𠂔 “to lay out”

evening 夕 (69a) + inch 寸 (104a) = lay out

夕 寸 夕 夕 夕 夕 夕 夕 夕 夕

In the fading light of the evening, the mountaineers inch along a ledge to find a place to lay out their sleeping bags for the night. / [No pronunciation needed]

318 将 jiāng going to Radical 爫

9 strokes

將

firewood 爫 (317a) + lay out 𠂔 (318a) = going to 將

This time it really is firewood!

This character means “going to”, “about to”, but be aware that it also has a number of other meanings.

将来 (65) jiānglái (in the) future
[将要 (101) jiāngyào about to; going to]

爫 爫 爫 爫 爫 爫 爫 爫 爫 爫

“You should have brought the firewood and laid out the fire by now.” “I was just going to!” / The two giants jangled the hearth irons, impatient to have their fire made up.

With this chapter you will have completed half the chapters in the book. Once again, we already have available all the basic building blocks we will need.

331 反 fǎn oppose

Radical 又
4 strokes

drag 廾 (150a) + right hand 又 (52) = oppose 反

The older form of this character uses “cliff ” instead of “drag” and you will still see this form around.

It is often translated as “anti-”, “counter-”.

反对 (154) fǎnduì oppose, object to [反动 (58) fǎndòng reactionary]

The young prince has to be drag ged along to shake hands with all the dignitaries, but is opposed to all the pomp and circumstance (and vows to do things differently when he is king). / Teddy is happy though, as he gets to play fanfares on his trumpet.

332 饭 fàn meal

Radical 饣

7 strokes

飯

food 饣 (288a) + oppose 反 (331) = meal 饭

Used to mean “cooked rice”, or more generally, “a meal”.

午饭 (125) wǔfàn lunch

饭店 (186) fàndiàn hotel; restaurant

ノ 尸 全 全 飠 飠 饭 饭

There were so many types of food that the fussy guest was opposed to (on ideological grounds) that it was difficult to put together a meal for him. / The dwarf chef demands that a fanfare be played (to accompany his entrance with the resulting meal, after all the trouble he’s gone to).

333 板 bǎn board

335 青 qīng blue-green

Radical 青
8 strokes

plant 主 (133a) + moon 月 (61) = blue-green 青

The character means either “blue” or “green” (though there are also separate characters for each of these two colors) so we have called it both!

This character gives rise to a good phonetic series, coming right up. In fact we have two phonetic series, one pronounced “qing” and the other “jing”. We have already seen something like this with Characters 133 to 136.

This situation arose because the pronunciations have gradually changed down the centuries (although you can see that the two sounds are still very similar), while the characters stayed the same.

青年 (168) qīngnián a youth
[年青 (168) niánqīng young]

(On a cliff face) The plant in the moon- light looks blue, but it’s actually green. / Only the giant is tall enough to see into the chink of rock where the plant is growing.

336 请 qǐng please

Radical 讠
10 strokes

words 讠 (67c) + blue-green 青 (335) = please 请

This is used in various phrases such as “please come in”, and also means “to invite”.

请问 (289) qǐngwèn Excuse me, ...

The words are written in big blue-green metal letters on the cliff face:
 “Please don’t disturb the plants.” / Teddy clambers up on the letters to peer into the chink.*

337 清 qīng transparent

Radical 氵
 11 strokes

water 氵 (78a) + blue-green 青 (335) = transparent 清

丶	丶	丶	丶	丶	丶	丶	丶	丶	丶
清

When water falls on the blue-green plant it turns it transparent. / The giant verifies this by peeping into the chink in the rock.

338 晴 qíng fine weather

Radical 日
 12 strokes

sun 日 (6) + blue-green 青 (335) = fine weather 晴

[晴天 (76) qíngtiān a sunny day]

丨	丨	日	日	日	日	日	日	日	日
晴	晴

The sun turning the plant blue-green again is the first sign of fine weather.
 / The fairy keeps flitting up to the chink to check out this natural barometer.

339a 忄 heart

This is the form taken by Character 161 when it appears as the left-hand side of a character.

Some books suggest writing the strokes in the order left to right.

339 情 qíng state of affairs

Radical 忄
 11 strokes

heart 忄 (339a) + blue-green 青 (335) = state of affairs 情

This and the previous four characters form a phonetic series based on 青 (Character 335). The following two characters form a second series based on the same character but with a different pronunciation.

事情 (312) shìqíng affair, matter
 [同情 (160) tóngqíng sympathy]
 [心情 (161) xīnqíng mood, state of mind]

The heart of the plant only turns blue-green when this state of affairs (the fine weather) persists. / Only the fairy can get right inside the chink to see the color change.

340 睛 jīng pupil (of eye)

Erect tall poles and sling a cover over the top, and you have a gazebo! /
[No pronunciation needed]

342 亮 liàng shining

Radical 一
9 strokes

gazebo 亭 (342a) + several 几 (7) = shining 亮

In some older typefaces “several” is replaced by “boy” (Character 21) in this character.

月亮 (61) yuèliàng the moon

In the gazebo were several golden statues of a young boy, shining so brightly in the sun that they were dazzling passers by. / The two dwarves had found the statues languishing in a back room at the museum and had polished them up (rather too well it seems!)

343a 亭 tíng pavilion

gazebo 亭 (342a) + nail 丁 (81b) = pavilion 亭

This character is also used for a small kiosk or stall.

Inside the gazebo is a box of nails so the carpenter can convert it into a pavilion (by nailing up walls to it). / [No pronunciation needed]

343 停 tíng halt

Radical 亻
11 strokes

347 合 hé join together

Radical 人
6 strokes

combine 厶 (59a) + mouth 口 (5) = join together 合

This means “to join together” or “combine”; hence also “to suit” or “suitable”.

[合理 (158) hélǐ logical, reasonable]
[合作 (207) hézuò co-operation]
[合同 (160) hétóng agreement, contract]

ノ	人	厶	合	合	合
---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--

(At the end of the marriage ceremony) They combine d mouths in a kiss for so long that they found they had become joined together. / All very embarrassing, as they had to shuffle along to the fairy who brewed up a herbal remedy to separate them.

348 拿 ná using

Radical 手
10 strokes

join together 合 (347) + hand 手 (31) = using 拿

This character means “to grasp” or “hold in the hand”; hence “using”.

[拿去 (86) náqù to take (away)]

To make a long table the carpenter joined together two pieces of wood — with a hand underneath to support them while using a screwdriver in the other hand. / The fairy had supplied wood with a beautiful swirling grain from the gnarled tree.

349 拾 shí pick up

Radical 扌
9 strokes

hand 扌 (152a) + join together 合 (347) = pick up 拾

This character and the previous one are another pair of characters made up from the same components. Notice that in the previous story the hand is underneath, to reflect this difference.

拾 is used for “ten” (instead of 十) on bank checks, to prevent alterations.

(The king says to the princess) “You must accept the hand of the winning suitor and join together with him in matrimony. each suitor will pick up the marital plate. / The fairy will sit on the plate with a shallot balanced on her head, and the one who keeps it balanced there the longest will be the winner.”

350 哈 hā laugh

Radical 口

9 strokes

mouth 口 (5) + join together 合 (347) = laugh 哈

哈哈 hāhā (sound of laughter)

At the mouth of the cave the potholers are joined together with ropes so nobody can get lost, when they hear a laugh booming round the cave. / They run in all directions, falling over the ropes, and the giant laughs even harder.

351 给 gěi (jǐ) for (someone)

Radical 纟
9 strokes

给

thread 纟 (233a) + join together 合 (347) = for 给

He took colored threads which he joined together, plaiting them into a bracelet. But who is it for? / For Teddy's new girlfriend, the geisha.

𠂔 𠂔

354 叫 jiào call

Radical 口
5 strokes

mouth 口 (5) + entangle 𠂔 (354a) = call 叫

This can mean both “to call” and “to be called” (as in “I’m called Joe.”)

[叫做 (210) jiàozuò be called, be known as]

[叫门 (27) jiàomén call at the door]

𠂔 𠂔 𠂔 𠂔 𠂔

At the mouth of the cave you have become entangled in the brambles and call for help. / Unfortunately the two mountain rescue dwarves are watching the jousting on TV (and can't hear you calling as they are too busy arguing over which is the better team).

355 收 shōu accept

Radical 攵

[其次 (235) qícì next, secondly; secondary]

[两次 (222) liǎngcì twice]

丶 亅 冫 冫 冫 冫 冫 冫 冫 冫

The ice in the rink was lacking depth for the umpteenth time. / The dwarf started keeping statistics on the number of times it happened (so that he wouldn't be blamed by the management).

362 吹 chuī puff

Radical 口

7 strokes

mouth 口 (5) + lacking 欠 (361a) = puff 吹

The mouth of the cave is lacking a door so every puff of wind comes in. / But the owner wants to see who's coming to visit, so he can welcome them before the (overzealous) ghostly giant, who guards the cave, chases them away.

363 欢 huān joyful

Radical 又

6 strokes

歡

right hand 又 (52) + lacking 欠 (361a) = joyful 欢

(The New Year celebration at the orphanage) They all shake hands, and despite lacking the basics they are all joyful. / The ghostly giant, who guards the orphanage, hands out handfuls of hand-made streamers!

364 久 jiǔ long time

Radical 丿
3 strokes

不久 (9) bùjiǔ not long
[好久 (18) hǎojiǔ a long time]

/ (A guided tour in an old mine) “This wheel hasn’t turned in a long time.” But then it moves! Two teddies had got it moving for a joke (and roll around laughing to see the tour guide’s shocked face).

365a 爪 zhǎo; zhuǎ claw

When it is used as the top of a composite character, “claw” takes the form 365b below.

365b 𠂇 claw

beret 一 (89a) + hands reaching down 𠂇 (82b) = claw 𠂇

The old lady always puts a beret over her hands when she reaches down for something, so that nobody can see that her hand looks like a claw. / [No pronunciation needed]

365c  hand down

claw 𠂇 (365b) + cover 冃 (82a) = hand down 𠂇

(The old crone is in the attic) She lifts the cover of the chest with her clawed hand and hands down the precious heirloom (to her granddaughter waiting below). / [No pronunciation needed]

365 爱 ài love

Radical 爪
10 strokes

愛

hand down 𠂇 (365c) + friend 友 (53) = love 爱

爱人 (12) àirén spouse

[爱情 (339) àiqíng (romantic) love]

[可爱 (140) kě'ài lovely, lovable]

[亲爱 (196) qī'nài darling, beloved]

The dying duke says, “I intend to hand down all my possessions to you when I die; you have been a true friend to me and shown me the only love I’ve ever known.” / The dwarf butler actually smiles: this had melted the ice in his heart.

366 暖 nuǎn warm

Radical 日
13 strokes

sun 日 (6) + love 爱 (365) = warm 暖

If you look very closely, you will see that the “cover” in the middle of the right-hand side of this character has been abbreviated into a simple horizontal line.

暖和 (126) nuǎnhuo warm (weather)

The holidaymakers lie in the sun and love the feeling of being so warm. / The ghostly teddy (who guards their well-being) rides up and down the beach on a nanny goat (to warn people against getting sun burnt).

367 父 fù father

Radical 父
4 strokes

eight 八 (20) + shears 乂 (25a) = father 父

父亲 (196) fùqīn father

父 亲 父 亲 父 亲 父 亲 父 亲 父 亲 父 亲 父 亲

(At the barber's) Picture the octopus wielding a pair of shears, giving a haircut to your father! / In the next chair along, a dwarf is grumpily trimming the beard of Fu Manchu (he doesn't hold with all this personal vanity).

This means “to wait for” but also “to hope for”.

368 吧 ba suggestion

Radical 口
7 strokes

mouth 口 (5) + wait for 巴 (368a) = suggestion 吧

This is a particle put at the end of a sentence to indicate a suggestion or a supposition. 吧 is also used for its sound, often with 1st tone, as in the following compound.

[酒吧 (102) jiǔbā bar (a place serving drinks)]

You open your mouth and wait for the dentist to start work, but instead he says, “I have a suggestion. / Perhaps you’d like to try my robot assistant — he can do this work at a bargain price.”

369 把 bǎ handle

Radical 才
7 strokes

hand 才 (152a) + wait for 巴 (368a) = handle 把

This character is also used to mark a direct object in a sentence.

[一把刀 (1, 72) yì bǎ dāo a knife]

(There’s a queue for the sale at the department store) You are at the front of the queue waiting for the shop to open, your hand ready to grab the door handle as soon as the door is unlocked. / Behind you, Teddy excitedly hops around, hoping to bag a bargain.

This is another chapter where you've already learned all the basic building blocks you will need.

372 关 guān switch off

Radical 丷
6 strokes

關

horns 丷 (65a) + heaven 天 (76) = switch off 关

This originally meant “a guarded mountain pass”, which explains why today it can also mean “to shut” or “a barrier”, but also “a connection”.

关心 (161) guānxīn care for, care about
[海关 (129) hǎiguān (frontier) customs]

丶 丷 𠂇 𠂈 𠂉 关

373 送 sòng deliver

Radical 辶
9 strokes

road 辶 (26a) + switch off 关 (372) = deliver 送

This also means “to give” (as a gift).

[送行 (81) sòngxíng see off (visitors)]

[欢送 (363) huānsòng see off (visitors)]

The delivery van driver's instructions read: “Park on the road, and switch off your engine before you deliver the packet. / Otherwise the dwarf will make a song and dance about the fumes.”

374 联 lián connect

Radical 耳
12 strokes

聯

ear 耳 (88a) + switch off 关 (372) = connect 联

[联合 (347) liánhé unite, get together]

(The bomb disposal expert has been called to deal with an old unexploded bomb) He puts his ear to the casing until he hears the mechanism switch off, then he can connect up the two wires to make it safe. / Two fairies fly in with a bowl of lentil soup (to relax with, afterwards).

375 言 yán words

Radical 言
7 strokes

lid 亠 (25b) + two 二 (2) + mouth 口 (5) = words 言

When this character appears as the left-hand part of other characters, it has the simplified form 讠, which we have already met (67c).

语 言 (68) yǔyán language
[发言 (146) fā yán (make a) speech]

In the biplane you can see your co-pilot's mouth moving but can't hear what she's saying (because of the wind noise), so you fit a canopy or lid on top so you can hear each other's words. / The fairy has a yen to go for a ride (and might do so now that the canopy will protect her hairdo!)

376 信 xìn letter

Radical 亻
9 strokes

person 亻 (13a) + words 言 (375) = letter 信

Notice that we have already met a character made up from “person” and “words” in the other order: 认 (Character 253). If you read the previous sentence and recognized the two forms of “person” and “words” without thinking about it, it just shows how familiar you are getting with Chinese characters!

相信 (163) xiāngxìn believe (in, that)

[来信 (65) láixìn incoming letter]

[回信 (202) huí xìn a reply]

[信心 (161) xìnxīn confidence]

ノ 亻 亻 亻 信 信 信 信

Harry is good at reading documents written using old words, and people often bring him old letters to decipher. / The dwarf brings him an old shin bone with writing on it (hoping to catch him out).

较 car 车 (83) + pay 交 (380) = comparison 较

比较 (228) bǐjiào comparatively

(At the freeway toll booths) The cars are queuing up to pay, with the drivers in the two queues making comparisons about how long they had been there. / The queues are building up because the two dwarves, who man the two toll booths, are both watching the jousting on their TV sets.

383 校 xiào school

Radical 木
10 strokes

tree 木 (10a) + pay 交 (380) = school 校

学校 (82) xuéxiào school

[校园 (302) xiàoyuán campus]

In the village there is a special tree, and the villagers make people pay to see it, using the money to build a school. / Two dwarves go round the local area like town criers, shouting out news about the tree and drumming up business.

384 牛 niú cow

Radical 牛
4 strokes

label 𠂇 (124a) + criminal 犴 (130a) = cow 牛

When this forms the left-hand part of a composite character, the lower horizontal stroke is slanted, and drawn last (see Character 466 for an example).

[牛肉 (221) niúròu beef]

[吹牛 (362) chuīniú to boast, brag]

While the criminal was on parole he had to wear a label with a picture of a cow on it — to show that his job was to look after the cows. / It took two fairies (working in shifts) to keep an eye on this notorious criminal.

385 件 jiàn number of things

Radical 亻
6 strokes

person 亻 (13a) + cow 牛 (384) = number of things 件

This is a fairly general measure word for various objects such as items of clothing or pieces of furniture.

ノ 亻 𠂇 𠂇 仁 件

(In the “Best Trained Cow” competition at the village fete) Harry trains his cow to do a number of things (juggling, standing on its head, etc.) / It finishes by genuflecting to the two dwarf adjudicators.

386 哥 gē older brother

Radical 可

404 决 jué decide

Radical 辶
6 strokes

ice 冫 (360a) + separate 夬 (402a) = decide 决

This is a DIY pronunciation. In this book the pronunciation “jue” only applies to this character and the following one.

[决心 (161) juéxīn be determined, make up one's mind]

(You're out skating on a frozen lake) the ice starts to separate, and you have one foot on each side of the gap so have to decide very quickly which way you're going to jump! / [DIY pronunciation]

407 重 zhòng (chóng) heavy

Radical 丿
9 strokes

This is another character where there is a choice — we can regard it as a somewhat complicated basic building block, or try to split it up into parts. We've chosen to regard it as a basic building block, but you can regard it as “thousand” plus “in” (Characters 89 and 157) if you like: a bag with a thousand pebbles in it would be heavy!

重要 (101) zhòngyào important

[重点 (185) zhòngdiǎn main point, emphasis]

[重大 (47) zhòngdà major, great]

/ “The heavy wheel on your tractor squashed this rare jonquil,” said the policeman. The dwarf can’t see what the fuss is about (“It was only a flower, for goodness’ sake,” he mutters).

At the end of Chapter 11 we gave you some tips for what to try when you have forgotten the meaning of a character. What if you can't remember the pronunciation? here are some suggestions:

First, can you remember the archetype? Sometimes you will find that you can, and then you can ask yourself — what would a dwarf (fairy, etc.) do here? If you can picture the scene, with the archetype in that scene, this may be enough to trigger the soundword.

If you can't remember the archetype, try using the personality traits. Does a mischievous or grumpy archetype seem to belong in this story? Were there two archetypes? (Does the story seem to need two — e.g. were they arguing or holding each end of something?) Is the archetype ghostly? (Was it guarding or protecting something?) One particular point to bear in mind is that two archetypes are never ghostly — an archetype can be ghostly, or duplicated, but not both (that would be silly!). If you really can't remember the archetype, don't worry too much — the tone is the least important part to remember, less important than the meaning and pronunciation.

Another avenue is to go back to the first half of the story for clues which we have sometimes been able to put in (for example when we had the soundword “tandoori” we had an Indian theme to the first half of the story).

Can you remember the pronunciation of other similar characters? It's possible that the character you're thinking of is part of a phonetic series (see the comments after Character 46).

Finally, try saying the story, or the part of the story which you remember, to yourself out loud — this sometimes brings back other details of the story, including the soundword (we tried this ourselves a number of times, and were surprised how much easier it was to remember things about the story when we started relating it out loud).

Chapter 24

Note that while “thirty” is simply three tens, “twenty” is not simply two tens. The extra stroke in “twenty” is necessary to distinguish it from “grass” (218a in Chapter 14).

413a 乙 yǐ second

Be careful not to confuse this with “bird’s wing” (410a).

The character 丁 (“nail”, 81b) is also used to mean “fourth”, and we will meet 丙 “third” later (510a). Strangely, 甲 “first” does not appear in HSK Level a, even as a fragment.

413 亿 yì hundred million

418 角 jiǎo “dime”

Radical 角
7 strokes

bow 𠂇 (51a) + use 用 (130) = dime 角

You will sometimes see this character in an older form where the middle vertical line does not extend beyond the bottom horizontal line (so the inside part looks like “earth” rather than “criminal”).

This character means 1/10 of a yuan, or ten cents — another character (毛, Character 453) is used colloquially for the same thing. Other meanings for 角 are “angle”, “corner” or (actor’s) “role”.

[九角五分 (38, 36, 73) jiǔ jiǎo wǔ fēn ninety five cents]

You probably know at least vaguely what a radical is (see the User Guide, and the comments about “phonetic series” at the end of Chapter 4). The radical often gives a clue to the meaning of a character. For example the heart radical suggests something to do with feelings or emotions, the water radical something to do with liquids, and so on. Thus it is more a classification device than an insight into the root meaning of individual characters. Many authors feel that the word “radical” (from the Latin for “root”) is misleading, and use other words such as “classifier” or “signific”. But radical is by far the most commonly used word.

The radical doesn’t always appear on the left-hand side of a character. Sometimes it’s on the right, or on the top or on the bottom. here are some examples:

Character	Radical	Position of radical
都	阝	right
星	日	top

Because it’s not always easy to tell what the radical is for a particular character, the radical is listed for each of the characters in this book. as you learn more characters, you’ll find you can often guess the radical just by looking at a character. If you’ve been looking at the radicals as you worked through this book, you’ll probably already have a good feel for this.

Why bother with radicals? The main use of radicals is for grouping characters together so that they can be organized in dictionaries. For hundreds of years Chinese dictionaries have used the radical components of the characters as a way of grouping them. all characters, even the really simple ones, are assigned one radical or another (mainly just for the purpose of placing them within the index of a dictionary). We will say more about looking up characters in dictionaries at the end of Chapter 27.

Traditional characters all had a universally agreed (although sometimes not at all obvious) radical from a set of 214. For simplified characters the situation has been much more fluid, with dictionaries adopting their own lists of radicals which vary from about 180 to around 230. More recently there has been some convergence towards a set of 189 and this is the set which we have used in this book. however, note that there are plenty of characters where two (or more) choices for the radical are possible (and dictionaries might then list them under both).

Chapter 25

The basic building blocks “bookcase” and “treasure” are very similar. Clearly one has an extra stroke; but how do you remember which is which? Think of ordering your books by the color of their covers — you put red, white and blue books on the top, middle and bottom shelves respectively. Color in the picture of the bookcase like this, with red and blue pens or pencils. You’ll then remember that “bookcase” has three shelves, not four.

451a 且 “treasure”

丨 冂 冂 冂 冂 且

Not to be confused with “bookcase” (Character 443) — “treasure” has an extra horizontal stroke inside.

451 直 zhí straight

Radical 十
8 strokes

ten 十 (4) + treasure 且 (451a) = straight 直

This means “straight” and can take on related meanings such as “direct”, “frank” or “upright”.

一直 (1) yìzhí always, all the time

一	十	广	市	市	市	市	直

453 毛 máo wool

Radical 毛
4 strokes

Compare this with “hand” 手 (Character 31). The hook here has a longer base and goes to the right instead of the left.

The character 毛 means “wool”, “fur” or “hair”; and is also a colloquial measure word meaning 1/10 of a yuan.

[羊毛 (111) yángmáo wool]
[毛衣 (437) máoyī (woollen) sweater]

/ The fairy spins wool on her spinning wheel, to make a pulllover for her pet mouse.

454 笔 bǐ pen

Radical 竹 (321a)
10 strokes

筆

bamboo 竹 (321a) + wool 毛 (453) = pen 笔

This can also mean “to write” or (when talking about Chinese characters) “a stroke”.

[毛笔 (453) máobǐ writing brush]
[笔记 (272) bǐjì notes (e.g. of meeting)]

A length of bamboo with wool tied around it (to give a good grip) makes a colorful pen. / Teddy cooks up beetroot to make ink for the pen.*

455a 七 “pile of earth”

455 民 mín the people

Radical 乚
5 strokes

corpse 尸 (268a) + pile of earth 七 (455a) = the people 民

Notice that in this character the last stroke of “corpse” has a barb at the end.

农民 (438) nóngmín farmer, peasant

人民 (12) rénmín the people

[民主 (297) mínzhǔ democracy, democratic]

[民歌 (387) míngē folk song]

[民用 (130) mínyòng for civilian use]

(At the Gettysburg address) Imagine Abraham Lincoln standing among the corpses buried under piles of earth, making his famous speech about government “of the people, by the people, for the people.” / A fairy records the minutes (preserving the words for posterity).

456a 弋 stake

pile of earth 土 (455a) + a drop 丶 (22a) = stake 弋

This is like “dagger” (32a) but with a stroke missing.

一	弋	弋
---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

The builders are marking out a building site, using a drop of red paint on a small pile of earth to indicate where each stake should go. / [No pronunciation needed]

Many books give sequences of pictures showing how characters have evolved over thousands of years, from their earliest forms to their current form. an example is the following sequence for “fish” (which we will meet in Chapter 30):

Sometimes knowing how characters have developed tells you something about the character. For example, you may find it interesting to see how the characters for left hand and right hand have developed from primitive pictures of the two hands:

You can then notice, for example, that the intermediate form of “left hand” has the “special” stroke that appears in the character for “send out” (Character 146). Many people find this sort of thing fascinating but we believe that it is not the best way to learn the modern forms of characters when you are starting out. It’s like tracing the Latin or Greek roots of english words. It may be interesting to know that the english word “bus” came from “omnibus” (which is Latin for “for all”), but this is not how you would teach a class in english for beginners. These derivations may give some help with remembering the meanings of basic building blocks, but are less use for composites, and give little if any help with pronunciations. In any event, if you are interested in seeing how Chinese characters have developed, there is no shortage of books available covering this topic.

Chapter 26

Another chapter where you already know all the basic building blocks you'll need. As you progress, you will find more and more characters which are made up of building blocks you already know. You have learned about 150 basic building blocks now, which gives a huge number of combinations (even counting just the composite characters which only contain two or three basic building blocks). There are now only 60 or so basic building blocks remaining in this book. After that, you would only need a further 30 or so to get you through the whole of HSK Level B.

457a 舌 shé tongue

thousand 千 (89) + mouth 口 (5) = tongue 舌

A thousand believers flocked to the mouth of the cave, hoping to hear the famous magical tongue speak. / [No pronunciation needed]

457 刮 guā to blow

Radical 刂
8 strokes

tongue 舌 (457a) + knife 刂 (74a) = blow 刮

一	二	干	舌	舌	刮	刮
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--

The young chef runs his tongue along the knife to lick it clean and then blows on it to dry it. / The ghostly giant, guardian of kitchen cleanliness, excuses this as he loves the taste of garlic too!

458 话 huà speech

Radical 讠
8 strokes

話

words 讠 (67c) + tongue 舌 (457a) = speech 话

会话 (59) huìhuà talk (with), conversation

电话 (159) diànhuà telephone

---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--

(In an ancient tomb) The explorer can read the ancient words written above the door, but has to get his tongue round them, as the door will only open if he recites the whole speech in one go. / The ghostly dwarf guarding the tomb plays the harmonica to put him off.

459 适 shì suitable

Radical 辶
9 strokes

適

road 辶 (26a) + tongue 舌 (457a) = suitable 适

合适 (347) héshì appropriate

[适合 (347) shìhé to suit, to fit]

[适当 (267) shìdāng suitable, appropriate]

[适用 (130) shìyòng applicable, suitable]

一 二 十 千 舌 舌 活 话 适

(The king likes to walk barefoot about his kingdom) He has a team of lackeys to lick the road with their tongues to check that it is suitable for his dainty feet. / The dwarf is dismissive, “What a charade!”

460 活 huó alive

Radical 讠
9 strokes

water 氵 (78a) + tongue 舌 (457a) = alive 活

This also means “lively” or “active”.

活儿 (21) huór (manual) work, job

活动 (58) huódòng activity, (physical) exercise

生活 (133) shēnghuó a life; to live (a life)

一 二 十 千 舌 舌 活 话 适

(In the desert you find someone lying on the sand) You put your last drops of water on their tongue to revive them, hoping they’re still alive. / The ghostly fairy who guards desert travelers suddenly notices what's going on, and flies up with a magic hosepipe (to refill your water bottle).

461 术 shù craft

Radical 木
5 strokes

術

tree 木 (10a) + a drop 丶 (22a) = craft 术

This also means “skill” or “method”.

462 支 zhī branch

Radical 十
4 strokes

ten 十 (4) + right hand 又 (52) = branch 支

This also means “to prop up”, “support” and also acts as a measure word for long, thin things.

[一支笔 (1, 454) yì zhī bǐ a pen]

一	十	步	支
---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--

At the cross roads in the maze the two friends shake hands and each chooses a branch of the maze to head down. / The first one to reach the center of the maze where the giant sits in his jacuzzi, is the winner.

463 技 jì skill

Radical 扌
7 strokes

hand 扌 (152a) + branch 支 (462) = skill 技

技术 (461) jìshù technology, skill, technique

一	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	技
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--

The expert can tell, simply by putting his hand on each branch, what each type of wood can be used for — a rare skill. / The dwarf then tells the workers which jeep to load it on to.

464a 寺 temple

earth 土 (54a) + inch 寸 (104a) = temple 寺

The pilgrims kneel on the earth and move forward inch by inch towards the holy temple. / [No pronunciation needed]

464 等 děng wait for

Radical 艹
12 strokes

bamboo 艹 (321a) + temple 寺 (464a) = wait for 等

Two other major meanings are “grade” and “etc”; notice that we have sneaked these meanings into the story too.

[平等 (309) píngděng equality, equal status]

[久等 (364) jiǔděng to wait for a long time]

He takes the bamboo to the temple but has to wait for the chief monk to come and grade it, etc. / Teddy is bored, and plays in the dung. (Yuk!)

465 持 chí maintain

Radical 扌
9 strokes

hand 扌 (152a) + temple 寺 (464a) = maintain 持

[支持 (462) zhīchí to support]

一 扌 扌 扌 扌 扌 扌 扌 持 持

“We need a hand over at the Indian temple— we need to do some work to maintain it.” / The fairy conjures up chapatis for all those who come to help.

466 特 tè special

Radical 牛
10 strokes

cow 牛 (384) + temple 寺 (464a) = special 特

To write the left-hand part, see the comment for Character 384.

特别 (79) tèbié special, especially 一 二 牛 牛 牛 牛 牛 牛 特 特

The cow who lived in the temple was special (a sacred cow!) / The dwarf's job is to bring in special turf for it each day. (“It’s just a cow!” he grumbles).

467 义 yì just

Radical 丩
3 strokes

義

a drop 丩 (22a) + shears 义 (25a) = just 义

This means “just” in the sense of “right and proper”, or “righteous”. It can also mean the “meaning or significance” of something.

意义 (258) yìyì significance

· 丩 义

When one worker asked for a drop of oil on his shears, they all wanted one, claiming that that would be only just. / The dwarf supervisor reluctantly agreed, saying, “These days, workers have it too easy.”

468 风 fēng wind

Radical 风
4 strokes

風

several 几 (7) + shears 义 (25a) = wind 风

[风力 (14) fēnglì wind power, wind force]

丩 几 风 风

Several pairs of shears have been stuck in the ground to start making a wind break. / The giant brings some fungus to fill in the gaps between them.

469a 娄 Trouble

rice 米 (334) + women 女 (15) = trouble 娄

丶	㇀	一	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

(At the wedding) So much rice was thrown at the woman that she had trouble seeing where she was going. / [No pronunciation needed]

469 数 shù; shǔ number; to count

Radical 攴
13 strokes

數

trouble 娄 (469a) + tap 攴 (190a) = number; count 数

数学 (82) shùxué mathematics
[少数 (377) shǎoshù minority]

丶	㇀	一	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇
攴	攴	数

 The actor is in trouble, and taps on the rock face in the cave, furiously trying to get the secret door to work — it is the film set of an “Indiana Jones” movie. But it keeps jamming and the number of takes is rising. /

The dwarf is standing behind the door, ready to shoot the hero as he comes through (and is getting fed up at the delay). Teddy jumps up and down and urges him to shoot anyway. \ He gets so excited that he forgets to count the number of takes.

470 楼 lóu story

Radical 木
13 strokes

樓

tree 木 (10a) + trouble 娄 (469a) = story 楼

This means a multi-story building, or a floor (story) in such a building.

[楼上 (42) lóushàng upstairs]

[楼下 (43) lóuxià downstairs]

一	丨	丿	木	才	木	木	木	木	木
楼	楼	楼

The tree is in trouble— it has been spotted knocking bricks off the building next door as the workmen are trying to build the latest story (which would overshadow the tree). / The fairy negotiates with the building's owners to use a picture of the tree as their new logo (so then the tree is happy).

471 层 céng tier

Radical 尸
7 strokes

層

corpse 尸 (268a) + cloud 云 (56) = tier 层

[一层楼 (1, 470) yì céng lóu the first floor]

尸 尸 尸 尸 尸 尸 尸 尸 尸 尸

The corpse rose up on a cloud, carrying it up past each tier of the building in turn. / The fairy flew alongside announcing to the people watching at each level: “This is what happens when you are stung by a killer bee.”

472 室 shì A room

Radical 宀
9 strokes

house 宀 (91a) + until 至 (74b) = a room 室

教室 (265) jiàoshì classroom
办公室 (123, 119) bàngōngshì office

宀 宀 宀 宀 宀 宀 宀 宀 宀 宀

(Searching for a place to stay the night) He went from house to house until he found a room he liked. / The dwarf proudly showed off the amenities: “It has a heater, a cooker, a sink — the whole shebang.”

473 屋 wū accommodation

Radical 尸
9 strokes

corpse 尸 (268a) + until 至 (74b) = accommodation 屋

Depending on the context (and area of China) this can mean “house” or “room”.

屋子 (17) wūzi room; house
[同屋 (160) tóngwū roommate, flatmate]

一	二	尸	尸	尸	尸	尸	尸	尸	尸
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

“We’ll have to find somewhere to keep the corpse until the funeral — and we need to find accommodation for all the mourners before we can set a date.” / The giant, who has been fatally wounded, had been very popular...

474 握 wò grasp

Radical 扌
12 strokes

hand 扌 (152a) + accommodation 屋 (473) = grasp 握

握手 (31) wòshǒu shake hands

一	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌
握	握

In one hand he clutched the accommodation guide, while the other grasped the reins of his horse. / “Whoa!” shouted the dwarf, as his horse trotted straight past all the good hotels.

475 提 tí carry

Radical 扌
12 strokes

hand 扌 (152a) + is 是 (30) = carry 提

This character means “carry”, “lift”, “raise”; and also has a range of derived meanings.

一	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌
提	提

“A hand is designed to carry things.” / The fairy (giving etiquette lessons) demonstrates by carrying a tea cup.

476 让 ràng allow

Radical 讠
5 strokes

讓

words 讠 (67c) + above 上 (42) = allow 让

[让座 (212) ràngzuò offer seat to; invite guests to be seated]

讠	讠	讠	讠	让
---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--

The number of words in her essay went above the allowed limit. / She would have to wrangle with her supervisor the dwarf, to see if it would be accepted.

477a 贝 bèi sea shell

貝

outer limits 阝 (160a) + person 人 (12) = sea shell 贝

The top part of this character isn't really “outer limits” (see Character 214).

This character often has connotations of money (as cowrie sea shells were once used as money).

一 冂 月 贝

Harry journeyed to the outer limits of the kingdom carrying the magic sea shell (for protection against the bandits). / [No pronunciation needed]

477 页 yè page

Radical 页
6 strokes

頁

thumb tack 扌 (40a) + sea shell 贝 (477a) = page 页

一 扌 冂 贝 页

The small boy tried to use a thumb tack to pin the sea shell to the page. / The dwarf (teacher) said, “I told you yesterday that wouldn’t work!”

478 题 tí topic

Radical 页
15 strokes

題

is 是 (30) + page 页 (477) = topic 题

Notice how “is” curls around the bottom of “page” in this character (and is written first, unlike “road” which is written after the part it encloses).

问题 (289) wèntí question
[题目 (93) tímù (exam) question]

一	口	田	日	旦	早	早	是	是	是
是	是	是	是	是

Teacher to schoolchild: “I told you to write a page, this isn’t a page!” “It is, it is a page,” said the child, “just not a full page. It’s all I can write on this topic.” / The fairy said to the teacher, “You have to admit, there’s not a lot you can write about teaspoons.”

479 员 yuán member

Radical 口
7 strokes

員

mouth 口 (5) + sea shell 贝 (477a) = member 员

This character is often used to mean “employee”, or a person performing a role.

[人员 (12) rényuán staff, personnel]

[店员 (186) diànyuán shop assistant]

You have to hold a sea shell in your mouth (during the initiation ceremony) before you can become a member of the seafood club. / The fairy then gives you a commemoration yuan coin.

480 圆 yuán circle

Radical 囗
10 strokes

enclosed 囗 (24a) + member 员 (479) = circle 圆

(At the summer seafood fair) The enclosed area “for members only” was shaped like a circle. / All members had to show their special yuan coins to the fairy to gain entry.

481 高 gāo high

Radical 亠

10 strokes

tall 𠂔 (239a) + skylight 囧 (389a) = high 高

提高 (475) tígāo to raise, increase

[高度 (425) gāodù altitude; highly]

丶	一	一	一	一	一	一	一	一	一
高	高	高	高	高	高	高	高	高	高

You have to be very tall to reach the skylight as it is so high up. / The giant would normally open it for you, but he's laid up with gout.

482 搞 gǎo engaged in

Radical 扌
13 strokes

hand 扌 (152a) + high 高 (481) = engaged in 搞

[搞好 (18) gǎohǎo make a good job of]

一	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌
搞	搞	搞

The doctor held his hand up high, palm out, to indicate that he was engaged in something and couldn't be interrupted. / Teddy didn't want to wait so rolled around on the floor pretending to have gout.*

483a 台 tái platform

cocoon 𡩺 (34a) + mouth 口 (5) = platform 台

This character has a number of meanings and at least three traditional forms to go with them. It can refer to things like TV stations; it is used as a measure word; and it is also the “tai” in “Taiwan” and the “ty” in “typhoon”.

The ants each brought a cocoon to the mouth of the cave, where they stacked them up to form a platform (for their annual rock concert — they use the cave as it has good acoustics!). / [No pronunciation needed]

483 治 zhì treat (disease)

Radical 氵
8 strokes

water 氵 (78a) + platform 台 (483a) = treat 治

政治 (190) zhèngzhì politics

(A snake-oil salesman) The colored water was ready on the platform for the demonstration of how to treat diseases. / His dwarf assistant dipped a wilted geranium in the water, to demonstrate the water's reviving powers.

484 抬 tái raise

Radical 扌
8 strokes

hand 扌 (152a) + platform 台 (483a) = raise 抬

[抬高 (481) táigāo to raise prices]

一	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	抬	抬
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--

“Give me a hand with the platform to raise it up” (The parts are lying assembled on the ground). / The fairy then waves her wand and a magnificent tiger appears on the platform for all to see and admire.

485 始 shǐ start

Radical 女
8 strokes

women 女 (15) + platform 台 (483a) = start 始

开始 (85) kāishǐ to start; beginning

一	丿	女	女	女	始	始	始
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--

A woman walks onto the platform to start the performance (with an operatic aria). / Teddy (in the audience and impatient to see the main attraction) throws a shallot at her.

486a 谷 gǔ valley

eight 八 (20) + tent 人 (19b) + mouth 口 (5) = valley 谷

丶 丶 丶 丶 谷 谷 谷 谷 谷 谷

The octopus climbs on top of his tent, but even here the water comes up to his mouth. It had been a silly idea to pitch his tent in the valley. (It's a strange octopus who doesn't like water!) / [No pronunciation needed]

486 容 róng tolerate

Radical 宀
10 strokes

house 宀 (91a) + valley 谷 (486a) = tolerate 容

内容 (219) nèiróng contents, substance
[容人 (12) róng rén broad minded]

宀 宀 宀 宀 宀 宀 宀 宀 容 容 容

If you have a house in the valley, you have to tolerate the noise of the air force jets practicing their low level flying. / The fairy thinks it's wrong. (She can fly quietly, so why can't they?)

If you have been looking at the traditional characters, you may have spotted the main methods used to derive simplified characters from the traditional ones. In many cases, the simplified forms were based on widely-used existing abbreviations, which were just given a more official status.

Sometimes the radical was simplified:

詞 → 词

Sometimes the remainder:

燈 → 灯

Sometimes both:

錢 → 钱

Occasionally the same symbol is used as an abbreviation for several more complicated forms:

難 → 难

觀 → 观

Sometimes there were more drastic changes:

頭 → 头

Finally, many simpler characters were left unchanged:

本 → 本

This process of simplification is another reason why the equations “don’t make sense”. As you can perhaps imagine, it also disrupted some traditional phonetic series (while also creating new ones). Many older books used to admonish you against learning the simplified characters without learning the traditional forms; but learning the simplified ones first is fine, and you can easily pick up the traditional ones later if you want to.

Chapter 27

The picture for “pigeon” on this page, like so many others in this book, does not follow the historical origins of the character — hardly surprising, as the character developed before houses had rooftop TV aerials! But if the picture reminds you, next time you see this basic building block, that its meaning is “pigeon”, that’s all we need. It doesn’t matter that the strokes on the right-hand side originally represented a bird’s tail feathers ...

This character differs from “earth” (Character 54a) in that here the first (upper) horizontal stroke is longer than the second (lower) one.

487 志 zhì intention

Radical 士
7 strokes

scholar 士 (487a) + heart 心 (161) = intention 志

This also means “to record” or “a (written) record”.

同志 (160) tóngzhì comrade
[意志 (258) yìzhì (the human) will]

The scholar has set his heart on carrying out his latest project: “It’s my intention to record every species of orchid in the world.” / His assistant the dwarf (who thinks if he’s going to be dragged around, it might as well be in the sun) says, “Let’s start in Jamaica.”

“Tóngzhì” is rarely used nowadays as a form of address, although it used to be the most common form of address in China.

488 声 shēng voice

Radical 士
7 strokes

聲 scholar 士 (487a) + corpse 尸 (268a) = voice 声

大声 (47) dàshēng in a loud voice
声音 (257) shēngyīn voice, sound of voices

一 十 士 吉 吉 吉 声

The scholar stands over the corpse ready to give his anatomy lesson — but a voice speaks from the corpse and makes him jump! (One of the students has put a small speaker inside it — if you look at the “corpse” you will see the extra stroke that is the microphone). / [DIY pronunciation]

489a 壮 zhuàng sturdy

壯

firewood 爿 (317a) + scholar 士 (487a) = sturdy 壮

501a 隹 pigeon

ノ 亻 亻 亻 亻 亻 亻 隹 隹 隹

This is a picture of a bird, but looks like a composite character made up of “person” plus “lord with an extra stroke”. Feel free to make up a story along these lines if you like. (also, compare this character with “to live in”, Character 298).

501 谁 shuí (shéi) who?

Radical 讠
10 strokes

誰

words 讠 (67c) + pigeon 隹 (501a) = who? 谁

This also has the (colloquial) pronunciation shéi.

[谁的 (23) shuíde whose?]

讠 讠 讠 讠 讠 讠 讠 讠 讠 讠

(In the dusty tomb) The pigeon writes words in the dust with his beak, asking “Who is in the tomb?” / The ghostly fairy who guards the tomb answers, “The sheikh.”

502 推 tuī push

Radical 扌
11 strokes

hand 扌 (152a) + pigeon 隹 (501a) = push 推

This can also mean “grind”, “to clip”, “deduce”, “shirk”, “postpone”, “elect” or “esteem”!

[推广 (170) tuīguǎng spread; popularize]

[推动 (58) tuīdòng promote, push]

(She had nursed the wounded pigeon back to health) She took the pigeon in her hand and gave it a push to launch it into the air. / The ghostly giant, who would look after it, attached a piece of colored tape to its leg (so he could see which one to keep an eye on).

503 难 nán difficult

Radical 又
10 strokes

難

right hand 又 (52) + pigeon 隹 (501a) = difficult 难

[难过 (106) nánguò sad, grieved]

[难看 (200) nánkàn ugly]

[病人 (12) bìngrén patient, sick person]

[病房 (293) bìngfáng (hospital) ward]

[毛病 (453) máobìng problem]

After seeing the same mysterious illness for the third time, he is finally able to diagnose the disease. / “Bingo,” says the dwarf doctor’s assistant sarcastically, “I knew what it was all along.”

You may have been wondering how to look up characters in a Chinese dictionary, since there is no “alphabetical order” for characters. Many dictionaries today are organized alphabetically by (pinyin) pronunciation, so if you want to look up a character in a dictionary and you know its pronunciation, then it’s easy. But when you don’t know the pronunciation of a character, there’s a problem.

When you don’t know the pronunciation of a character, one way to look it up is to use a radical index — and this is why radicals are useful. To use a radical index you have to know which part of the character is the radical, and you’ll also need to be able to count the number of strokes that make up the character. To look up 姓, for example, 女 is the radical (which has 3 strokes) and the remainder 生 has 5 strokes. So first you find the radical 女 amongst the 3-stroke radicals in the radical index. Then, if there are lots of characters under 女, look for 姓 in the subsection which lists all the characters which have 5-stroke remainders. You would also use this method for the more traditional character dictionaries which are organized by radical (instead of by pinyin).

Many dictionaries also have a pure stroke count index (i.e. ignoring the radical). To use this you must count up the strokes in the character as a whole and look the character up under that number (so 姓 would come under the 8-stroke characters). as you can imagine, this type of index can leave you with columns of characters to scan before you find the one you’re looking for, so it’s usually a last resort!

Dictionaries sometimes use a sub-classification based on the first stroke of the character (whether it is a horizontal stroke or a vertical stroke, etc.) — which is another reason for knowing the correct stroke-orders for characters.

Words (compounds) are often listed under the leading character. But when a dictionary lists words as separate entries, beware that the “pinyin alphabetical order” often works by syllable/ character, rather than following “strict” alphabetical order. For example, these words would appear in this order:

... ta ... tamen ... tai ... taiyang ... tan ... tanhua ... tang ...

All these methods have their pitfalls and complications, so recently a completely new way of looking up characters has been devised. The Chinese Character Fast Finder (see the inside back cover) organizes characters purely by their shapes so that you can look up any one of 3,000 characters very quickly without knowing its meaning, radical, pronunciation or stroke-count! The Fast Finder Index at the back of this book is organized using the same principles.

Chapter 28

Once again, we have collected together in one place a number of similar characters so that you can compare them and learn to look for the small details which differ from one to another.

才 only just 	水 water
求 request 	勿 don't!

及 reach

511 杂 zá mixed

Radical 木
6 strokes

雜

several 九 (38) + tree 木 (10a) = mixed 杂

This character and the following five have pronunciations beginning with “z” for which there are no sensible words in english to use as soundwords. We have collected them together here, and while we could make up another “trick” for remembering them, it is probably simpler if you just treat them as DIY pronunciations.

丿 九 丩 孛 杂 杂

The baseball has got stuck in the tree; when you climb up to get it, you find all kinds of stuff mixed together up there. / [DIY pronunciation]

丶 ㇏ 广 庌 庌 庄

The shelter protected the earth so that work could begin on the new premises (regardless of the weather). / [No pronunciation needed]

513 脏 zāng (zàng) dirty

Radical 月
10 strokes

髒

moon 月 (61) + premises 庄 (513a) = dirty 脏

This character can also mean an organ of the body when it is pronounced zàng (and it then has a different traditional form).

丿 月 月 月 月 月 月 月 月 月 月

With the moon shining on the premises, you can see the shopkeepers taking their dirty washing out. / [DIY pronunciation]

514 总 zǒng always

Radical 心

9 strokes

總 horns 丿 (65a) + mouth 口 (5) + heart 心 (161) = always 总

This character has a variety of other meanings including “general”, “chief”, “anyway” and “to sum up”.

The men on the beach bow down to pick up sea shells to put in sacks which they then shoulder. / The dwarf has to sample the seafood but gets food poisoning (and takes out his temper on the poor men).

518 才 cái only just

Radical 一
3 strokes

纔

One of the more dramatic simplifications of a traditional character! In its own right 才 also means “ability, talent”, and the fragment “talent” (55a) is actually a deformation of this character.

[人才 (12) réncái talented person]
[天才 (76) tiāncái genius]

一	寸	才
---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

/ The fairy has only just got brand new wheels for her bike — she’s proud of them too as they are the latest style.

519 團 tuán group

Radical 口
6 strokes

團

enclosed 囗 (24a) + only just 才 (518) = group 团

This means a group of people, but also “unite”, “ball” or “dumpling”.

丨 冂 冂 冂 团 团 团 团

(An exhibition of precious jewels from the taj Mahal must be enclosed in a secure glass case; imagine the museum staff scurrying around trying to get everything ready) they only just get the jewels enclosed when the first group of people arrives. / The ghostly fairy (who's going to guard the exhibit) complains that it smells of tandoori.

520 囡 yīn because

Radical 囗
6 strokes

enclosed 囗 (24a) + big 大 (47) = because 因

Be careful not to mix this up with the previous character.

因为 (122) yīnwèi because [因而 (151) yīn ér so, therefore]

丨 冂 冂 冂 因 因 因 因

“He’s so big, he’ll have to be enclosed.” “Why?” “Because he’ll frighten everyone.” / Poor giant, that will upset his yin.

521a 恩 ēn a favor

because 因 (520) + heart 心 (161) = favor 恩

1	丨	冂	冂	冂	冂	囙	囙	恩	恩	恩
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

Because she has such a kind heart she is always doing favours for people. /
[No pronunciation needed]

521 恩 ng eh

Radical 口

困难 (503) kùnnán difficulty, difficult

丨	冂	冂	冂	冂	冂	冂	冂	冂	冂
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

The tree doesn't want to be enclosed so keeps reaching down with its branches and pulling up the fence. the workers have difficulty erecting the fence with this going on! / The dwarf foreman is cunning and brings along his pet canary to sing and calm the tree down.

523 水 shuǐ water

Radical 水
4 strokes

When this character appears as the left-hand side of other characters, it is abbreviated to the form 氵 which we have already met (78a).

汽水 (412) qìshuǐ soft drink

水果 (187) shuǐguǒ fruit

水平 (309) shuǐpíng proficiency; level, standard

丨	勹	勹	勹	勹	勹	勹	勹	勹	勹

524 求 qiú request

Radical 丩
7 strokes

Note that the bottom of this character looks like “water” (Character 523), but all four small strokes are written separately.

要求 (101) yāoqiú require, requirement
[请求 (336) qǐngqiú request]

一	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

/ (In a wheel shop) A request comes in for a new wheel. The owner chooses two fairies wearing sparkling chokers to deliver it right away to his best client.

525 球 qiú ball

Radical 王
11 strokes

king 王 (60a) + request 求 (524) = ball 球

排球 (330) páiqiú volleyball

527 物 wù thing

Radical 牛
8 strokes

cow 牛 (384) + don't 勿 (526a) = thing 物

Remember that “cow” is written with the slanting stroke last (see Character 384).

动物 (58) dòngwù animal

物理 (158) wùlǐ physics

[生物 (133) shēngwù living things]

[食物 (287) shíwù food]

物物物物物物物物

The cow says, “Don’t touch me — I washed my hair this morning and I can’t do a thing with it!” / The dwarf whooped with derision.

528 易 yì easy

Radical 日
8 strokes

sun 日 (6) + don’t 勿 (526a) = easy 易

容易 (486) róngyì easy

易易易易易易易易

“Don’t lie in the sun for too long — it’s easy to get sun burnt.” / The dwarf decides to put up this warning on an easel (as he’s fed up of telling everyone).

529 踢 tī kick

Radical 足
15 strokes

foot 足 (280) + easy 易 (528) = kick 踢

[踢球 (525) tī qiú to play football]

The soccer player draws his foot back; it is going to be an easy shot, and he kicks the ball hard into the goal. / The giant cheers the winning team (almost deafening everyone around him).

530a 𠂇 sunny

Compare this with “don’t” (526a).

530 场 chǎng site

Radical 土
6 strokes

場

earth 土 (54a) + sunny 𠂇 (530a) = site 场

机场 (10) jīchǎng airport

[会场 (59) huìchǎng (meeting) venue]

[广场 (170) guǎngchǎng (city) square]

[市场 (427) shìchǎng market, marketplace]

[停车场 (343, 83) tíngchēchǎng parking lot, carpark]

They look for a patch of earth that is sunny, for the site of their new plantation. / [DIY pronunciation]

If you look at the traditional form for Character 530, you will see that 530a is a simplified form of something which looks very like Character 528 (but with an extra line). the same abbreviation happens in the following two characters (531 and 532). Simplified characters usually exhibit this sort of consistency — but not always!

531 汤 tāng soup

Radical 氵
6 strokes

湯

water 氵 (78a) + sunny 易 (530a) = soup 汤

[清汤 (337) qīngtāng clear soup]

丶 丶 丶 汙 汚 汤

“Put the water in a sunny spot (to warm it) before making the soup. / When it's ready make sure to fill the giant's tankard first.”

532 扬 yáng make known

Radical 扌
6 strokes

揚

hand 扌 (152a) + sunny 易 (530a) = make known 扬

表扬 (436) biǎoyáng to praise
[发扬 (146) fāyáng develop, carry forward]

一	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

The signaller holds his hand aloft where it is sunny (so that his mirror catches the sun) to make known that the invaders are coming. / At the next relay station it's cloudy, so the fairy has to fly onwards with the message, "The Yanks are coming!"

533a 乃 nǎi sigh

了	乃
---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

533 奶 nǎi milk

Radical 女
5 strokes

woman 女 (15) + sigh 乃 (533a) = milk 奶

This character is also used for “breast” or “suckle”.

牛奶 (384) niúnnǎi (cow's) milk
[奶牛 (384) nǎiniú cow]

丿	乚	女	奶	奶
---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--

The woman gives a sigh of relief as the baby starts to drink the milk (and so stops crying). / Teddy bounds in with a nightlight so the baby can sleep*

(but trips up, much to the amusement of the baby).

534a 及 jí reach

ノ	乃	及
---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--

This means to “reach” or “attain”; also “timely” or “on time”.

534 极 jí extremity

Radical 木
7 strokes

極

tree 木 (10a) + reach 及 (534a) = extremity 极

极了 (66) A jíle extremely A, very A

[极其 (235) jíqí extremely, highly]

[北极 (317) běijí the North Pole]

一	十	才	木	市	栊	极
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--

The tree reaches out — with the tips of its branches it can just reach the extremity of the neighboring tree. / This is where the fairy has hung her G-strings to dry.

535 级 jí grade

Radical 纟

6 strokes

級

thread 𠂇 (233a) + reach 及 (534a) = grade 级

年级 (168) niánjí grade (in school)

[初级 (439) chūjí elementary, initial]

[上级 (42) shàngjí a superior, higher authorities]

[九级风 (38, 468) jiǔjífēng 10 % off, a 10% discount]

𠂇 𠂇 𠂇 𠂇 𠂇 级 级 级 级

If the thread (from the silkworm) can reach across the loom without breaking, it is high grade silk. / They can use the leftovers to make the fairy a new G-string.

For Character 535 you can see that simplifying the traditional form consisted of using the simplified form of the radical “thread”, and keeping the same right-hand side (534a). In character 534, however, 534a stands in as an abbreviation for something else.

536a 泉 spring

white 白 (22) + small 小 (50) = spring 泉

This “spring” is a water source, not a season (nor for that matter a piece of coiled metal).

Imagine seeing small dots of white in a green alpine meadow. they are edelweiss flowers — but why such a small cluster? When you look more closely there is a small spring there. (It is also a nice place for a picnic, where you can listen to the sound of the water). / [No pronunciation needed]

536 原 original yuán

Radical 厂
10 strokes

cliff 厂 (149) + spring 泉 (536a) = original 原

This also means “a plain” (open countryside).

原来 (65) yuánlái former, original
[平原 (309) píngyuán flatland, plain]
[原因 (520) yuányīn a reason]
[高原 (481) gāoyuán highland, plateau]

The whisky distillery was sited by the spring under the cliff— the water there gave the whisky its original flavor. / Each bottle carried the trademark picture on the label, of a fairy sitting on a yuan coin.

537 愿 yuàn To desire

Radical 心

14 strokes

願

original 原 (536) + heart 心 (161) = desire 愿

This is usually written in such a way that the “heart” creeps in under the “cliff”.

愿意 (258) yuànyì be willing; to want

一	厂	尸	尸	尸	尸	尸	尸	尸	尸
原	愿	愿	愿

He realized that the original girl he had first lost his heart to was the one he now truly desire d. / The dwarf wondered sadly if she still had the lucky yuan coin he had once given her.

538a 吉 jí auspicious scholar 士 (487a) + mouth 口 (5) = auspicious 吉

一	十	士	吉	吉	吉
---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--

When the scholar (who is normally engrossed in his books in his cave) appears at the mouth of his cave, blinking in the sunlight, the villagers take it as an auspicious sign. / [No pronunciation needed]

538 结 jié (jiē) tie up

Radical 纟
9 strokes

結

thread 纟 (233a) + auspicious 吉 (538a) = tie up 结

结果 (187) jiéguǒ in the end, finally 团结 (519) tuánjié unite, show solidarity
 结束 (494) jiéshù terminate

They used the invisible thread, produced by the silkworms on the most auspicious days, to tie up their hair into ornate patterns. / Two fairies work together to put gel on any stray hairs to stick them down.

539 喜 xǐ celebration

Radical 士
12 strokes

auspicious 吉 (538a) + feet 𠂔 (90a) + mouth 口 (5) = celebration 喜

This also means “happy” and has connotations of “to like”.

喜欢 (363) xǐhuan like, be fond of [欢喜 (363) huānxǐ joyful]

It’s auspicious if the first feet to enter the mouth of your cave at the start of a year are animal feet — when this happens it is a cause for celebration. / Teddy brings a sheep early in the morning to ensure this happens.

540a 吉 “foul mouth”

earth 土 (54a) + mouth 口 (5) = foul mouth 𪔐

Take care! This character is easily confused with 538a.

一	十	土	𡗗	𡗗	𡗗
---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--

If you get earth on your mouth, you get a dirty, or “foul” mouth. / [No pronunciation needed]

540 周 zhōu week

Radical 冂
8 strokes

outer limits 冂 (160a) + foul mouth 𪔐 (540a) = week 周

This also means, amongst other things, “circuit”, “circumference” or “all around”.

冂	冂	冂	冂	冂	冂	冂	冂
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--

“You will be sent to the outer limits if you are foul mouthed and you’ll have to stay there for a week. / Even the giant was sent there for telling dirty jokes.”

541 调 diào tune

Radical 讠
10 strokes

調

words 詞 (67c) + week 周 (540) = tune 调

Another character with a range of additional meanings — “mix”, “fit in”, “mediate”, “provoke”, “move” and others.

声调 (488) shēngdiào tone (of Chinese character)

调调调调调调调调调调

(The lyricist for a songwriting team lives on an island where he can concentrate) When the week’s quota of words is finished, they are ready to have a tune written for them. / The two dwarves collect them each week in their dhow (and take them to his partner, the composer, on the mainland).

542a 尚 shàng esteem

small 小 (50) + skylight 同 (389a) = esteem 尚

When it appears as the top part of other characters this gets somewhat squashed, with the “outer limits” compressed into “cover” (see Characters 543–545 for examples).

尙尙尙尙尙尙尙尙

The double glazing salesman claims, “If you install a small skylight, you will be held in great esteem by your neighbors.” / [No pronunciation needed]

542 躺 tāng lie down

Radical 身
15 strokes

body 身 (107) + esteem 尚 (542a) = lie down 躺

丶	亻	冫	冫	冫	身	身	身	身	身
躺	躺	躺	躺	躺

If you hold your body in high esteem, you will lie down for a power nap in the middle of the day. / Teddy tries this, but bounces about so much that he gets tangled up in the covers.*

543 堂 táng hall

Radical 土
11 strokes

esteem 尚 (542a) + earth 土 (54a) = hall 堂

食堂 (287) shítáng dining hall

丨	丨	丨	丨	丨	丨	丨	丨	丨	丨
堂

The site of the famous battle that saved the town was an esteem ed piece of earth, so that's where they built the town hall. / The fairy conjured up a shiny replica tank to sit outside the hall as a memorial.

544 常 cháng often

Radical 巾
11 strokes

esteem 尚 (542a) + towel 巾 (427a) = often 常

常常 chángcháng often (colloq)

545 掌 zhǎng palm (of hand)

Radical 手
12 strokes

esteem 尚 (542a) + hand 手 (31) = palm 掌

This means a palm (of the hand), and by extension to control something.

掌握 (474) zhǎngwò know well, have a good command of

(Briefing to the recipients at the military medal ceremony) “If the esteemed lady offers you her hand, take care to notice if it is palm up (shake it) or palm down (kiss it). / Teddy, holding the medals ready, will jangle them if you look like getting it wrong.”

546 条 tiáo slip of paper

Radical 攴
7 strokes

條

pursue 攴 (506a) + tree 木 (10a) = slip of paper 条

Also used as a measure word for long, narrow things.

条件 (385) tiáojiàn conditions
[面条儿 (313, 21) miàntiáor noodles]

丿 ㄣ 攴 𣎵 条 条 条 条 条 条

The squirrels pursue one another through the branches of the tree until one slips on a slip of paper and falls. / Two fairies stretch a towel between them to catch him.

547 务 wù to work at

Radical 攴
5 strokes

務

pursue 攴 (506a) + power 力 (14) = work at 务

[业务 (395) yèwù (professional) work]
[医务室 (491, 472) yīwùshì clinic]

丶 ㇏ 攴 𠂇 务

一 乚 戈 戈 戈 戈 戈 戈 戈 戈

The actors, one with a dagger and one with a kitchen knife, carefully plan the fight which will be the climax of their play. / The ghostly dwarf grumpily hands out protective clothing so that he won't get blamed if they come to any harm.

555 或 huò or

Radical 戈
8 strokes

mouth 口 (5) + one 一 (1) + dagger 戈 (32a) = or 或

Notice that “one” is written with a pronounced slope and that it is underneath “mouth” this time (compare this with “piled up”, 150b).

或者 (261) huòzhě or, otherwise

The dentist uses a small dagger to probe the teeth in the unicorn's mouth, asking “Which one hurts, this one — or this one? — or this one?” / The ghostly dwarf, who protects the unicorn, impatiently points out the tooth with the hole in it.

556a 咸 xián salty

鹵咸

fifth 戊 (259a) + piled up 𠂔 (150b) = salty 咸

一	厂	尸	尸	后	后	咸	咸	咸
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--

With his fifth arm the starfish piled up the food he had caught to save for a salty snack later. / [No pronunciation needed]

556 感 gǎn feel

Radical 心
13 strokes

salty 咸 (556a) + heart 心 (161) = feel 感

This can be literal (to “feel”, “touch”) or metaphorical — “to be moved”, “be grateful”.

感到 (74) gǎndào to feel (e.g. happy)

感谢 (108) gǎnxiè to be grateful

一	厂	尸	尸	后	后	咸	咸	咸	咸
感	感	感

“All that salty food was bad for your heart,” the doctor said. “But now you’ve been on that diet, how do you feel?” / Teddy had dressed up as Gandhi (to symbolize frugality and remind the patient that he should eat less salt).

557 喊 hǎn shout

Radical 口
12 strokes

mouth 口 (5) + salty 咸 (556a) = shout 喊

[叫喊 (354) jiàohǎn to shout]

[呐喊 (220) nàhǎn to shout out]

(On the beach) Stranded by the high tide at the mouth of the cave and surrounded by salty water, he shouts for help. / Teddy clambers down the cliff with some drinking water in his handbag!*

558 布 bù cloth

Radical 巾
5 strokes

left hand 扌 (53a) + towel 巾 (427a) = cloth 布

This character is also used as the simplified form of a traditional character meaning “to spread” or “to arrange”.

[一块布 (1, 402) yí kuài bù a piece of cloth]

一	扌	巾	右	布
---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--

(At the jeweler’s) She tries the ring on her left hand and then places it on the towel on the counter, and the jeweler cleans it with a cloth. / The dwarf rubs his hands at this boost in his sales.

559 希 xī to wish

Radical 巾
7 strokes

shears 乂 (25a) + cloth 布 (558) = wish 希

The sheepshearer rubs the magic shears with a cloth and makes a wish. /
And (lo and behold) a giant appears with a sheep for him to practice on!

Chapter 30

Onward! — with this chapter you will have completed 30 out of the 40 chapters in the book. As you have got this far, you know that your routine is working — so simply keep going and you will be on the final lap before long.

 seal 	 hardship
 conceal 	 rain
 hairs 	 world
 grain stalks 	 as well

560a 印 seal

㇏ 印 or ㇏ マ

This has several variant forms (see 560, 562a and 564a).

It refers to a seal for authenticating documents, which could be carried around and served as a badge of office.

560 节 jié festival

Radical 艹
5 strokes

節

grass 艹 (218a) + seal 卩 (560a) = festival 节

In this character the first stroke of “seal” (560a) is lengthened and the vertical stroke starts part-way along it.

The character also means “a node or segment”, “an agenda” or “to economize”.

节目 (93) jiémù (TV, radio) program

节日 (6) jiérì festival day

一	十	艹	卩	节
---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--

Once a year the king allows his seal to be hidden in a huge pile of grass and the children have to find it — the resulting scrum is the highlight of the festival. / Two fairies prepare a huge jelly for the feast afterwards (picture them having to keep plucking stray pieces of grass out of the jelly).

561a 却 què despite 卻

一	丨	土	去	去	却	却
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--

“I told you to go and get me my favorite ornamental seal,” the king said grumpily, “But despite this you’ve come back with the wrong one.” / [No pronunciation needed]

562a 𠂔 ruler

seal 冂 (560a) + right hand 又 (52) = ruler 𠂔

As you can see, this ruler is a monarch, not something for measuring things!

Note how the vertical stroke of “seal” extends all the way down the side of “right hand”.

(The young prince is instructed) “You must accept the seal of state and shake hands with the archbishop before you can be enthroned as the new ruler of the kingdom.” / [No pronunciation needed]

562 报 bào to report

Radical 扌
7 strokes

報

hand 扌 (152a) + ruler 𠂔 (562a) = report 报

[报名 (70) bào míng to sign one's name]

[报道 (145) bàodào a news report]

The ruler holds out his hand for the report (on the state of the kingdom). / The dwarf bows as he gives it to him.

563 服 fú obey

Radical 月
8 strokes

moon 月 (61) + ruler 𠂔 (562a) = obey 服

This character can also mean “clothes”.

服务 (547) fúwù work for, serve

衣服 (437) yīfu clothes; garment

服务员 (547, 479) fúwùyuán waiter, waitress, attendant

At the first full moon of his reign, the new ruler must pledge to obey the traditions of his office. / The fairy presides over the ceremony sitting on a futon.

564a 𠂔 “explosion”

seal 𠂔 (560a) + use 用 (130) = explosion 𠂔

The top part of this character is the third, and final, variant of “seal” (560a) — don’t confuse this with “cocoon” (34a)

(The assassins are planting a booby trap) When the seal is next used it will cause an explosion and kill the king. / [No pronunciation needed]

564 通 tōng pass through

Radical 辶
10 strokes

road 辶 (26a) + explosion 𠂔 (564a) = pass through 通

This has a range of other meanings including “connect”, “know”, “expert”, “common” and “whole”.

通过 (106) tōngguò to pass through; as a result of 通知 (490) tōngzhī to notify; a notice

[交通 (380) jiāotōng traffic, transportation]

辶 𠂔 𠂔 𠂔 𠂔 𠂔 𠂔 𠂔 𠂔 通

When the road was blocked (in a landslide) they used an explosion to clear it so that traffic could pass through. / The giant used his tongs to help remove the rubble.

565 痛 tòng to ache

Radical 疒
12 strokes

illness 疒 (510b) + explosion 𠂔 (564a) = ache 痛

痛快 (403) tòngkuai overjoyed

[痛苦 (218) tòngkǔ painful, tortuous]

丶	㇀	疒	𠂔	𠂔	𠂔	𠂔	𠂔	𠂔	𠂔

“Doctor, the illness I had before the explosion is gone but now I ache all over.” / “My dwarf assistant will use special tongs to remove the shrapnel, and then you’ll be fine,” replied the doctor.

566a 𠂔 hardship

𠂔	𠂔
---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

Contrast this with “seal” (560a), and also with “snake” (275a).

566b 𠂔 è “uphill”

cliff 厂 (149) + hardship 𠂔 (566a) = uphill 𠂔

一	厂	𠂔	𠂔
---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--

There are lots of hardships involved in living on a cliff, but it’s ideal for someone who likes an uphill struggle! / [No pronunciation needed]

566 危 wēi danger

Radical 刀

6 strokes

bow 𠂇 (51a) + uphill 阌 (566b) = danger 危

[危机 (10) wēijī crisis]

丿	㇏	㇏	𠂇	阌	危
---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--

“If you bow to someone you meet as you’re going uphill, you run the danger that they will bow too (and will then fall over on top of you). / I once had the full weight of the giant on top of me, because of bowing to him like that.”

567 顾 gù attend to

Radical 页

10 strokes

顧

uphill 阌 (566b) + page 页 (477) = attend to 顾

Notice that the hook on “hardship” (566a) in the left-hand side of this character has turned into a “barb”. You’ve seen this happening before (see for example Character 228) and it will happen again (see 570a).

[顾客 (509) gùkè customer, client]

一	厂	𠂇	阌	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

(A reclusive author lives on a hill) the publisher struggles uphill with the pages of the author's book, so the author can attend to the corrections. / But the dwarf doesn't mind as he is a budding author himself and regards the recluse as his guru.

Test yourself: 马 (44) 角 (418) 开 (85) 而 (151) 牛 (384) 租 (446) 准 (504)
头 (246) 教 (265) 代 (456) 合 (347) 带 (429) 风 (468) 嘴 (420)

568a 𠃊 conceal

Note that this is just one stroke.

568b 亡 wáng perish

lid 亠 (25b) + conceal 𠃊 (568a) = perish 亡

This can mean “to die” or “to lose”.

The mother puts the lid on the box of strawberries to conceal them from her children — but then forgets about them so they perish. (the strawberries, not the children!) / [No pronunciation needed]

568 忙 máng busy

Radical 忄

6 strokes

heart 忄 (339a) + perish 亡 (568b) = busy 忙

Notice that the same two parts (“heart” and “perish”) are used to make up this character and the next one. So the order in which they appear in the two equations (and stories) is important for remembering which is which.

Your heart will perish if you rush around being busy all the time. / The fairy can (magically) see that your arteries are all getting mangled up in there ...

569 忘 wàng forget

Radical 心
7 strokes

perish 亡 (568b) + heart 心 (161) = forget 忘

[忘记 (272) wàngjì forget]

(The king dictates a letter to his mistress) “Perish the thought that my heart will ever forget you.” / His retainer, Wang the dwarf, disapproves as he writes all this down. [This is almost a DIY pronunciation; feel free to improve on it if you can — anything that works is OK!]

570a 胡 “wane”

perish 亡 (568b) + moon 月 (61) = wane 晦

In some typefaces you will see moon here replaced by its other form (266a).

“That perishing moon is on the wane again,” muttered the farmer (who needed the light for his harvesting). / [No pronunciation needed]

570 望 wàng gaze

Radical 王
11 strokes

wane 晦 (570a) + king 王 (60a) = gaze 望

希望 (559) xīwàng hope, wish

The old king’s health was on the wane— all he could do now was to gaze out at his kingdom from his balcony. / Sadly he called for his chancellor Wang the dwarf, to put his affairs in order.

571 雨 yǔ rain

Radical 雨
8 strokes

It’s handy that the character for “rain” needs a “pouring rain” story!

When this appears at the top of other characters, “outer limits” gets compressed into “cover”. remember that the same thing happened for “esteem” (542a).

[雨衣 (437) yǔyī raincoat]

[下雨 (43) xià yǔ rain; to rain]

一	厂	冂	雨	雨	雨	雨	雨
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--

☔ / Picture a wheel left out in the rain: “That Teddy’s useless— he’s always leaving things out in the pouring rain.”

572 雪 xuě snow

Radical 雨
11 strokes

rain 雨 (571) + snout 彡 (267a) = snow 雪

[雪人 (12) xuě rén a snowman]

[下雪 (43) xià xuě to snow]

一	厂	冂	雨	雨	雨	雨	雨	雪	雪
雪

The pig slept, dreaming of rain falling on his snout— but when he woke up it was snow (and everything around was white). / [DIY pronunciation]

573a 彡 hairs

---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

573 参 cān consult

Radical 厶
8 strokes

参

cocoon 厶 (34a) + big 大 (47) + hairs 彡 (573a) = consult 参

参观 (216) cānguān visit (a place)
参加 (325) cānjiā participate, join in 厶 厶 厶 大 大 大 参 参 参

The silkworm farmer finds that his cocoons are growing big hairs, so takes them along to consult the vet. / The giant (working as the vet's assistant) jumps onto a chair saying, "I can't stand creepy crawlies!"

574a 景 jǐng view

sun 日 (6) + capital 京 (239b) = view 景

日 日 日 日 日 日 日 日 日 日
景 景 景 景 景 景 景 景 景 景

They could see the sun glinting on the capital in the distance — they knew that this was the right house for them as soon as they saw this view from the front porch. / [No pronunciation needed]

574 影 yǐng shadow

Radical 彡
15 strokes

view 景 (574a) + hairs 彡 (573a) = shadow 影

From “shadow” come the additional meanings “image”, “photo”, “movie”.

影响 (390) yǐngxiǎng effect; to affect

电影 (159) diànyǐng movie, film

[影子 (17) yǐngzi shadow]

[合影 (347) héyǐng take a group photo]

勹	勹	勹	勹	匚
---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--

They conceal Harry by wrap ping him up in an old cloak, to look like a beggar. / [No pronunciation needed]

575b 曷 “a drink”

sun 日 (6) + beggar 匸 (575a) = a drink 曷

As the sun starts to get higher the beggar is getting desperate for a drink. /
[No pronunciation needed]

575 喝 hē To drink

Radical 口
12 strokes

mouth 口 (5) + a drink 曷 (575b) = to drink 喝

[喝酒 (102) hējiǔ to drink wine/liquor]

[喝汤 (531) hētāng to drink soup]

They leave a drink (imagine a glass of beer) by the mouth of the cave to see if anyone will come out to drink it. / They're hoping to catch sight of the giant who lives there as a hermit.

576 渴 kě thirsty

Radical 氵

water 水 (78a) + a drink 喝 (575b) = thirsty 渴

、	、	、	、	、	、	、	、	、	、

---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--

577 继 jì continue

紕

thread 𠂔 (233a) + cut 𠂔 (577a) = continue 继

(In the clothing factory) When the worker reaches the end of each reel of thread he has to cut it off and continue straight away with a new reel. / The dwarf supervisor has to check each G-string which has such a join in it.

578 世 shì world

Radical 一
5 strokes

This also means “life”, “generation” or “era”.

You may like to think of this as “conceal” (568a) plus “twenty” (425a).

[世纪 (273) shìjì century]

[去世 (86) qùshì pass away]

/ After the round the world cycle ride, only one wheel had lasted the whole trip and this “world wheel” is now on display in the town hall, together with a photo of the dwarf with the “golden shallot” being presented to him by the French president.

585 死 sǐ die

Radical 歹
6 strokes

evil 歹 (584a) + spoon 匕 (206a) = die 死

Note that the first stroke of “evil” extends over the “spoon”. You might like to think of this character as having three parts — “one”, “evening” and “spoon”.

“If you eat from this evil spoon you will die,” said the priest. / Teddy said, “I’ll stick to my salami then — you don’t need a spoon for that.”

586a 𠂔 “gimlet”

knife 刀 (72) + cow 牛 (384) = gimlet 𠂔

Chapter 33

Yet another chapter where we can further exploit the building blocks we already have, without needing to introduce any more.

629a 𠬞 cry out mouth 口 (5) + mouth 口 (5) = cry out 𠬞

With two mouths to feed in the nest, they must each cry out to get fed (or else the other one will get all the food). / [No pronunciation needed]

629 哭 kū weep

Radical 犬
10 strokes

cry out 𠬞 (629a) + dog 犬 (238a) = weep 哭

The child cried out as her dog was hit by a passing car, and sat weeping at the side of the road. / The giant, who was passing by in his cool new coupe, stopped to give them a lift to the vet.

630 器 qì utensil

Radical 口
16 strokes

weep 哭 (629) + cry out 呌 (629a) = utensil 器

机器 (10) jīqì machine

1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10
哭	哭	哭	哭	哭	哭

In the kitchen the Chef is weeping, crying out and throwing his utensils about in despair. / He's lost the "Best Restaurant" competition, and reckons that the dwarf, his main rival, cheated in order to win.

631a 品 pǐn goods

Radical 立
11 strokes

stand 立 (177) + early 早 (633) = badge 章

文章 (25) wénzhāng essay, article

"If you stand there early you will get a badge. / You'll know the giant is coming with the badges when you hear them jangling together."

635 草 cǎo straw

Radical 艹
9 strokes

grass 艹 (218a) + early 早 (633) = straw 草

If you cut the grass early in the morning it will make the best straw. / Teddy decides to watch, declaring, "I'm too stout to help with cutting grass."

[草地 (54) cǎodì lawn]

[草原 (536) cǎoyuán steppe, pasture]

636 包 bāo parcel

Radical 勹
5 strokes

wrap 勹 (23a) + snake 巳 (275a) = parcel 包

面包 (313) miànbāo bread
[钱包 (610) qiánbāo purse, wallet]
[包子 (17) bāozi steamed bun]
[书包 (176) shūbāo school bag]

丿	勹	勹	勹	包
---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--

(Before the birthday party) They wrap up the multicolored toy snake to make a long thin parcel. / The giant has to bow down low to pick it up before he sets off to deliver it.

637 饱 bǎo replete

Radical 饣
8 strokes

飽

food 饣 (288a) + parcel 包 (636) = replete 饱

This means “full”, “satisfied” or “to eat one’s fill”.

丿	勹	勹	勹	饣	饣	饣	饣	饣
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--

(At the birthday party) The food and parcels look so colorful on the table. The children eat quickly until they are all replete. / The birthday boy then opens the first parcel, and out jumps Teddy, who then gives a deep bow.

638 抱 bào embrace

Radical 扌

一	丨	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌	扌
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

The latecomer to the birthday party has the parcel in her hand when the birthday boy opens the door, and they hug in a fond embrace. / The dwarf butler tactfully stays bowing until the embrace is over.

639 跑 pǎo run

Radical 足
12 strokes

foot 足 (280) + parcel 包 (636) = run 跑

跑步 (378) pǎobù jogging
[跑道 (145) pǎodào runway]

一	丨	口	尸	尸	尸	尸	尸	尸	尸	尸	尸
跑	跑

In the crowded airport he doesn't see the parcel until his foot hits it (and there's the sound of breaking glass) — he decides to run away before anyone sees him. / But Teddy is curious and looks inside, sneezes, and gets covered in fine white powder from the parcel.

640a 囧 “porthole”

skylight 囧 (389a) + eight 八 (20) = porthole 囧

Again in this character you will sometimes see the legs curl (so that they look like “boy” rather than “eight”).

The octopus is trying to squeeze through a skylight. “This should be easy — I’ve got through many a porthole,” he says. / [No pronunciation needed]

640 商 shāng trade

Radical 亠
11 strokes

stand 立 (177) + porthole 囧 (640a) = trade 商

Once again (see Characters 197, 295) the final stroke of “stand” has merged into the character below.

商店 (186) shāngdiàn shop, store
[商业 (395) shāngyè commerce, business]
[商场 (530) shāngchǎng shopping mall]
[商人 (12) shāngrén businessman]

Imagine standing, looking out through a porthole as your ship comes into port, and seeing all the possibilities for trade. / But when you get ashore, the giant sitting on the quayside advises, “I’d set up in Shanghai if I were you.”

641a 佰 bǎi “$100 check” person 亻 (13a) + hundred 百 (40) = $100 check 佰

This is the form of “100” used on checks, banknotes, etc. to prevent alterations.

丿	亻	亻	亻	佰	佰	佰
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--

Harry buys a pet centipede with a hundred legs and has to write out a $100 check. (At a dollar a leg, it gets quite expensive, he muses). / [No pronunciation needed]

641 宿 sù stay overnight

Radical 宀
11 strokes

house 宀 (91a) + $100 check 佰 (641a) = stay overnight 宿

[食宿 (287) shísù board and lodging]

宀	宀	宀	宀	宀	宀	宀	宿	宿
宿

At the manor house they write a $100 check to stay overnight. / They’ve arrived just in time for the evening meal — the dwarf head chef is just dishing out the soup.

642a 予 yǔ bestow

seal 冂 (560a) + nail 丁 (81b) = bestow 予

Notice that the first stroke of “nail” has a hook on it (a sign that we’re cheating slightly again!)

If the proclamation with the king’s seal is nailed to your door, this bestows special status on your house. / [No pronunciation needed]

642 预 yù in advance

Radical 页
10 strokes

预

bestow 予 (642a) + page 页 (477) = in advance 预

[预备 (548) yùbèi prepare, get ready]

☔ The authors of this book bestowed a sample page on their publisher in advance, to show them the design. / The dwarf sub-editor said it was useless, and threw the manuscript out the window into the pouring rain!

643 舍 shè shed

Radical 人
8 strokes

捨

tent 人 (19b) + dry 干 (124) + mouth 口 (5) = shed 舍

宿舍 (641) sùshè hostel, dormitory

ノ	人	厶	厶	干	干	舍	舍
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--

The explorer pitches his tent on the dry ground by the mouth of the cave — and only then spots a shed nearby. / A dwarf sherpa lives there (who will act as his guide — for a fee of course).

644 舒 shū spread out

Radical 人
12 strokes

shed 舍 (643) + bestow 予 (642a) = spread out 舒

舒服 (563) shūfu comfortable

ノ	人	厶	厶	干	干	舍	舍	舒	舒
舒	舒

The duke bestows a shed on the cobbler so that he has space to spread out his patterns on the floor. / He's started making shoes for the giant so he needs lots of space.

645 兴 xìng (xīng) excited

Radical 八
6 strokes

興

haul up 𠂔 (388a) + eight 八 (20) = excited 兴

高兴 (481) gāoxìng happy, delighted

→ 𠂔 𠂔 𠂔 予 矛

The fishermen haul up the octopus into their boat — they get very excited at this rare catch (which will fetch a good price). / On the shore they sell it to a dwarf fishmonger — but the octopus revives and escapes, throwing up shingle everywhere as he makes a dash for the sea.

646a 矛 máo spear

bestow 𠂔 (642a) + slide 𠂔 (34b) = spear 矛

This is easily confused with “bestow” (Character 642a) so it seems best to draw attention to the difference by adding “slide” (even though “slide” is not usually joined to anything).

→ 𠂔 𠂔 𠂔 予 矛

(Imagine the king playing on the children's slide — wheel!) The king decides to bestow the royal warrant on the slide by scratching his initials on it with his bodyguard's spear. / [No pronunciation needed]

646b 𣀔 stab

spear 矛 (646a) + porthole 𣀓 (640a) = stab 𣀔

𣀓	𣀓	𣀓	𣀓	𣀓	𣀓	𣀓	𣀓	𣀓	𣀓
𣀔	𣀔

The Viking poked his spear through the porthole to stab the surprised guard. / [No pronunciation needed]

646 橘 jú tangerine

Radical 木
16 strokes

tree 木 (10a) + stab 𣀔 (646b) = tangerine 橘

Time for some more “pouring rain” stories — we have collected together the five remaining characters with pronunciation “ju”.

橘子 (17) júzi tangerine

一	十	才	木	𣀓	𣀓	𣀓	𣀓	𣀓	𣀓
橘	橘	橘	橘	橘	橘

☔ A party game: all stand around the tree, and the first one to stab a tangerine is the winner. / The fairy takes the juice outside into the pouring rain, to dilute it.

647 桔 jú tangerine

Radical 木
10 strokes

tree 木 (10a) + auspicious 吉 (538a) = tangerine 桔

This is simply an alternative character (to the previous one) for tangerine.

桔子 (17) júzi tangerine

一	十	才	木	本	杜	桔	桔
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

☔ In the palace grounds there is a tree, from which, on a certain auspicious day, you are allowed to pick a tangerine to eat. / The fairy takes the juice outside into the pouring rain, to dilute it.

648 举 jǔ to raise

Radical 丿
9 strokes

舉

excited 兴 (645) + criminal 𠂔 (130a) = raise 举

[举行 (81) jǔxíng to hold (meeting etc)]

、	“	”	一	兴	兴	兴	兴	举	举
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

☔ The criminal is excited as he raises his head carefully out of the prison escape tunnel he has dug. / Teddy runs up in the pouring rain, shouting, “I’ve got you some juice!” (and almost gives the game away).

649 句 jù sentence

Radical 勹
5 strokes

mouth 口 (5) + wrap 勹 (23a) = sentence 句

句子 (17) jùzi sentence (of text)

、	勹	勹	句	句
---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--

☔ They are fed up of his grumbling, so wrap something round his mouth before he can speak another sentence. / But the dwarf is a judo expert and escapes, running out into the pouring rain.

650 局 jú office

Radical 尸
7 strokes

corpse 尸 (268a) + sentence 句 (649) = office 局

Notice that “sentence” here is fused onto “corpse”. An alternative breakdown for this character might be “corpse” plus “blade” plus “mouth”.

邮局 (621) yóujú post office
[局长 (172) júzhǎng bureau chief]

尸	局	局	局	局	局	局	局	局	局
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

☔ The corpse has a sentence written on his hand: “Look in the manager’s office.” / The fairy (finding a wet judo outfit) says, “Whoever did this was a judo expert who has been out in the pouring rain.”

651 够 gòu enough

Radical 夕
11 strokes

够

sentence 句 (649) + many 多 (69) = enough 够

能够 (206) nénggòu can, be able to

够	够	够	够	够	够	够	够	够	够
够	够	够	够	够	够	够	够	够	够

The politician had so many sentences in his speech that everyone had soon had enough (too much, in fact). / The dwarf (never one to suffer fools gladly) gets up and walks out, saying, “Blow this, I’m off to the go-kart track.”

652a 付 fù pay person 亻 (13a) + inch 寸 (104a) = pay 付

ノ	イ	仁	付	付
---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--

(At the fairground ride) Harry was an inch too tall, so had to pay the adult fare. / [No pronunciation needed]

652 附 fù near to

Radical 阝
7 strokes

mound 阝 (96a) + pay 付 (652a) = near to 附

附近 (241) fùjìn nearby

㇀	㇁	㇂	㇃	㇄	附	附
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--

To see the burial mound properly, you have to pay to be allowed near to it.
/ The dwarf doesn’t allow food inside, except for the foo yong (which he himself sells).

653 府 fǔ government

Radical 广
8 strokes shelter 广 (170) + pay 付 (652a) = government 府

政府 (190) zhèngfǔ government

广 广 广 广 广 广 广 广

A shelter has been set up where people go to pay their taxes to the government. / Teddy tries to pay with foo yong.

654a 凶 xiōng terrible shears 乂 (25a) + pit 凵 (626a) = terrible 凶

乂 乂 凶 凶 凶 凶 凶 凶 凶 凶

If you've dropped your shears down the pit, that's terrible. (You'll have to use scissors to cut the grass now!) / [No pronunciation needed]

654b 囟 brain

lid 亠 (25b) + terrible 凶 (654a) = brain 囟

亠 亠 亠 亠 亠 亠 亠 亠

“Removing this lid will have terrible consequences,” says the notice on a cask containing a brain (as it will die if exposed to the air). / [No

pronunciation needed]

654c 𠂔 rump

cocoon 𤝵 (34a) + outer limits 𠂔 (160a) = rump 𠂔

丨	冂	肉	肉
---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--

In the outer limits caterpillars make their cocoons on the rump of cattle (to keep them warm). / [No pronunciation needed]

654 离 lí distant from

Radical 𠂔
10 strokes

離

brain 𠂔 (654b) + rump 𠂔 (654c) = distant from 离

This also means “to depart”.

离开 (85) líkāi to depart
[离别 (79) líbié bid farewell]

丶	一	方	文	言	商	商	离	离	离
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

“The brain and rump of a giraffe are very distant from each other.” / To demonstrate, the fairy pokes the giraffe in the rump with her wand. “Now let’s see how long he takes to leap up in surprise.”

655a 禺 monkey

field 田 (156a) + rump 肉 (654c) = monkey 禺

Notice how the vertical stroke carries through into “rump” so that the “cocoon” part of this character gets slightly altered.

Out in the field the cow plonks her rump down — but there’s a squeal and she discovers she’s sat on a monkey (who is now looking rather squashed).
/ [No pronunciation needed]

655 遇 yù encounter

Radical 辶
12 strokes

road 辶 (26a) + monkey 禺 (655a) = encounter 遇

遇到 (74) yùdào encounter

☔ As a rite of passage, each young monkey has to walk along the road near the jungle, where they encounter various tests. / The first test is to sneak past the dwarf playing his ukulele without him noticing — the trick is to do it when it’s pouring with rain.

656 脱 tuō undress

Radical 月
11 strokes

moon 月 (61) + convert 兑 (67b) = undress 脱
--

This character also refers to removing shoes, a hat, etc.

Whenever the moon comes out it converts him into a werewolf. each time he must quickly undress before his clothes get ripped. / The ghostly giant guards his clothes and gives him a toga to wear for the duration.

𠂔 a skirt 	𠂔 target

657a 聿 “write with brush”

We’ve treated this as a basic building block, but if you like you can think of it as “dexterity” plus “two” (or even “dexterity” plus “criminal”) and make up a story accordingly.

657b 𠂔 stride

フ	又
---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

657 建 jiàn build

Radical 又
8 strokes

stride 又 (657b) + write with brush 聿 (657a) = build 建

Like “road” (26a), “stride” is written last, after the fragment it encloses.

建设 (553) jiànshè build, install [建立 (177) jiànlì set up, build]

フ	一	二	三	四	聿	建
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--

On the building site the foreman strides about writing on the ground with a brush, to mark out where they should build the walls. / Two dwarf building inspectors come round to check there'll be enough room for the generator.

658 健 jiàn strong

Radical 亻
10 strokes

person 亻 (13a) + build 建 (657) = strong 健

[健儿 (21) jiàn'ér good athlete]

ノ	亻	仁	仁	仁	仁	仁	律	健	健
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

Harry is helping to build the floors of the new building, which have to be strong enough to take a lot of weight. / The two dwarf building inspectors will try to find fault with the floor of the generator room.

659a 廷 tíng court stride 𨔵 (657b) + ninth 壬 (551a) = court 廷

This is a feudal court rather than a modern judicial court.

一	二	千	壬	廷	廷
---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--

The youngest member of the royal family strides arrogantly about the palace with a baseball bat — although he is only ninth in line to the throne. everyone is waiting for him to get his comeuppance when he gets to court. / [No pronunciation needed]

659 庭 tíng courtyard

Radical 广
9 strokes shelter 广 (170) + court 廷 (659a) = courtyard 庭

家庭 (109) jiāting family

一	二	广	户	庌	庌	庌	庭	庭
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--

They need a shelter to house the overflowing court, so build one over the courtyard outside. / The fairy administers tincture (to ward off colds for those stuck outside in the cold weather).

660 挺 tǐng exceptionally

Radical 扌
9 strokes

hand 扌 (152a) + court 廷 (659a) = exceptionally 挺

This is often just used to mean “very”; it also means “erect”, “straight” or “firm”.

[挺立 (177) tǐnglì to stand upright; to stand firm]

The head guard holds up his hand to stop people entering the court— only exceptionally does he let someone in. / Teddy gets in because he is carrying the king’s ointment (and is likely to spill it if he has to hold it for long).

661a 肖 xiào resemble

692 春 chūn springtime

Radical 日
9 strokes

held in the hands 夫 (692a) + sun 日 (6) = springtime 春

春天 (76) chūntiān spring
[春节 (560) Chūn Jié Spring Festival (Chinese New Year)]

(There is a statue of the king in the palace gardens) When the sun gets high enough so that it looks as if the statue is holding the sun in his hands, that's the official start of spring. / [DIY pronunciation].

693 秋 qiū autumn

Radical 禾
9 strokes

grain 禾 (126a) + fire 火 (181) = autumn 秋

秋天 (76) qiūtiān autumn, fall

They set fire to the stubble in the grain field, as they do every autumn. / Down-wind, the two giants are choking on the smoke (as they rush to take in their washing before it gets dirty in the smoke).

694 夏 xià summer

Radical 夂
10 strokes

thumb tack 一 (40a) + eye 目 (93) + pursue 夂 (506a) = summer 夏

夏天 (76) xiàtiān summer

A legendary old fish, who has never been caught, has old fishhooks in his leathery skin, and even a thumb tack near his eye. The local fishermen pursue it all summer. / But in the end they resort to hiring the two dwarves with their shark fishing boat (one drives the boat and the other handles the lines on deck).

695a “splinter”

This is a short stroke which crosses another stroke, as in the following character.

695b 丸 wán pellet

nine 九 (38) + splinter 丿 (695a) = pellet 丸

丿	九	丸
---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

A youngster is sitting idly in the sun carving splinters off an old baseball, until what is left is just a pellet. / [No pronunciation needed]

695c 执 zhí hold on to 執

hand 扌 (152a) + pellet 丸 (695b) = hold on to 执

This also means “to manage”, in the sense of managing a business.

一	扌	扌	扌	扌	执	执
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--

The dead man had a pellet in his hand— he was holding on to it as if it was important. (perhaps it’s a clue to a homicide!) / [No pronunciation needed]

695 热 rè hot

Radical 灬
10 strokes

熱

hold on to 执 (695c) + fire 火 (185a) = hot 热

You will see from the following list of compounds that this can literally mean “hot” (high temperature) or, more metaphorically, “warm” to give meanings such as “ardent”.

热情 (339) rèqíng enthusiasm

[热点 (185) rèdiǎn hot-spot]

[热爱 (365) rè'ài to love deeply]

[热带 (429) rèdài the Tropics]

[热心 (161) rèxīn enthusiastic; warm-hearted]

一 扌 扌 扌 执 执 执 执 热 热

You hold on to the metal poker while stoking the fire, but it becomes so hot that you drop it. / The dwarf growls, “Rrr ... rug! You’ve burnt a hole in my rr..rug!”

696a 享 xiǎng enjoy tall 高 (239a) + child 子 (17) = enjoy 享

一 一 一 一 言 享 享

You would think that the tall child would enjoy basketball (but no — it’s no challenge and he gets bored). / [No pronunciation needed]

696b 孰 cooked

enjoy 享 (696a) + pellet 丸 (695b) = cooked 孰

丶	一	㇏	㇏	㇏	㇏	㇏	㇏	㇏	孰

The bamboo he has to supervise tonight is going to be made into a basket. / This is for the fairy to keep her magic lantern in (so that it won't turn the grass blue any more!)

702a 畱 plenty

piled up 畱 (150b) + field 田 (156a) = plenty 畱

Picture potatoes piled up in the corner of every field— there's plenty for everyone. / [No pronunciation needed]

702 福 fú blessing

Radical 礻
13 strokes

sign 礻 (433a) + plenty 畀 (702a) = blessing 福

Along with characters for “peace” and “longevity”, this is a very popular Chinese character, seen on many necklaces and earrings in the West. It has the general sense of “good fortune”.

幸福 (308) xìngfú happy, fortunate

A farmer points out to his son a sign of plenty in the sky, “It is a blessing on us. / The fairy is promising that we will always have food to eat.”

713a 东 To select

一	乚	𠂇	𠂇	东
---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--

Compare this with 东 (“east”, Character 319). the difference is the small horizontal line at the beginning of the third stroke.

The traditional forms of “east” and “select” are also very similar. the traditional form of “east” (see the entry for Character 319) can be thought of as the “sun” rising behind a “tree”. the traditional form of 713a can be seen in the following two entries — here the “sun” looks more like “windowpane” (671b).

713 炼 liàn smelt

Radical 火

Chapter 37

As you review the characters you learned way back in the earliest chapters, there will be many which you instantly recognize, and others where you have to think for a while, and recall the story in your head. Of course, there are also bound to be many characters which you have tried to learn a few times but keep forgetting. Often the thing to do with these is to go back to the story and really explore the setting, imagine yourself as part of the action and embellish the story with more details. If all else fails, make a list of the characters you find particularly problematic, and teach them to somebody else (one of your fellow students, or even a friend who is not studying Chinese). Teaching something is a very effective way of learning it yourself — we've both been teachers so we know!

719a 斥 chī drive out axe 斤 (240) + splinter 丿 (695a) = drive out 斥

In some typefaces the splinter doesn't reach all the way across the vertical stroke.

The gang use an axe to chop splinters out of the door of anyone they want to drive out of the neighborhood. / No pronunciation needed

719 诉 sù tell

(During the Apollo missions) At daybreak the moon had set in the USA, so they had to swap to an Australian ground station which was now facing the moon. / The fairy had produced chowder to wake the Australians up.

724a 卓 zhuō eminent fortune teller 卜 (42a) + early 早 (633) = eminent 卓

This is easy to confuse with “daybreak” (723a).

The fortune teller got to her tent early that day, to prepare for an eminent client (picture her polishing up her crystal ball, etc.) / [No pronunciation needed]

724 掉 diào to drop

Radical 扌

Radical 木
10 strokes

fortune teller 卜 (42a) + sun 日 (6) + tree 木 (10a) = table 桌

桌子 (17) zhuōzi table, desk

The fortune teller sets up her stall out of the sun under the shade of the tree, and puts her crystal ball on a table. / The ghostly giant watches over her to dissuade anyone from making a joke of her.

726a 耳 “earring”

knee 𠂔 (166a) + ear 耳 (88a) = earring 𦍋

The bit on top of the “ear” is sometimes written like “nail” instead of “knee”, although it’s actually derived from “work” (Character 147)!

“Put your ear here on my knee and I will fix your earring for you.” / [No pronunciation needed]

726 敢 gǎn dare

Radical 攴
11 strokes

earring 耳 (726a) + tap 攴 (190a) = dare 敢

732a 采 cǎi; cài pick

採

claw 爪 (365b) + tree 木 (10a) = pick 采

Try not to confuse this with “claw marks” (734a) — at first glance they look almost identical.

With her claw -like hand the old crone reaches up to the tree to pick the apple. / [No pronunciation needed]

732 彩 cǎi colorful

Radical 彡
11 strokes

pick 采 (732a) + hairs 彡 (573a) = colorful 彩

精彩 (341) jīngcǎi thrilling, exciting
[彩色 (417) cǎisè multi-colored]

The hairdresser picks out individual hairs to highlight, producing a colorful effect. / Teddy wants a whole new style!

733 菜 cài vegetable

Radical 艹
11 strokes

grass 艹 (218a) + pick 采 (732a) = vegetable 菜

[白菜 (22) báicài cabbage]

[做菜 (210) zuòcài to cook]

[饭菜 (332) fàncài food]

[点菜 (185) diǎncài to choose (items from a menu)]

The greengrocer knows the best grass to pick, and uses it to display his vegetables to best effect. / But the dwarf owner always dictates the exact style of the display.

734a 采 “claw marks”

beret 一 (89a) + rice 米 (334) = claw marks 采

This is very easy to confuse with “pick” (732a).

The palaeontologist fills his beret with rice and pours it into the fossilized claw marks to measure their volume — each claw mark takes up a whole beret-full of rice. (So it must have been quite a dinosaur!) / [No pronunciation needed]

734b 番 fān a time

claw marks 采 (734a) + field 田 (156a) = a time 番

Picture huge claw marks scarring the field. They have tried time after time to catch the beast which makes them, without success. / [No pronunciation needed]

734 播 bō to sow

Radical 扌

738a 余 yú surplus

餘

tent 人 (19b) + work 工 (147) + small 小 (50) = surplus 余

We have cheated a bit here by breaking the lower part of this character into “work” and “small”.

ノ 人 人 人 人 余 余

The tent they are working in is very small, so you can tell which one it is by the pile of surplus equipment outside. / [No pronunciation needed]

738 除 chú to remove

Radical 阝

mound 阝 (96a) + surplus 余 (738a) = remove 除

除了 (66) chúle except, besides

The mound of surplus office equipment has grown so big that the council has told them to remove it. / The fairy wants to choose some things for herself first.

739 茶 chá tea

Radical 艹
9 strokes

grass 艹 (218a) + tent 人 (19b) + tree 木 (10a) = tea 茶

Note that the bottom part of this character is not “surplus” (738a). Also note that the last two strokes of “tree” have become slightly detached.

[红茶 (233) hóngchá black tea]

[茶杯 (11) chábēi tea cup]

They set up their tent on the grass underneath the tree and the first thing they do is make some tea. / The fairy relaxes, saying, “This is a nice cup of cha.”

740a 奇 qí; jī strange big 大 (47) + may 可 (140) = strange 奇

The extra big may pole is for the most senior students; it’s really strange to see them dancing round it like small children. / [No pronunciation needed]

740 骑 qí ride

Radical 马
11 strokes

horse 马 (44) + strange 奇 (740a) = ride 骑

This character means to ride an animal (or bicycle) which you sit astride. riding in a bus or car is different (see 783a).

[骑马 (44) qí mǎ to ride a horse]

That horse may be very strange -looking, but it's wonderful to ride. / The fairy streaks along on it, explaining, "That's because it's half cheetah."

741 椅 yǐ chair

Radical 木
12 strokes

tree 木 (10a) + strange 奇 (740a) = chair 椅

椅子 (17) yǐzi chair

The tree is a strange shape and part of it has been carved into a chair. / Picture Teddy sitting on it, munching his chocolate Easter egg.

742 寄 jì send

“The house is really strange,” she pleads, “please don’t send me there. /
The dwarf who lives there is weird, even if he is a genius.”

Chapter 38

We hope that you've enjoyed writing the characters at the same time as you've been learning them. Writing Chinese characters can be fun and satisfying, even if you have no interest in being particularly artistic about it. If you are interested in calligraphy, however, Chinese characters are a fascinating subject and there are many books available. To do it properly you will need a writing brush and thick black ink. The Chinese themselves hold calligraphy in high esteem, ranking it alongside, if not above, painting, sculpture and poetry.

743a 昔 xī the old days

bacon rashers 𩚑 (625a) + sun 日 (6) = the old days 昔

“Leave the bacon rashers out in the sun— that’s how we used to cook in the old days, my boy.” / [No pronunciation needed]

743 錯 cuò mistake

Radical 钅
13 strokes

752a 隶 lì subordinate

隸

dexterity 𠂇 (312a) + water 水 (523) = subordinate 隶

This is cheating slightly as the bottom half isn’t really “water” (see also Character 524); the same applies to Character 753 below.

𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇
---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--

767a 囟 cōng [chimney]

a drop 丶 (22a) + enclosed 口 (24a) + pursue 𠂔 (506a) = chimney 囟

In some typefaces “pursue” gets changed to a leaned-over version of “criminal”.

At the zoo, the mother monkey feels a drop of rain so pursues the baby monkey round the enclosure— but the baby monkey climbs up the chimney out of reach. / [No pronunciation needed]

767 窗 chuāng window

Radical 穴

773a 𦇧 hood

outer limits 𠂔 (160a) + two 二 (2) = hood 𦇧

When it is part of a composite character, this is easily mistaken for “sun” (日, Character 6) unless you look closely.

When flying his biplane in the outer limits the pilot is so cold he has to put his coat hood up (over his flying helmet). / [No pronunciation needed]

773 冒 mào risk

Radical 𦇧
9 strokes

hood 𦇧 (773a) + eye 目 (93) = risk 冒

Another major meaning is “emit” or “give off”.

感冒 (556) gǎnmào catch a cold

The thief is so well-known that even with his hood pulled down over his eyes he runs the risk of people recognizing him. / The dwarf security guard spots him anyway, as he recognizes the thief's mouth.

774 帽 mào hat

Radical 巾
12 strokes

towel 巾 (427a) + risk 冒 (773) = hat 帽

帽子 (17) màozi hat, cap

(At the boxing match) One trainer threw a towel into the ring, as there was a risk his boxer could get badly injured — the other trainer threw his hat in the air triumphantly. / Unfortunately the hat hit the dwarf referee in the mouth (which started another fight).

775a 辰 chén heavenly body

cliff 厂 (149) + one 一 (1) + a skirt 𠂔 (665a) = heavenly body 辰

The unicorn, standing on the cliff, sees a skirt round one of the stars. “It’s a planet with rings, or some other heavenly body.” / [No pronunciation needed]

775 晨 chén morning

Radical 日
11 strokes

sun 日 (6) + heavenly body 辰 (775a) = morning 晨

早晨 (633) zǎochén (early) morning

When the sun rises and the other heavenly bodies dim, it is morning. /
[DIY pronunciation]

776a 𠂇 pierced

Writing this one often catches people out! It is derived from “mother” (Character 127) and has the same “sloping” appearance. Contrast the stroke order with, for example, the stroke order for “field” (156a). the stroke-count for this fragment is 4, not 5!

776b 贯 guàn pierce

貫

pierced 𠂇 (776a) + sea shell 贝 (477a) = pierce 贯

Finding a pierced sea shell on the beach, she thinks, “I could pierce lots of shells and string them together to make necklaces!” / [No pronunciation needed]

776 惯 guàn habitual

Radical 忄
11 strokes

惯

heart 忄 (339a) + pierce 贯 (776b) = habitual 惯

习惯 (735) xíguàn habit; be used to 丶	丶	丨	丨	丨	丨	丨	丨	丨	丨

惯

Cupid flies around the neighborhood piercing the hearts of the habitual criminals (in the hope that this will reform them). / The ghostly dwarf, who protects the neighborhood, sits on a gantry, directing who to shoot at.

777a 尺 chǐ ruler

丿	㇏	尸	尺
---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--

This time the ruler is not a monarch, but a ruler for measuring things. a “meter”, the unit of length, is 公尺 (gōngchǐ) although a more colloquial character for meter is 米 (mǐ, Character 334).

777 迟 chí late

Radical 辶

---	---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--

Some small boys are playing with a ruler on the road (measuring out a hopscotch pitch) — and they’re going to be late for school. / The fairy chases them off, and wipes the chalk marks off the road with a chapati.

778a 戈 high up

一	弋	戈
---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--	--

Keep this distinct in your mind from 弋 (“pile of earth”, 455a) and from 戈 (“dagger”, 32a).

778b 尧 yáo Chieftain Yao

堯

high up 戈 (778a) + pedestal 兀 (301a) = Chieftain Yao 尧

Yao was a legendary emperor who lived a little over 4000 years ago.

一	乚	𠂇	𠂇	𠂇	尧
---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--

---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

The villagers lit a fire beside Chieftain Yao's statue, but it got out of hand and started to burn the statue and its surroundings. / Luckily the giant had been taking a shower, and directed the spray at the fire to put it out.

779a 𠂇 to swallow

一	二	𠂇	𠂇
---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--	--	--

Compare this with “tooth” (780a below). The distinguishing feature is that “to swallow” has a hook.

779b 既 jì since stubborn 艮 (281a) + swallow 𠬞 (779a) = since 既

One of the strokes of “stubborn” is missing here (see 281a). This is the form which “stubborn” takes whenever there is something else to its right in a composite character.

The elderly man stubbornly refused to swallow the pills, saying, “Since I’ve never swallowed a pill, I’m not going to start now.” / [No pronunciation needed]

779 概 gài summary

Radical 木
13 strokes

tree 木 (10a) + since 既 (779b) = summary 概

大概 (47) dàgài probably; more or less

“The tree has been there since ancient times, and must be saved,” the summary stated (although there was a huge report with all the details). / The dwarf will be in charge of attaching guy ropes to support the tree.

780a 牙 yá tooth

Compare this with “swallow” (779a above).

780 呀 yā (ya) oh!

Radical 口
7 strokes

mouth 口 (5) + tooth 牙 (780a) = oh! 呀

At the end of a phrase, this character can take a neutral tone (see Character 143 for another example of this happening).

The dentist looks into the mouth, sees a colored tooth and cries, “Oh!” /
The giant had tied colored yarn round the tooth when he was trying to pull it out.

781 穿 chuān penetrate

Radical 穴
9 strokes

hole 穴 (616a) + tooth 牙 (780a) = penetrate 穿

There was a hole in the tooth so the dentist had to penetrate it with his drill. / The ghostly giant had protected his friend's root channel until he got to the dentist. (We know you normally say “root canal”, but work with us here!)

782b 戔 wound

earth 土 (54a) + dagger 戈 (32a) = wound 戔

Another “fused” character — “earth” and “dagger” share a stroke. Compare this with “I” (Character 32) all the way back in Chapter 3.

一	十	土	戈	戔	戔
---	---	---	---	---	---	--	--	--	--

783a 乘 chéng ride

grain 禾 (126a) + north 北 (317) = ride 乘

An unusual combination, where “north” is fitted around “grain” rather than just being placed above, below, or to the side of it.

This is to ride in a vehicle (remember that in Character 740 we had another sort of “ride”, which involved sitting astride something, like a horse or a bicycle).

We have given you stories all the way through this book rather than stopping halfway through and saying “the rest is up to you”. however, for other characters beyond those included in this book, you will have to make up your own stories. how do you do this? Let’s expand on what we said at the end of Chapter 7.

Suppose you are trying to make a story for “hand” + “sigh” = “throw”, for example. as a starting point, take the parts of the character (in this case, “hand” and “sigh”) and see what your mind comes up with. the best bet is often to use the first thing that comes into your head as the basis for the story, because that is what you will naturally think of again, the next time you see “hand” plus “sigh”.

Next, link the target (“throw”) to “hand” and “sigh”, with a story in which these three parts interact — they should not just be “standing around” in the story.

Make a list of soundwords for the required syllable and pick one which gives the most memorable story (you can easily list all the ones we used in this book by looking up the characters with that pronunciation in the pronunciation index). With some syllables you will find there are lots of soundwords to choose from, but for others you have very little choice, and you just have to do the best you can. again, make the second part of the story interact with the first part if you can.

The best stories are those that are vivid — try to bring in details which catch your interest, that are quirky and fun. Make the story unusual, by making it out of the ordinary, or rude: at the very least, exaggerate things. a good thing to do at times is to bring in your other senses (imagine sounds or smells). Finally, try to personalize your story: include people, places and things that have particular significance for you personally. (this is one aspect we couldn’t include in our stories — for obvious reasons — the best we could do was sometimes to suggest that you yourself are in the story). You don’t have to do all of these things for every story; these are just ways of “spicing up” a story to make it more memorable. the only rule is, if it works (in that you remember the character) then it’s fine!

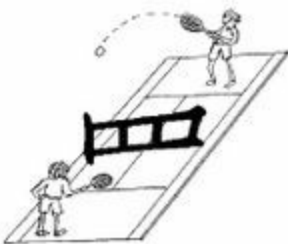

Creating memorable stories is not easy (although you will improve with practice), but time spent thinking up a really memorable story will be repaid many times over by all the rote-learning you don’t have to do!

Chapter 40

This is the last page of character pictures in this book. We hope you've found them useful (and that you had as much fun with them as we did!) — but, as we have said before, if a different character picture works better for you, then use that instead. Sometimes, if you look at a basic building block for a few moments, often letting your mind wander a bit, the shape will suddenly suggest something which is familiar to you in your own life, which can form the basis for a “personal” character picture.

If you decide to go on and learn more characters, then it would be a good idea to practice making up character pictures for yourself. Don't worry if they aren't “perfect” in some way — the very fact that you have dreamed them up yourself will mean that they are memorable to you— which is all you need.

So this is it — the final chapter!

APPENDIX: Soundwords

Soundwords are the words we use in the stories to indicate the pronunciation of a character. The first syllable of the English soundword has a similar sound to the pronunciation of the Chinese character. So for the pronunciation ma we could use the soundwords market or marbles because ma is pronounced somewhat like the “mar” sound at the start of these words. The tables in this appendix give you all the pronunciations of Chinese characters you need for HSK Level A, along with an example of a soundword that could be used for each of them. (For a full explanation of how we use soundwords, along with archetypes to represent tones, see the User Guide). Again we must stress that the purpose of the soundwords is to help you remember the pronunciations of each of the 800 characters; it is not to mimic exactly the sounds of Chinese.

Here is a very brief description of the sounds of Chinese — as mentioned in the User Guide, you really need to hear Chinese spoken to appreciate fully the correct sounds.

Consonants

b, p, m, f, d, t, n, l, s, r, g, k, h are pronounced similarly to how they are in English.

(Although b and d are more like “soft” versions of p and t respectively).

z is pronounced like the “ds” in adds and c like the “ts” in tsunami.

Because English does not use these sounds at the beginning of words, we had to cheat with the soundwords here (it was that or declare them “DIY” which we have tried to avoid whenever possible). If you look at Table 1 you’ll see that for “z” we simply use soundwords beginning with “z”, and for “c” we use soundwords beginning with “st” (not “ts”).

zh, ch, sh are pronounced like the “j” in jar, the “ch” in chart, and the “sh” in shark respectively.

j, q, x are pronounced like the “j” in jeep, the “ch” in cheat, and the “sh” in sheet respectively.

The difference between zh & j, ch & q and sh & x is that for zh, ch and sh the tongue is curled back against the roof of the mouth to say the sound, and for j, q and x the tip of the tongue is pressed against the lower teeth. For soundwords we just use English words beginning with j, ch and sh regardless. Happily this does not cause any confusion because, as you will see in the tables, if zh has an entry in a particular vowel column then j does not and vice versa. The same applies to the other two pairs (ch & q and sh & x).

Vowels

a, o, e, u are pronounced as indicated by the soundwords in the relevant columns in Table 1.

(But when “e” has neutral tone, it is pronounced closer to the “u” in huh).

i can be pronounced in two ways:

After most consonants it is pronounced like the “i” in Fiji. But after some consonants (z, c, s, zh, ch, sh, r; see the final column in Table 1) it is as if the “i” is hardly there at all. It seems to just modify the consonant sound slightly. The closest we could get to this sound is to use English soundwords where the first syllable is unstressed, so for zhi we use jacuzzi. (For this reason, in all other soundwords we have chosen, the stress is on the first syllable).

ū is pronounced like “ū” in German or the “u” in the French tu.

Say “oo”, and then, keeping your lips in the same position, try and say “ee”. Rather confusingly the two dots are only written above the u for nū and lū (to distinguish them from nu and lu), otherwise they are omitted (see the ū column of Table 1). “Pouring rain” is used in the stories to indicate ū pronunciations (see Character 15).

When vowels are on their own (with no consonant in front of them), the pinyin system sometimes inserts a “y” or a “w” before the vowel. So instead of “i”, “u” and “ū” we write yi, wu and yu respectively (see the final row of the tables).

In the tables you will see that we have listed the consonants down the left-hand side and the vowels along the top. The table entries give the pinyin spelling and an example soundword for each combination of consonant and vowel we need. For some combinations there is no reasonable soundword in English — these are the “DIY pronunciations” and they are indicated in the table by “DIY”. Blanks indicate combinations not used in HSK Level A.

Remember that it is the sound of the soundword that is important, not its English spelling. So the soundwords herb, shirt and lurk all appear in the “e” column of Table 1 because they all have the same vowel sound even though their English spellings use three different vowels.

Table 1 shows the simplest Chinese syllables, which are just a consonant followed by a vowel.

Table 2 shows how the syllables which have two vowels are spelled and pronounced.

Table 3 shows how the endings “-n” or “-ng” can be added to some of the syllables in Tables 1 and 2. Note that it is still the first syllable of the soundword that indicates the pronunciation. Notice too that the English ending “nk” contains an “ng” sound, so the stories for the Chinese syllable bang might use either of the English soundwords bang or bank. For this reason, the soundwords we use for the syllables in Tables 1 and 2 never contain these “n” or “ng” sounds.

The vowel “i” sometimes gets inserted between the consonant and another vowel. When this happens the “i” takes on a “y” sound and is called an on-glide. The syllables that arise this way are shown in Table 4. Unfortunately English has virtually no words that begin with the necessary sounds for these pronunciations. Instead of making them all “DIY” pronunciations we use soundwords in the stories that ignore the i on-glide but we introduce two of the appropriate archetype instead of one (as explained following the entry for Character 38). For example when there are two teddies in a story with the soundword lava then you know that the character is pronounced lia, not la (and with tone 3).

An oddity is that “ian” is pronounced like “yen”, not “yan”, and hence bian uses bench as a soundword (with a double archetype). But “iang” is pronounced “yang”, and so liang uses language as a soundword (with a double archetype).

Just to confuse things, if there is no initial consonant, the “i” is written “y”. Thus “ia” on its own is written “ya”, and so on. For this reason, and because there are English words available for these sounds, we simply use soundwords beginning with “y” and there is no need for double archetypes.

Table 4: I on-glides (double archetype)

-	ya yard	yao yowl	ye yeti	you yoga	yan yen	yang yankee	yong young

Using a device, such as having two archetypes, underlines the fact that the role of the soundwords is not to teach pronunciation, but to work as a memory system. Although we match the pronunciations approximately (close enough so that you remember the pinyin spelling for the character), we also deliberately use additional tricks and coding devices (such as having two archetypes, a ghostly archetype, or a pouring rain story). These devices help with the memory system but it does mean that the soundword on its own, taken in isolation and forgetting the device, is not an exact guide to the Chinese pronunciation.

The “u” on-glide is similar to the “i” on-glide except that the “u” takes on a “w” sound and is signalled in the stories by a ghostly archetype (as explained in the comment following Character 59).

If there is no initial consonant, the “u” is written “w”. Thus “ua” on its own is written “wa”, and so on. In this case we simply use soundwords beginning with “w” (and there is no need for the archetype to be ghostly).

Table 5: u on-glides (ghostly archetype)

Table 6 shows the syllables where “ü” acts as an on-glide. There are only a few such syllables, which are mostly treated as “DIY” pronunciations, and in these the two dots on the ü are not actually written (so that “jüe” is written “jue”, etc.). If there is no consonant, the “ü” is written “yu”, thus “üe” is written “yue”.

MEANING INDEX

This index gives the serial numbers of all the characters and fragments used in this book.

As in the main text, we use the following two conventions. A meaning in “quotes” is simply our name for a fragment which might not have a true meaning of its own. A meaning in [brackets] means that you are only ever likely to see this character in a compound which has this meaning.

FAST FINDER INDEX

Use this index when you see a character and want to find it in this book, but you don't know its pronunciation or meaning. This index uses the appearance of the character directly, and how the character splits up into parts. This is the same method as used in the book "Chinese Character Fast Finder" (see the inside back cover), which enables you to find any of the 3,000 characters in all four HSK Levels A — D rapidly, without knowing their meanings, pronunciations, radicals or stroke-counts.

Most characters split left-right or top-bottom into parts:

很 →  想 →

Take the simpler component (or the one you recognize) and look up the character in the appropriate section, depending on whether this part is the left, right, top or bottom part of the character:

很 →  → Look for 彳 in the  section

想 →  → Look for 忄 in the  section

You will find all such characters (for example, all the characters which have 彳 as the left-hand side) listed together, and by scanning along the characters listed you should be able to quickly find the one you want.

For some characters, instead of a left-right or top-bottom split, one part of the character encloses another on two or more sides. For such cases, use the enclosing part to look up the character:

层 →  → Look in the  section

周 →  → Look in the  section

Finally, many simple characters are "indivisible" — they do not break down into parts:

本 →  → Look in the  section

So this index is similar to a radical index, except that you don't need to count strokes. You also don't need to decide which part is the "proper" radical. For example:

和 appears under 禾 in the 禾 section, and also under 讠 in the 讠 section.

If the character is printed in gray, you were not really looking for it in the right place: never mind, at least you have found it! Taking a close look at these gray characters will help you to distinguish between similar and easily-confused characters and fragments.

The numbers given refer to serial numbers in the book.

LEARNING CHINESE CHARACTERS

At last – an effective and enjoyable way to learn Chinese characters! This book helps students to learn and remember both the meanings and the pronunciations of 800 characters. This otherwise daunting task is made easier by the use of techniques based on the psychology of learning and memory. Key principles include the use of visual imagery, the visualization of short “stories,” and the systematic building up of more complicated characters from basic building blocks.

Although Learning Chinese Characters is primarily a book for serious learners of Chinese, it can be used by anyone with an interest in Chinese characters, without any prior knowledge of Chinese. It can be used alongside (or after, or even before) a course in the Chinese language.

Key Features:

- Specially designed pictures and stories are used in a structured way to make the learning process more enjoyable and effective, reducing the need for rote learning to the absolute minimum.
- The emphasis throughout is on learning and remembering the meanings and pronunciations of the characters. Tips are also included on learning techniques and how to avoid common problems.
- Characters are introduced in a logical sequence, which also gives priority to learning the most common characters first.
- Modern simplified characters are used, with pronunciations given in pinyin. Key information is given for each character, including radical, stroke-count, traditional form, compounds, and guidance on writing the character.

This is a practical guide with a clear, concise and appealing layout, and it is well-indexed with easy look-up methods. The 800 characters and 1,033 compounds specified for the original HSK Level A proficiency test are covered.
